No Remedy at Law.—It would doubtless be more correct to reverse the proposition above stated and say that taxes are not debts because an action of debt does not lie; since the conclusion that a tax is not a debt is evidently a corollary from the fact that the remedy by an action of debt has never been recognized as a proper one. However this may be, the denial of the right to maintain debt quite effectually closed the courts of common law to actions for the collection of taxes; for taxes are not contractual obligations. Wason v. Bielow, 11 Colo. App. 120; Peirce v. Boston, 3 Met. (Mass.) 520; Gatling v. Carteret County, 92 N. Car. 536, 53 Am. Rep. 432; Webster v. Neither is case a proper remedy, though this has been suggested. Franklin v. Warwick, etc., Water Co., (R. I. 1902) 52 Atl. Rep. 988. It is perhaps somewhat surprising that indebitatus assumpsit was not generally recognized as a proper remedy for the collection of taxes, since, from an early day, this form of action has been available for the recovery of statutory, official, and customary duties other than taxes. London v. Gorry, 2 Lev. 174, 1 Vent. 298, 3 Keb. 677. Freem. In Jonesboro v. McKee, 2 Yerg. that taxes are debts.¹ Numerous statutory enactments especially authorizing actions for the recovery of taxes have also contributed much to impair what appears to have been originally the true doctrine, and there is perhaps no common-law jurisdiction in which an action in some form and under some conditions may not now be maintained both against the person and property for the recovery of taxes.² It is thus seen that there is some direct conflict among the American courts on the question whether an action can, in the absence of statute, be maintained to enforce the payment of taxes. Even in those states, however, where the statutory mode of collection is not exclusive, it is recognized that the remedy specially provided is the normal one and consequently should be exhausted before recourse is had to an action.³ Such a provision is also found in many of the statutes authorizing a personal action at law,⁴ and the exhaustion of personality is everywhere required before a proceeding shall be brought against land.⁵

(d) Constitutionality of Summary Statutory Remedies. — In passing upon the validity of statutory proceedings for the collection of taxes the courts recognize the necessity that taxes should be promptly paid,⁶ and in determining the bearing of constitutional provisions to the effect that property shall not be taken without due process of law the courts have borne in mind that such provisions were framed in full view of an immemorial practice committing all questions pertaining to the collection of revenue to the legislative department and without any intention radically to change such practice. It is accordingly held that, with us, as in England,⁷ the person may be seized and property summarily taken and sold for the payment of taxes under legislative authority.

It has, however, in some cases been suggested that the remedy by action should not be unnecessarily restricted, and that, where more convenient and effective, an action can be maintained without previous recourse to the statutory remedy. In other words, the remedies are concurrent. Anniston v. Southern R. Co., 112 Ala. 557; Greer v. Covington, 83 Ky. 410; Lord v. Parker, 83 Me. 532; Nalle v. Austin, (Tex. Civ. App. 1897) 42 S. W. Rep. 780.

Story*, 26 Mont. 517: "The laws of this state provide a summary method of seizure and sale of personal property and sale of realty for enforcing payment of taxes, and also authorize the bringing of a common-law action for the recovery of a personal judgment against the delinquent taxpayer. Neither of these remedies is dependent on the other for its existence or efficiency. The proceeding by action is a remedy in addition only to the others named. But for the statute creating it, the remedy would not exist. The law-making power, having authority to prescribe or withhold altogether a particular remedy, may, in its enactment, invest it with such restrictions as will, in its judgment, best subserve the public good."

In other words, summary statutory process for the collection of taxes constitutes due process of law under the American constitutions.¹ Other constitutional questions involved in the various plans adopted for the collection of taxes are viewed from the same standpoint,² and, in general, no mode of collection will be held unconstitutional provided the taxpayer be given notice and a chance to be heard³ at some stage of the proceedings,⁴ and this, even though the method prescribed should appear to be harsh, unreasonable, and arbitrary.⁵ But, of course, a statute which would wholly take away the right of the taxpayer to appeal to the courts would be of no effect.⁶

(e) Construction of Statutes Authorising Summary Proceedings. — However indulgent the courts may be towards statutory provisions for the collection of taxes on the question of constitutionality, this liberality disappears at once when they come to interpret the particular statutes and to pass upon the validity of acts done in putting them into effect. Thus, while it is true that, in determining

Such proceedings have from necessity been exercised by governments during all times, by summary methods of procedure, and to require the deliberation and delay incidental to judicial proceedings in the exercise and enforcement of the taxing power by government would seriously cripple its efficiency, if not destroy its existence. These methods were in exercise and existence long before the adoption of the constitution, and have never been supposed to be affected thereby." See also the opinion of Handy, J., in *Griffin v. what is required, the statute should receive a reasonable construction,¹ no principle is better established than that which requires strict performance of all the acts required to be done.² This is particularly true of steps which are intended for the protection of the taxpayer.³ In other words, it is often said, statutes providing a summary method for the collection of taxes, being in derogation of common law, must be closely followed.⁴ The rule requiring strict conformity to the statutory provisions applies to the officers and servants of the state⁵ as well as to those acting under municipal authority,⁶ and where the steps taken are such as should appear of record, or among the papers per-

(1) Limitations. — In accordance with the general rule that limitations do not run against the state,⁴ the right to enforce the collection of taxes will not be barred by the effluxion of time,⁵ unless the statute expressly so provides,⁶ nor will a statute barring the recovery of debts have this effect,⁷ since, as we have already seen, taxes are not generally treated as debts. Nor will a limitation on proceedings against real property affect the right to recover personal taxes.⁸ But a statute limiting the time within which suits may be brought upon liabilities created by statute includes taxes, both real and personal.⁹

payment of all taxes,¹ and likewise personal taxes may be fixed on realty;² but it is usually required that personalty be exhausted before resorting to the realty.³ Distress or a statutory remedy in the nature of distress is the usual process against personalty.⁴

(b) Authority to Distrain or Seize — Special Warrant. — We have already seen that the collector's general warrant constitutes his authority for proceeding to the compulsory collection of taxes.⁵ When the collector himself acts directly under the authority of such general warrant, nothing more is necessary for his protection, since it would be superfluous for him to issue a special warrant to himself.⁶ In most cases, however, it is impracticable for the official collector to serve as his own executive officer. Special process is therefore issued by him against delinquent taxpayers, and placed in the hands of the sheriff or constable or such other deputies as are authorized by law to levy execution and make distraint.⁷ Such special process is sometimes called a tax execution.⁸ The expression commonly used, however, is distress warrant or, simply, warrant, a term which is applied to all statutory process in the nature of distress to enforce the payment of taxes. As we have already stated, the special warrant is legal process,⁹ and the principles applicable to it are substantially the same as those governing legal process in general.¹⁰ Like the general warrant it always has the force and effect of an execution so far as authorizing the seizure of property;¹¹ but it has been held not to be an execution under a statute regulating the fees to be charged in levying executions.¹² It must, of course, be issued in conformity with the statute,¹³

9. Legal Process. — Nashville v. Pearl, 11 Humph. (Tenn.) 249.

Need Not Run in the Name of the State. — The cases which hold that tax warrants are not process in the sense that they are required to run in the name of the state are, in most instances, cases involving general warrants. But the language used is broad enough to include both classes of warrants. Certainly neither the general nor special warrant is judicial process, since it does not issue in judicial proceedings, and, inasmuch as the warrant is purely a statutory creature, the courts are governed by the local statutes in deciding whether the special warrant should run in the name of the commonwealth or not. See Haley v. Elliott, 16 Colo. 159; Scarritt v. Chapman, 11 Ill. 443; Curry v. Hinman, 11 Ill. 420; Nashville v. Pearl, 11 Humph. (Tenn.) 249. See also supra, this section, 3. b. (2) Nature.

The Duty to Issue the Warrant is usually imposed upon assessors, treasurers, or other and directed to one authorized to execute it,¹ otherwise it will be void.² The warrant can be issued only after the taxpayer to be distrained has become delinquent.³ Irregularities which do not affect the rights of the taxpayer, and accidental informalities, defects, and omissions do not render the warrant invalid.⁴ Thus, it has been held that the absence of a seal⁵ or an obvious error in the date of the warrant,⁶ or the fact that the collector's signature is printed instead of written,⁷ or the fact that the different items of tax are not separated, where a correct total is stated,⁸ is not material. So, where the clerk of a court designated himself "clerk of said county" in a warrant issued by him,⁹ it has been upheld.¹⁰ On the other hand, a failure to specify the kind¹¹ of taxes and their amount,¹² or the insertion of instructions to the levying officer to levy upon lands and tenements as well as goods and chattels, or to collect excessive fees,¹³ avoids the warrant. So, the omission to state any officers connected with the administration of the tax laws. Sprague v. Bailey, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 436; People v. Halsey, 53 Barb. (N. Y.) 547.

Collector Authorized to Issue. — Mullins v. Jersey City, 61 N. J. L. 135.

The Right to Issue the Warrant must be expressly conferred. Butler v. Nevin, 88 Ill. 575. And a treasurer of a town who is also collector cannot issue his warrant until the tax has been levied by the town authorities. Waite v. Hyde Park Lumber Co., 65 Vt. 103.

Mandamus. — The duty to issue the warrant is ministerial. Henry v. Sargeant, 13 N. H. 321; C. N. Nelson Lumber Co. v. McKinnon, 61 Minn. 219, and mandamus will lie, in a proper case, to compel the performance of this duty; People v. Halsey, 53 Barb. (N. Y.) 547, affirmed 37 N. Y. 344. See generally the title MANDAMUS, vol. 19, p. 709.

A tax execution issued to "all and singular the sheriffs of the state," instead of the sheriff of the particular county where the land lies, is not bad where the sheriff of such county actually executed it. Bedgood v. McLain, 89 Ga. 793.

Official Title. — Where a warrant is directed to the officer who is to execute it, as such officer, the omission of his name will not invalidate it. Byars v. Curry, 75 Ga. 515; Chandler v. Spear, 22 Vt. 388; Wilson v. Seavey, 38 Vt. 221.

(a) What Property May Be Seized. — As both the general and special warrant for the collection of taxes has the force of an execution, it is the duty of the officer to whom the warrant is issued to levy the same upon such chattels of the delinquent as are distrainable, making a previous demand for the payment of the tax if such be required.² It should be observed that property may be exempt both from taxation³ and from levy and sale upon a common execution⁴ and yet be distrainable by statute for unpaid taxes.⁵ But where the statute authorizes the tax collector, in general terms, to levy on personal property, it is construed to mean such property as is generally subject to levy and sale under execution,⁶ the subject being, of course, entirely dependent upon the statutes of each state.⁷ It is not necessary that the property distrained should be that upon which the tax accrued,⁸ nor is it material that the property levied on was purchased subsequent to the assessment of taxes,⁹ nor that, at the time of the seizure, it is out of the owner's possession.¹⁰ It is generally true that only such property as is owned by the delinquent taxpayer can be subjected to the payment of taxes owing by him,¹¹ and a levy upon the goods of one, to pay the taxes of another, is void;¹² but, where a lien for taxes is fixed upon chattels, it follows them into the hands of a purchaser and they may be distrained for the tax accruing against the previous owner.¹³

Taking Tenant's Property for Landlord's Taxes. — It is not unusual to permit the property of a tenant to be seized for taxes owing by the landlord in respect to the premises occupied by the tenant,¹ and possession alone is sometimes made conclusive of title in favor of the distraining officer.²

Taxes Assessed Against Agents. — Taxes are often assessed against agents and persons in control of property for others. Such persons are usually given a lien on the property for their reimbursement.³ Where this is done it has been held that the tax becomes a personal charge against the person to whom it is assessed,⁴ and it would seem that he might in such case be personally distrained therefor. But it has been held that the property of a bank cannot be seized to enforce the payment of a tax on the shares of the stockholders which the bank is by statute required to pay for them.⁵ The same is true of distillers who have been made agents of the state in collecting taxes on liquor not owned by them.⁶

It Is Settled that Property Affected with a Public Use cannot be distrained. The wharves of a city,⁷ and such property of a gas company as is necessary to operate it,⁸ as well as the tools and fuel used by a railroad company in operating the road,⁹ come within this principle. The same rule applies to personalty held by a receiver by virtue of his appointment,¹⁰ and generally to all property in the custody of the law.¹¹ But coal stored by a railroad company for its future use¹² and liquor dispensaries operated under the authority of state laws are not exempt from distress.¹³

(a) Levy and Return. — The formalities attending seizure and sale are governed by principles which hardly differ from those applicable to other similar legal process such as attachment and execution.¹ The official at whose instance a distress warrant is issued has the right to control it and may withdraw it before levy.² The statutory provisions as to the time and mode³ of levy and sale⁴ as well as those concerning the property on which the process is to be levied⁵ must be followed, and any substantial deviation from requirements made for the benefit of the taxpayer will render the seizure invalid.⁶ The levying officer should exercise a sound discretion as to the property seized, and should select such articles as will best facilitate the satisfaction of the tax with the least hardship and inconvenience to the taxpayer.⁷ But a sale cannot be temporarily enjoined merely because the market is unfavorable.⁸

Actual Custody and Control of the Property by the Collector or his agent is necessary to make the distress valid,⁹ at least as against third persons.¹⁰ The moment seizure is made, the possession of the owner ceases, and the property comes into the custody of the levying officer.¹¹

Amount of Property. — The collector should, if practicable, distrain no more of the delinquent property than is sufficient to pay the tax.¹²

Effect of Levy. — As in case of ordinary executions, a sufficient levy is prima facie satisfaction of the tax,¹³ and a grossly excessive levy will render the seizure void.¹⁴ Where more property than is necessary to make the tax has been seized, the sale should cease when enough has been sold to satisfy the tax.¹⁵

Duty to Make Money After Levy — Return. — Having once seized property, the collector must make his money. In the absence of statute¹⁶ he has no authority to accept a bond to secure the tax or for the forthcoming of the goods, and such a bond is void,¹ it being contrary to public policy that the collection of revenue should be thus postponed. A return of the distress warrant should be made by the officer who serves it, as in case of other process; but if no particular form is prescribed an informal return is sufficient.²

(3) Arrest and Imprisonment. — The obligation to pay taxes is sometimes reinforced by statutory provisions making the failure to pay a misdemeanor, or providing for summary arrest and imprisonment of the delinquent. As a means of enforcing the payment of taxes on property this method has never been widely adopted in the United States, being limited to a few of the New England states, and is, perhaps, even there becoming obsolete.³ But fine and imprisonment are still used in various parts of the country to enforce the payment of poll taxes,⁴ and it is not unusual to make it a misdemeanor to engage in an occupation classed as a privilege without paying the license fee or tax.⁵ There can, of course, from the constitutional standpoint, be no question as to the validity of a statute authorizing arrest and imprisonment for a failure to pay taxes;⁶ nor, where this remedy is permitted, will it be taken away by a statute abolishing imprisonment for debt.⁷ The right to seize the person of the delinquent must, of course, be expressly conferred by statute.⁸ It can be exercised only by the particular person authorized to commit delinquents,⁹ and such person can act only upon a warrant in every respect legal.¹⁰

The Exhaustion of Personalty is usually required before resorting to the remedy of arrest and imprisonment.¹¹ But to get the benefit of such provision the contrary has been held in Illinois,¹ and a few decisions apparently supporting the view taken by this court are found elsewhere.²

Only Official Acts Privileged. — It should be observed that only the official act of the collector is thus privileged. The property taken is not vested in him if the tax be unlawful. Hence, though he cannot sue in trespass,³ the party aggrieved can maintain detinue or replevin to recover the property wrongfully taken,⁴ unless such remedies are denied by statute.⁵

Not Liable for Taxes Paid under Protest. — In most states provisions are made for the recovery of illegal taxes paid under protest. Such an action is properly brought against the beneficiary of the tax, and the collector is not suable,⁶ unless, as has been held, he still retains the money in his own hands.⁷

(2) Unauthorized Acts. — For damage resulting from acts not in conformity with the authority conferred by his process, the collector is personally liable to the party aggrieved.⁸ He must not levy too soon,⁹ nor hold the property too long before selling,¹⁰ nor sell in a place different from that specified by law,¹¹ nor make an excessive levy or sale.¹² The collector is bound to accept lawful money in payment of taxes and such other medium as the taxing authorities permit,¹³ or are bound by law,¹⁴ or contract,¹⁵ to receive; and if, after the tender of such, the collector proceeds he will be liable for the seizure,¹⁶ although he is prohibited from receiving the particular funds by an unconstitutional statute.¹⁷ An abuse of the authority granted by law done subsequent to the seizure makes the officer liable as trespasser ab initio,¹⁸ as where he sells personalty at a sacrifice within two hours after seizure and without any notice to the public. Likewise, if he collects taxes from one in no way liable,¹ or demands and receives more than his list calls for,² he must refund, and the fact that the money may still be in the hands of his deputy,³ or has already been turned over to the local authorities,⁴ constitutes no defense.

b. DUTIES AND LIABILITY TO THE PUBLIC—(1) Duty to Collect—Negligence.—Unless the taxes should be remitted by competent authority,⁵ the collector must proceed to the timely collection of all taxes properly assessed and certified to him,⁶ provided, of course, the warrant, general or special, under which he is expected to act is sufficiently regular to afford protection.⁷ If so, he should obey its mandate.⁸ In collecting the tax he must exercise due diligence, and he is liable for all taxes lost by reason of his negligence.⁹ Even where the tax is in part illegal he should collect to the extent of the valid tax if it can be separated.¹⁰ So he is liable for taxes for which he has receipted without receiving payment.¹¹ He is, of course, not liable for taxes which it is not his duty to collect,¹ nor where he is enjoined from collecting,² nor where the tax reaches the right destination even though it goes through an improper channel;³ and before he can be held for a failure to collect it must appear that he was the proper person to make the collection.⁴

(2) Duty to Keep and Account — (a) Safekeeping. — The collector must safely keep all funds received in his official capacity.⁵ Like the treasurer, he is, by the weight of American authority, treated either as a debtor for the moneys received by him,⁶ or as an insurer,⁷ or is held absolutely liable on grounds of public policy, taken in connection with the terms of his contract,⁸ or by virtue of the effect of statutes.⁹ Hence he is not considered a mere common-law bailee,¹⁰ and will not be excused where the money is lost by the embezzlement of a deputy¹¹ over whose appointment he has no control,¹² nor where it is stolen or taken by robbery without negligence on his part,¹³ nor where it is lost by fire.¹⁴ Compulsion of the public enemy,¹⁵ and overruling necessity,¹⁶ do, however, exonerate the officer.

Relaxation of Rule. — Some of the late American cases show a tendency to relax the rule of strict liability above indicated.¹⁷ Thus, statutory expressions, Special Bailees. — "Still they are nothing but bailees. To call them anything else, when they are expressly forbidden to touch or use the public money except as directed, would be an abuse of terms. But they are special bailees, subject to special obligations. It is evident that the ordinary law of bailment cannot be invoked to determine the degree of their responsibility. This is placed on a new basis. To the extent of the amount of their official bonds, it is fixed by special contract; and the policy of the law as to their general responsibility for amounts not covered by such bonds may be fairly presumed to be the same." U. S. v. Thomas, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 347.

Quasi-Bailee. — The collector is a bailee, or occupies a position analogous to that of a bailee, his liability as such being made greater than that of the ordinary bailee on grounds of public policy. State v. Houston, 78 Ala. 576, 56 Am. Rep. 59.

often put into bonds, such as "keep and pay over according to law,"¹ "faithfully keep the public money,"² and "faithfully discharge the duties of the office,"³ have been taken as sufficient ground for a more lenient doctrine. In England it is held that the custodian of funds is substantially a bailee.⁴

(b) Accounting — aa. EXTENT OF LIABILITY. — The collector must pay over all funds which officially come into his hands, or those of his deputy,⁵ to the proper authorities,⁶ and in the time⁷ and manner prescribed by law.⁸ He is sometimes required by statute to turn over the identical funds collected.⁹ For money actually collected¹⁰ as well as for interest and penalties¹¹ he is liable both personally and on his bond.¹² So far as his duty to account for moneys received is concerned, it is wholly immaterial that the tax collected by him may have been unconstitutional,¹³ or otherwise illegal and void;¹⁴ or that it,¹ if the tax is actually paid into the collector's hands, the trust attaches and the right of the taxing authorities to insist upon payment over is perfect.

66. THE ACCOUNTING.—The collector must settle² with the state, county, or other authorities at the time³ and in the manner prescribed by law;⁴ otherwise he will not be discharged,⁵ or will forfeit his commissions,⁶ or may be subjected to a penalty;⁷ since public policy requires that the collector should be strictly held to the performance of his full duty.⁸

Time of Settlement.—In the absence of statute the settlement must be made and money paid over in a reasonable time after collection.⁹ But the collector should, of course, keep the funds in his own hands until some one is clothed with rightful authority to demand and receive the same.¹⁰ If he fails to settle at the proper time,¹¹ or delays payment after the account is taken,¹² he may be charged with interest¹³ and with such penalties as are fixed by law,¹⁴ unless there is no one to whom the payment may properly be made,¹⁵ or unless no

It has been held that the words "account for and pay over," found in a treasurer's bond, do not create two separate duties, namely, to account and to pay over. The accounting is preliminary and part of the duty to pay. This view would hardly be taken had not the common-law action of account, which was based directly on the duty to account, become obsolete in modern times. Franklin v. Kirby, 25 Wis. 498. funds,¹ nothing else will be accepted in settling with the collector.² If he turns over receivable funds, it must appear that the identical funds were taken in payment of taxes,³ since he is not allowed to speculate in office by buying up claims against the state or county.⁴

cc. EFFECT OF SETTLEMENT. — Generally speaking a settlement with the auditing officer is not conclusive,⁵ and errors may be shown⁶ upon a proper proceeding to surcharge and correct it;⁷ but if in all respects regular, it will, in the absence of collusion, fraud, or mistake, be binding on the state or county,⁸ as well as on the collector,⁹ especially if no appeal be taken when such proceeding is available.¹⁰ Nor will a settlement long acquiesced in be opened after receipts are lost.¹¹

c. LIABILITY OF SURETIES ON BOND OF COLLECTOR—(1) In General. — The general doctrines bearing on the liability of sureties on official bonds are elsewhere treated,¹² and consequently only a few principles particularly applicable to sureties on the bond of collectors will be here treated. The rule that the law is to be strictly applied in favor of the sureties on the bond is recognized,¹³ but considerations of public policy embodied in legislation rather than in judicial decisions have somewhat restricted the application of this principle. The amount stated in the bond¹⁴ and the period fixed by law for the term of liability under the bond¹⁵ are two limitations behind which the sureties are, of course, safely intrenched.¹ Inasmuch as liability attaches to the sureties solely by virtue of the terms of the bond, the sureties are entitled to stand upon it,² and are ordinarily responsible for the performance of such duties only as are incident to the office at the time the bond is executed.³ And if the legislature imposes other duties on the collector after the execution of the bond the liability of the sureties will not be enlarged,⁴ unless the language of the bond,⁵ or, a fortiori, the law in force at its date⁶ by a fair and reasonable construction bring the new duties within the scope of the bond. Of course, where the bond is executed subsequent to the passage of an act imposing a new duty the sureties will be liable for its breach,⁷ unless when the new duty is attached a special bond is required to be given for its performance.⁸

(2) Liability on General and Special Bonds.—The general rule is that where a collector is required to perform a duty special in its nature and to give a special bond for its faithful performance, no liability attaches therefor to his general bondsmen⁹ in the absence of an express declaration in the bond or an express statutory provision to the effect that they shall be so liable.¹⁰ Thus, the sureties on the general bond of a collector are not liable dorf, 7 Pa. Super. Ct. 71, 42 W. N. C. (Pa.) 135.

No Period of Time Fixed.—Where by law the bond is conditioned for the payment of the taxes collected under a particular assessment, the time of collection is immaterial, and the sureties are liable for sums collected before the bond is executed. Combs v. Breathitt County, (Ky. 1896) 38 S. W. Rep. 138. See also State v. Baldwin, 14 S. Car. 135.

Election and Qualification of Successor.—Where by law the term of the principal is for a fixed period and "until the election and qualification of his successor," the sureties by the weight of authority are not liable for a defalcation occurring after the term fixed by law is ended but before a successor is qualified. It is the duty of the public authorities to have a successor elected and qualified at the proper time, and they cannot, by suffering the incumbent to hold over, prolong the liability of the sureties beyond the period contemplated in the bond. Peppin v. Cooper, 2 B. & Ald. 431; Leadley v. Evans, 2 Bing. 32, 9 E. C. L. 306; Liverpool Water Works Co. v. Atkinson, 6 East 507; Wilmington v. Horn, 2 Harr. (Del.) 190; State v. Powell, 40 La. Ann. 240, 8 Am. St. Rep. 522; Bigelow v. Bridge, 8 Mass. 275.

There are, however, some well-considered decisions and a number of dicta to the effect that the sureties may be liable, but only for such reasonable time as is proper for the qualification of a successor. State v. Powell, 40 La. Ann. 240, 8 Am. St. Rep. 522; Chelmsford Co. v. Demarest, 7 Gray (Mass.) 1; Dover v. Twombly, 42 N. H. 59; Rahway v. Crowell, 40 N. J. L. 207, 29 Am. Rep. 224.

Matlock*, 1 Dev. L. (12 N. Car.) 214; Crumpler v. Governor, 1 Dev. L. (12 N. Car.) 52; Governor v. Barr, 1 Dev. L. (12 N. Car.) 65.

5. Language of Bond.—The words "in all things faithfully and truly to execute the duties of the office according to law," "faithfully to discharge the duties of the office during his continuance in office," and "the due performance of the duties of his office," have been held sufficiently general to cover duties subsequently imposed by statute, where such duties are germane to those already imposed on the officer. *Bartlett v. 10. Under late statutes in Kentucky, the sheriff, as ex officio collector of taxes, gives a gen-for railroad taxes,¹ or school funds,² especially where the giving of the special bond is considered a condition precedent to the right of the officer to collect such funds at all.³

(3) Liability for Funds Collected—(a) Estoppel of the Sureties.—The bond of a collector nearly always contains a provision to the effect that the collector shall pay over all moneys collected by him.⁴ Under this clause sureties are liable, as we have already seen that the collector himself is liable,⁵ for all moneys which come into his hands by virtue of his office.⁶ They are liable for money in his official possession at the time the bond is given, though collected before that time;⁷ or though it is in his hands as his own successor.⁸ And where money is collected by the officer it is immaterial that he may have acted too soon,⁹ or even without a warrant,¹⁰ or tax list,¹¹ or that his warrant or the tax list may have been irregular,¹² or the assessment itself,¹³ or part of it,¹⁴ illegal or void,¹⁵ the collector and his bondsmen being estopped to deny its validity.¹⁶ Nor is it material that it may have been the duty of another to collect the money,¹⁷ or that the collector himself may have been ineligible to the office,¹⁸ unless the collection of the funds in question was wholly beyond the bounds

eral bond for the faithful performance of all duties, but the county authorities may require an additional bond to cover the county levy. of his authority.¹ It is sufficient that he is a de facto collector.²

(b) Diversion of Fund. — Where the collector himself treats the taxes as paid the sureties will be held though no money is received by him. Thus, if he gives a receipt for taxes in payment of a private debt,³ or diverts a check given for taxes to the payment of county claims,⁴ the sureties are liable.

(c) Misappropriation and Conflicting Liabilities under Different Bonds. — Likewise, it has been held that where funds protected by one bond are used to pay off indebtedness incurred under another bond the sureties whose undertaking covers the misused funds are liable,⁵ and those whose bond is thus satisfied are discharged,⁶ especially where the officer to whom the money is turned over is ignorant of the source from which the money is derived.⁷ But if the treasurer knows of the misappropriation,⁸ or there is ground for equitable contribution or subrogation,⁹ the payment will be applied in exoneration of the bond under which the money was collected. Some courts indeed go so far as to hold, in contravention of the doctrine stated above, that in all cases where a misappropriation is in fact shown, money paid over by a collector will be credited to the bond under which it is collected,¹⁰ it being sufficient, in the opinion of these courts, that the money collected has actually reached the treasury.¹¹ This view, once the prevailing doctrine, has in recent years been greatly weakened.¹²

(4) Liability for All Official Acts. — Sometimes, by virtue of statutes, the liability of the sureties extends to all official acts of the collector, ministerial or judicial, and includes wrongful seizures and sales of property to enforce collection;¹³ but where the bond merely provides for collection and payment over, advertising fees personally due from the collector cannot be recovered in an action on his bond.¹⁴

(5) Indulgence to Collectors. — By the weight of authority mere indulgence to collectors as regards the time of accounting will not release the sureties

although it be granted by legislative act and thus made compulsory on the state officials who are to take action against the collector.¹ But the contrary has been held.² Nor will they be discharged by delay, short of the statutory period, in enforcing the bond.³ The statute begins to run in favor of the sureties from the breach of the bond.⁴

5. Remedies Against Defaulting Collectors — a. SUMMARY REMEDY — (1) In General. — In order to secure promptness on the part of the officer in paying over money collected by him, the public authorities are permitted to pursue a defaulting collector and his sureties by means of summary process. Thus, summary judgment may be obtained against the collector and his sureties on motion or order to show cause,⁵ or an execution, extent, or warrant of distress may be issued against them by the treasurer or other proper officer.⁶ Such remedy is not generally exclusive, and the state may pursue it or proceed by common-law action;⁷ but it has been held, where imprisonment on civil process is permitted, that the use of the latter means of coercion deprives the state of the right subsequently to proceed by action.⁸

Lien of Collector's Bond. — Further to protect the public, the bond of the collector is usually made a lien on the real estate of both principal and sureties.⁹ In a word, it is given the effect of a judgment¹⁰ or mortgage,¹¹ and gives to the state or county a right to priority of payment out of the realty over the general creditors of a collector or surety who is insolvent.¹²

(2) Nature and Validity. — The collector, by accepting the office, and his

sureties by giving the bond under the existing laws providing for such summary remedies, impliedly agree to make them a part of the contract.¹ They are also upheld upon the ground of necessity,² and, like the summary remedies used against the taxpayer,³ they are in harmony with those constitutional provisions which prohibit deprivation of property without process of law and which guarantee the right of trial by jury.⁴

(3) Construction. — As summary process against defaulting collectors is in derogation of common law, a strict compliance with all statutory provisions is required, and no intendment will be made in its favor.⁵ The bond itself must be in statutory form. Otherwise a summary proceeding cannot be based upon it.⁶ If the bond is not sufficiently formal to constitute a statutory bond, but is yet good as a common-law bond, it can be enforced only by common-law remedies.⁷

Summary Process Only While Collector Is in Office. — Summary process, it has been held, lies against the collector only while he remains in office.⁸ Hence it is not maintainable against one who has been ousted on quo warranto proceedings,⁹ nor against the sureties after the principal is dead.¹⁰

Notice of Motion. — Where the procedure is by motion for summary judgment some sort of notice is always required to be given to the collector against whom summary judgment is to be taken. But no particular formality is required as to the contents of the notice or the manner in which it is given.¹¹

Process Must Show Facts. — In general, where the proceeding is by distress or immediate execution against the person or property, the facts which authorize the issuance of the process must appear upon its face,¹ or the officer executing it will become a trespasser.²

Recovery Usually Limited to Taxes Actually Collected. — The recovery on summary motion is usually limited to taxes actually collected,³ together with such penalties as have accrued,⁴ and the state, in order to recover for a negligent failure to collect, is required to proceed by action at common law.⁵ In some states the collector may, however, be summarily held liable for taxes which he has negligently failed to collect. Where this is permitted he can, of course, always show that the warrant under which he was expected to act was defective and gave no authority to enforce payment.⁶

Disposal of Fund. — Money collected from a defaulting collector on summary process issued by a state officer should forthwith be turned over to him, and cannot be detained until the rights of private persons thereto are adjudicated.⁷

b. REMEDY BY CIVIL ACTION — (1) In General. — The duty of the collector to pay over funds collected by him may be enforced by mandamus,⁸ whether parties entitled thereto be public officials or private individuals.⁹ And for moneys collected and not paid over or for a negligent failure to collect, he may be sued individually at common law.¹⁰ If preferred, suit may be brought on the official bond.¹¹

No Jurisdiction in Equity. — As the legal remedies are ample, equity will not entertain a bill against a collector.¹

Necessity of Demand. — Actions against collectors do not materially differ from like actions in other cases. No demand is necessary,² unless required by statute,³ or unless the officer is to be subjected to a penalty;⁴ as, in general, the institution of suit is a sufficient demand and notice.⁵

(2) Who Entitled to Sue. — The right of action against a defaulting collector is usually lodged in the person or persons to whom the money in his hands should be paid.⁶ Sometimes the state's attorney,⁷ or an auditor,⁸ is authorized to sue on his own motion, and, if the proper authorities fail to sue, taxpayers, who are also citizens of the state,⁹ may institute the proper proceedings.

(3) Burden of Proof. — In actions against a collector he is prima facie liable for the full amount of all assessment rolls, lists, and warrants turned over to him,¹⁰ provided they are sufficiently regular to afford protection if he acts under them.¹¹ He must be able to show that he has complied with the full measure of his duty in the effort to collect and has exhausted his authority. Proof of the receipt of money by the collector, and of his subsequent failure to pay it over, is, of course, always sufficient to sustain the action,¹² and the burden of proof is on him to show that he has disposed of the money properly,¹ or such other defense as negatives liability.² But accountants with the state or other taxing authorities are never allowed to set off an independent claim against their indebtedness for collections.³

But of course equitable rights, such as the subrogation of sureties, Livingston v. Anderson, 80 Ga. 175, and the right to enforce a lien to satisfy a judgment, Turner v. Teague, 73 Ala. 554, frequently make it necessary for the court of equity to interpose.

8. Compensation of Collectors — a. IN GENERAL. — The right of a duly authorized collecting officer to be paid for his services, as well as the amount of his compensation and the time and manner of its payment, depends wholly upon the express provisions of law,⁴ and the terms of the statutes must, of course, be substantially complied with.⁵ The power to fix the compensation of the collector is often delegated, expressly or by implication, to local and municipal authorities⁶ who are also sometimes given the discretion to allow additional compensation.⁷ Sometimes the power to fix a reasonable compensation is lodged with the officer to whom the collector must account.⁸ One who accepts the office of collector is bound to fulfil its duties notwithstanding the compensation be inadequate, and such circumstance gives him

5. Harriman Imp. Co. v. McNutt, (Tenn. Ch. 1896) 37 S. W. Rep. 396.

Construction of Statutes. — In interpreting laws governing the allowance of collectors' commissions the courts hold a very even balance, but, in doing as they would be done by, they possibly show some slight disposition to resolve doubts in favor of the allowance of the fees. In a case where the collector's certificates of sale were too prolix it was said that the court would not presume that they had been spun out to increase the cost bill, Hamer v. Weber County, 11 Utah 1. For illustrations of commissioners allowed in doubtful cases, see Waukegan v. Foote, 91 Ill. App. 588; Board of Education v. Ziegenhein, 156 Mo. 313; *State v. no right to recover more.¹ He is on no better ground where no compensation at all is allowed,² for the right to recover on a quantum meruit is not recognized in connection with public service.³

b. COMPENSATION DEPENDENT ON MAKING THE MONEY. — The right of a collector to be paid generally depends on the collection of the tax,⁴ or the performance of proper⁵ and effective service,⁶ and where the collector fails to make the money,⁷ even though he is only prevented from doing so by the withdrawal of a distress warrant at the instance of a state officer,⁸ he will get no commission. So, if land sold for taxes be bid in by the state,⁹ or the distress warrant is returned "no property found,"¹⁰ the collector is entitled to no commission, unless the statutes so provide.¹¹ A collector who exacts excessive fees may incur a forfeiture of his entire compensation,¹² or some other penalty;¹³ and defaulters are entitled to no compensation whatever.¹⁴

c. MODE OF PAYMENT. — The collector sometimes receives a fixed salary;² but he is nearly always paid commissions in gross on the total amount collected.³ In such case he ordinarily retains his commissions,⁴ but such right is dependent upon statute,⁵ and each tax, whether poll, school, state, or county, must bear its own expense,⁶ even though the whole tax be expressly appropriated to a particular purpose.⁷ It is not unusual to add the collector's

1. Said Pardce, J., in Walker County v. Fidelity, etc., Co., 107 Fed. Rep. 854, 47 C. C. A. 15: "On general principles, a defaulting tax collector ought not to be entitled to commissions on the amounts he has collected from taxpayers and failed to pay over to the proper authorities. He has not performed the full work for which the commissions were intended to pay, and he is an unfaithful trustee. The sureties on a defaulting tax collector's bond, who refuse to pay up the defalcation, and compel litigation, ought not to be entitled to credit for the amount of commissions on any sum the tax collector has collected. The public ought not to be compelled to pay the commissions for collecting the taxes, and at the same time be at the expense of litigating with the sureties on the defaulting tax collector's bond to recover the same money."

Mode of Compensation. — Where commissions are paid in gross, taxes derived from different sources and applicable to different purposes are taken in the aggregate in calculating commissions. Thus, in Kentucky, poll, ad valorem, and special taxes are taken together in estimating the commission on county taxes. Montgomery County Ct. v. Chenault, (Ky. 1898) 47 S. W. Rep. 457; Little v. Strow, (Ky. 1902) 66

S. W. Rep. 282; Pence v. Nelson County, 107 Ky. 66; Pendleton County v. McMillan, 104 Ky. 816.

In Nebraska both state and county taxes are lumped in fixing a compensation of the collector of state and county taxes. State v. Cornell, 54 Neb. 647.

In Tennessee, in calculating the commissions of the collector, state and county taxes have been treated as separate. Davidson County v. De Grove, 2 Coldw. (Tenn.) 494.

Collection by Lowest Bidder. — Under Pennsylvania local statutes now repealed, the collection of local taxes has sometimes been let to the lowest bidder. This is merely an incident in choosing the collector, and is not an illustration of farming out the collection of taxes. For various local questions incident to the abolition of this mode of compensating collectors, see Sides v. Lancaster County, 9 Pa. Dist. 609, 17 Lanc. L. Rev. 275; *Ephrata Tp. v. Excessive Retention. — Where the comptroller erroneously permits a collector to retain too much the state may recover the excess. State v. Murphy, 101 Tenn. 515. See also Wilson v. State, 51 Ark. 212. And where too little is retained the authorities should pay the balance due by giving a proper order. Harrison County v. Benson, 83 Ind. 470.

Fees of Attorney. — Attorney who has a lien on taxes recovered for a reasonable fee may retain therefor. Washington County v. Clapp, 83 Minn. 512.

Right of Retention Granted by Legislature Cannot Be Taken Away by a City. — Bloomington v. Calhoun, 86 Ill. App. 491.

In Nevada, by statute, the collector's claim for compensation is prior to the right of the state to the funds collected. Grimes v. Goodell, 3 Nev. 70.

6. Each Tax to Bear Its Own Expense. — Shaver v. Robinson, 59 Ala. 195; State v. Crutchfield, (Tenn. Ch. 1800) 52 S. W. Rep. 335; State v. Murphy, 101 Tenn. 515. See also State v. Drew, 16 Fla. 303; Davidson County v. De Grove, 2 Coldw. (Tenn.) 494.

commissions to the individual assessments and thus collect them with the tax itself from the taxpayer.¹ Where this is done no liability attaches to the state or county for the collector's commission.

XV. TAX SALES — 1. Personal Property — a. NOTICE OF SALE. — Statutory provisions in regard to notice of the time and place of sale must be strictly complied with,² but in determining the sufficiency of the notice in these respects the body of the notice will be construed in its entirety and according to its reasonable import.³

b. CONDUCT OF SALE. — The Property Must Be Sold Openly and to the Highest Bidder, and there must be an opportunity for competitive bidding.⁴

Time of Sale. — Where the officer is required to keep the property a specified time before offering it for sale, the sale is illegal if the full time be not given,⁵ and, likewise, if the sale be made after the expiration of the time limited by statute for the purpose, it is irregular, and the officer becomes a trespasser ab initio.⁶

Adjournment of Sale. — The officer may adjourn the sale in his discretion, his power for that purpose being identical with that of an officer having an execution for collection;⁷ but the adjournment must be to a definite time,

1. Commissions Collectible with the Tax. — School Com'rs v. Wasson, 74 Ind. 134; Seidenstricker v. State, 2 Gill (Md.) 374; McKinnon v. Carlton County, 71 Minn. 481; Chapel v. Ramsey County, 71 Minn. 18; Manhattan R. Co. v. Merges, 167 N. Y. 539, affirming 38 N. Y. App. Div. 120.

But municipalities, in the exercise of a special power to tax, cannot, it has been said, thus increase the burden of the taxpayer. Jonas v. Cincinnati, 18 Ohio 318.

Where Several Tracts of Land Are Sold for Taxes Assessed Against One Individual, or several tracts belonging to different individuals are included in one advertisement, the collector is usually entitled to only one fee, which must be apportioned against the different parcels sold or among the several owners. Aplin v. Baker, 84 Mich. 113; Benton v. Goodale, 66 N. H. 424; Eustis v. Henrietta, 91 Tex. 325; Whatcom County v. Fairhaven Land Co., 7 Wash. 101. But see Bagley v. Shoppach, 47 Ark. 72; State v. Baldwin University, 97 Tenn. 358.

2. Notice of Sale. — Ward v. Carson River Wood Co., 13 Nev. 44.

In Massachusetts it has been held that the notice of sale need not contain the name of the owner of the property, the amount of the tax, or a description of the property. Barnard v. Graves, 13 Met. (Mass.) 85.

Signature of Officer. — A notice of sale issued by a collector who is also a constable is not vitiated by reason of being signed by the officer as "constable" instead of "collector." Barnard v. Graves, 13 Met. (Mass.) 85.

3. Notice Reasonably Construed. — Lyle v. Jacques, 101 Ill. 644; Rawson v. Spencer, 113 Mass. 40. See also Barnard v. Graves, 13 Met. (Mass.) 85.

Vermont Statute. — Under a Vermont statute requiring the officer to have possession of the goods four days before advertising, and to advertise six days before selling, the officer might advertise or sell within a reasonable time after the expiration of the period stated. Clemons v. Lewis, 36 Vt. 674.

4. Sale to Highest Bidder. — Shimer v. Mosher, 39 Hun (N. Y.) 153.

Purchase by Collector — Sale Voidable. — Where at a sale of goods for the nonpayment of taxes the collector becomes the purchaser, the sale is voidable at the instance of the owner of the goods. Pierce v. Benjamin, 14 Pick. (Mass.) 356, 25 Am. Dec. 396.

Inadequacy of Price, alone, will not render a sale invalid. So, where a note and mortgage are sold under a tax warrant, and are purchased by the maker, for a sum less than their face value, the sale will not be disturbed on that account. Irby v. Blain, 31 Kan. 716.

Place of Sale. — In Carville v. Additon, 62 Me. 459, it was held that a town collector may sell distrained property outside the limits of the town in which the property was seized.

5. Time of Sale. — Mason v. Thomas, 36 N. H. 302; Lefavour v. Bartlett, 42 N. H. 555; Clemons v. Lewis, 36 Vt. 674.

Computation of Time. — Carville v. Additon, 62 Me. 459; Souhegan Nail, etc., Factory v. McConihe, 7 N. H. 309; Mason v. Thomas, 36 N. H. 302.

6. Sale After Time Limited. — Noyes v. Haverhill, 11 Cush. (Mass.) 338; Pierce v. Benjamin, 14 Pick. (Mass.) 356, 25 Am. Dec. 396; Brackett v. Vining, 49 Me. 356.

Sale under Second Advertisement. — In Souhegan Nail, etc., Factory v. McConihe, 7 N. H. 309, it was held that where the sale was not made at the time fixed therefor, the officer was guilty of nothing more than nonfeasance, and might sell the goods under a second advertisement for the requisite period.

Sale After Return Day of Writ. — Where a tax execution is levied upon personal property before the return day, the property may be sold after the return day without further process, the officer being possessed of substantially the same power in this respect as sheriffs acting under executions. Blain v. Irby, 25 Kan. 490; Keystone Lumber Co. v. Penderson, 93 Wis. 466.

7. Adjournment. — Spear v. Tilson, 24 Vt. 420.

Amount to Be Sold. — The property should be sold in separate parcels, and only so much should be sold as is required to pay the taxes, charges, and costs.²

The Warrant Is a Full Protection to the collector in so far as he does not exceed the authority conferred therein.³

c. RETURN. — The return of the tax collector is prima facie evidence of the facts stated therein.⁴

2. Lands — a. PREREQUISITES OF RIGHT TO SELL. — (1) Grant of Authority. — There can be no power to sell land summarily to enforce the collection of taxes, except by virtue of an express grant of authority to that effect.⁵

Statutes Strictly Construed. — Statutes purporting to confer the authority to sell, being in derogation of the right of property, must be strictly construed,⁶ and statutes which confer such authority are exclusive in their effect, and their provisions must be strictly followed.⁷

1. Sale Before Time Specified. — Buzzell v. Johnson, 54 Vt. 90. In this case the sale was had at ten A. M. under an adjournment until one P. M. The property brought a fair price, which was applied to the taxes due; the attorney of the tax debtor was present, knew of the mistake, but said nothing. The sale was held to be irregular and void.

Mistake Not Calculated to Mislead. — Where the notice of adjournment erroneously stated the hour to which the sale was adjourned as four A. M. instead of four P. M., and the officer rectified the mistake on the day of the sale, the mistake was so obvious that the sale was not vitiated thereby. Wheelock v. Archer, 26 Vt. 380.

2. Distinct Articles to Be Sold Separately. — Seekins v. Goodale, 61 Me. 400, 14 Am. Rep. 568 [explaining Williamson v. Dow, 32 Me. 559]; Leaton v. Murphy, 78 Mich. 77; Shimer v. Mosher, 39 Hun (N. Y.) 153. See also Denton v. Carroll, 4 N. Y. App. Div. 532.

Property in Bulk to Be Divided. — Ward v. Carson River Wood Co., 13 Nev. 44.

Sale Valid Except as to Excess. — Where the officer after selling enough to pay the sum due sells other personal property distrained, he will not become a trespasser ab initio as to any of the articles sold except such as he has sold in excess of his authority. Seekins v. Goodale, 61 Me. 400, 14 Am. Rep. 568, explaining Williamson v. Dow, 32 Me. 559.

3. Officer Protected by Warrant. — Carville v. Additon, 62 Me. 459; Seekins v. Goodale, 61 Me. 400, 14 Am. Rep. 568.

4. Return Prima Facie Correct. — Barnard v. Graves, 13 Met. (Mass.) 85; Johnson v. Allen, 48 N. H. 235.

In New Hampshire the collector's warrant is not a returnable process. Kelley v. Noyes, 43 N. H. 209; Johnson v. Allen, 48 N. H. 235; Hoitt v. Burnham, 61 N. H. 620.

Failure to Make Return. — In Spear v. Tilson, 24 Vt. 420, it was held that the neglect of the officer to make a return could not render him a trespasser ab initio, and that his acts, in such case, might be shown by parol.

Need Not Specify Day of Sale. — In Picket v. Allen, 10 Conn. 146, the court expressed the opinion that the return need not specify on what day the sale occurred.

5. No Power to Sell Without Express Grant. — Ham v. Miller, 20 Iowa 430; McInerney v. Reed, 23 Iowa 410; Merriam v. Moody, 25 Iowa 163; Dubuque v. Harrison, 34 Iowa 163; Smith v. Ryan, 88 Ky. 636; Brown v. Veazie, 25 Me. 359; Bergen v. Clarkson, 6 N. J. L. 352; Sharp v. Speir, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 76; Quimby v. Wood, 19 R. I. 571. See also Beaty v. Knowler, 4 Pet. (U. S.) 152.

Instances in Which Power Had Been Granted. — See Placerville v. Wilcox, 35 Cal. 21; Jennings v. Rudd, 40 Ga. 49; Haskel v. Burlington, 30 Iowa 232; Augustine v. Jennings, 42 Iowa 198; Ide v. Finneran, 29 Kan. 569; Grant v. Bartholomew, 57 Neb. 673.

Under the Common Law, only goods, chattels, and profits of land could be taken on execution. Johnson v. Hahn, 4 Neb. 139.

The Law in Effect at the Time of Sale Controls the validity of the sale, and not the law which was in effect when the proceeding under which the sale occurred was commenced. Driggers v. Cassidy, 71 Ala. 529.

Power of Sale for "Tax" but Not for "Assessment." — There is a well-defined distinction between a tax and an assessment, and authority to sell land to satisfy taxes does not carry with it the power to sell for an assessment for benefits. Sharp v. Speir, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 76. See also Allen v. Galveston, 51 Tex. 302.

Tax Against Property Distinct from Tax Against Owner. — Power given to a city to sell lands for taxes imposed thereon does not authorize a sale for taxes which by the charter are to be imposed merely upon owners and occupants. Sharp v. Speir, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 76.

Power to Sell Land Sold or Forfeited to the State does not imply authority to sell the land of a delinquent taxpayer in satisfaction of taxes due the state. Prescott v. Payne, 44 La. Ann. 650. See also Leathem, etc., v. Lumber Co., 109 La. 325.

Constitutionality of Grant. — In Texas it has been held that a grant of power to a city to prosecute suits for taxes due it is not in violation of the constitution of the state. Nalle v. Austin, (Tex. Civ. App. 1897) 42 S. W. Rep. 780. See also League v. State, (Tex. Civ. App. 1900) 56 S. W. Rep. 262, affirmed 93 Tex. 553.

6. Strict Construction to Be Given. — Merriam v. Moody, 25 Iowa 163; Cahoon v. Coe, 57 N. H. 556; Sharp v. Speir, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 76.

7. Statutes to Be Strictly Followed. — Thatcher v. Powell, 6 Wheat. (U. S.) 119; Muskegon Lumber Co. v. Brown, 66 Ark. 539; Tolman v.

Inference Cannot Supply the Power of Sale, and accordingly a grant of authority to assess and collect taxes does not carry with it the power to collect by sale.¹ Nor will a grant to a municipal corporation, in its charter, of power to provide by ordinance for the collection of taxes, confer authority to sell and convey land for the nonpayment of taxes.²

Power by Necessary Implication. — Where, however, the grant of power to assess and collect is accompanied by provisions distinctly and unequivocally assuming the existence of the power to sell, it must be regarded as a legislative interpretation recognizing the existence of such power.³

Statutes Not Retroactive. — In the absence of clear legislative intent that statutes granting the power to sell should have a retroactive operation, a prospective operation alone will be given them.⁴

(2) Validity of Tax. — The validity of the tax which is sought to be enforced is essential to the right of sale, and it has frequently been held that an injunction will lie to prevent a sale for invalid taxes.⁵ But it has been held that an injunction is not appropriate where the tax is actually owing,⁶ or an adequate remedy at law is available.⁷

(3) Nonpayment of Tax. — It is, of course, necessary that there be taxes due and unpaid before the right of sale will exist;⁸ and a tender of the

The Control of Congress, by its legislative acts, over the sale of lands for taxes within municipalities under its jurisdiction, is exclusive, and will not be affected by municipal ordinances. Thompson v. Roe, 22 How. (U. S.) 422.

1. Power of Sale Not Inferred from Power to Collect. — Ham v. Miller, 20 Iowa 450; McInerney v. Reed, 23 Iowa 410; Merriam v. Moody, 25 Iowa 163; Dubuque v. Harrison, 34 Iowa 163.

Grant Failing to Include Power of Sale Not Nugatory. — Where a provision in a city charter gives authority to levy and collect taxes, but is silent as to the mode of collection, the provision is not nugatory on this account, but may be given effect by judicial proceedings to collect the tax. McInerney v. Reed, 23 Iowa 410 [citing New York v. Colgate, 12 N. Y. 140]; Merriam v. Moody, 25 Iowa 163; Dubuque v. Harrison, 34 Iowa 163; Paine v. Spratley, 5 Kan. 525.

2. Power to Sell Not Inferred from Power to Provide for Collection. — Merriam v. Moody, 25 Iowa 163; Paine v. Spratley, 5 Kan. 525.

3. Power by Necessary Implication. — St. Louis v. Russell, 9 Mo. 507. In this case the court considered it doubtful whether the provision in the charter of 1841 of the city of St. Louis, which authorized the city to levy and collect taxes on all personal property, conferred power to sell land, but held that another section of the charter, which gives to the city authorities power to direct by ordinance the manner in which property, real or personal, which has been sold for taxes, shall be redeemed, confers the power of sale by necessary implication. See also Carondelet v. Picot, 38 Mo. 125.

4. Statutes Not Retroactive. — Dallam v. Oliver, 3 Gill (Md.) 445; Norris v. Hall, 124

Mich. 170; Nowlen v. Hall, 128 Mich. 274. See also Danforth v. McCook County, 11 S. Dak. 258, 74 Am. St. Rep. 808; State v. Whittlesey, 17 Wash. 447.

Retroactive Effect Given — Louisiana. — Under the clause of the constitution of Louisiana of 1879 authorizing the legislature to direct a mode of sale of property on which taxes prior to 1879 were due, it was competent for the legislature to direct the sale of property which had forfeited to the state for the nonpayment of taxes, and property on which taxes levied prior to 1879 were due. Castillo v. McConnico, 47 La. Ann. 1473.

A Washington Statute, passed March 15, 1897, providing for the collection of delinquent taxes, was held to govern the collection of taxes for the previous year which did not become delinquent until after the passage of the act. State v. Whittlesey, 17 Wash. 447.

(4) Liability of Property—(a) In General.—Property sold in satisfaction of taxes must be such property as is liable to be subjected for that purpose.² Under the various statutes controlling this subject, sales have been held void because the property sold was owned by the public,³ or was included in the delinquent's exemptions,⁴ or was the subject of pending litigation upon the question of its liability to sale.⁵

(b) Primary Liability of Personalty—aa. WHERE PRIMARILY LIABLE.—In a number of states, under statutory provisions, real property cannot be sold for the satisfaction of delinquent taxes, if the owner has within the jurisdiction personal property sufficient to satisfy the tax claim, or until the personal property, if there be any, shall have been exhausted;⁶ and equity will restrain a the sum lawfully due has been paid, an injunction will lie to restrain a sale for the satisfaction of the illegal excess. Macomb v. Lake County, 9 S. Dak. 466.

Irregularity Cured by Lapse of Time.—Where a tract of land is in fact owned by more than one person, but is unoccupied, and to all appearances is a single tract, and is assessed as such, the fact that an owner had paid his proportionate share of the tax rendered a sale of the entire tract invalid as to him, but it was held that the sale would not be set aside where application was not seasonably made. Marsh v. Ne-ha-sa-ne Park Assoc., 25 N. Y. App. Div. 34, reversing 18 Misc. (N. Y.) 314.

Part Payment of Tax.—The fact that the taxes were paid for one of the years for which the land was sold will not invalidate the sale. Hurley v. Powell, 31 Iowa 64; Eldridge v. Kuehl, 27 Iowa 160.

Where Land Is Assessed Against Two Persons Separately, one of whom has paid the taxes, a sale of the land will be void. Bogges v. Scott, 48 W. Va. 316; Albright v. Byers-Allen Lumber Co., 204 Pa. St. 71.

Evidence upon Issue as to Payment.—In an injunction suit to restrain a sale for taxes, evidence may be introduced showing that receipts for taxes for specified years do not cover all the taxes due for such years and that a certain amount of taxes is still unpaid. Kock v. Triche, 52 La. Ann. 825.

By Whom Taxes Paid.—It seems to be immaterial by whom the payment was made if it was in fact accepted by the officers authorized to receive it. Nickum v. Gaston, 28 Oregon 322.

Tender of Insufficient Amount.—A tender of the taxes due on land, but not of the owner's poll tax or the tax due on his personal property, is no defense to a proceeding to subject the land to sale. Driggers v. Cassidy, 71 Ala. 529.

threatened sale of real estate in disregard of the right of the delinquent to have his personalty first subjected.¹ A sale of land made under such conditions is a nullity and confers no title upon the purchaser.² So, also, if there was sufficient personal property to discharge the taxes, which is lost by reason of the negligence or misconduct of the officer, a sale of land will be void.³

Diligence Required of Officer. — The officer must make diligent effort to discover the personal property of the delinquent,⁴ but if, after diligent effort, such property is not found, a sale of real estate will be valid although there may have been personal property.⁵

Proof of Compliance with Law. — Usually, before a sale of real estate can be lawfully made, there must be evidence, in the nature of a return by the proper officer, showing the want of sufficient personalty out of which to satisfy the tax.⁶ The return is generally prima facie evidence of the insufficiency of the Tax Collected by Different Collectors. — Where a tax is divided according to its objects among several collectors, and there is sufficient personal property to pay the claim of one collector, but not of all, the personalty must be applied to such claim, and a return of nulla bona by each collector is unwarranted. Davis v. Beers, 204 Pa. St. 288.

Owner Concluded by Judgment of Court. — A sale of land under a decree in a judicial proceeding cannot be attacked by the owner on the ground that he was possessed of personalty sufficient to satisfy the demand. Having failed to offer that defense on the trial he is concluded by the judgment of the court. Driggers v. Cassady, 71 Ada. 529.

Land Illegally Sold Still Liable. — Where an illegal sale is set aside the land is not thereby discharged from lien of the taxes, but will be again placed on the delinquent list. McWhinney v. Brinker, 64 Ind. 360.

In Indiana, according to the later decisions, the sale of realty is ineffectual to convey title, but is effectual to transfer the lien of the state for taxes due, and is therefore not absolutely void. St. Clair v. McClure, 111 Ind. 467; State v. Casteel, 110 Ind. 174.

5. Where No Personalty Found, Sale of Land Valid. — Matzenbaugh v. People, 194 Ill. 108, 88 Am. St. Rep. 134.

Literal Construction Given Statute. — In Scales v. Alvis, 12 Ala. 617, 46 Am. Dec. 269, it was held that a statute unconditionally forbidding the sale of realty if the delinquent had personal property in the county would be given a literal construction, and that the inability of the officer to find the property or the refusal of the delinquent to surrender it would not be considered.

6. Return Necessary. — Belden v. State, 46 Tex. 103; Thatcher v. Powell, 6 Wheat. (U. S.) 119.

In Alabama the affidavit which the officer is required to make and file, as to his inability to find the personal property after diligent search, is a jurisdictional fact without which the court has no power to grant an order to sell land, and if the affidavit is not made until after the sale, it cannot retroact so as to impart validity to the decree and to the sale. Wartensleben v. Haithecock, 80 Ala. 565; Fleming v. McGee, 81 Ala. 409; Simms v. Greer, 83 Ala. 263; Feagin v. Jones, 94 Ala. 597.

Affidavit Unnecessary When Land Assessed as "Unknown Owner." — Cary v. Holmes, 109 Ala. 217.

Return on Date Named in Statute Not Jurisdictional. — Conley v. McMillan, 120 Mich. 694.

In South Dakota, under a statute making a personalty.¹ The value of the deed as evidence of that fact varies in different states according to statutes controlling.²

bb. WHERE NOT PRIMARILY LIABLE. — In some states the personal property of the delinquent need not be exhausted before recourse can be had to real estate.³

(5) Regularity of Preliminary Proceedings. — It is essential to the right of the officer to sell that there shall have been a substantial compliance with the law in respect to the various proceedings which have already been treated in this article.⁴

(6) Notice — (a) In General. — The first step required of the officer who is to sell is that he shall give notice of the intended sale. In order that the delinsale of land for the taxes on personal property valid, without exhaustion of the personalty, the absence of any return showing the want of personal property, although required by another statute, will not vitiate the sale. Danforth v. McCook County, 11 S. Dak. 258, 74 Am. St. Rep. 808. See also Iowa Land Co. v. Douglas County, 8 S. Dak. 491.

In Illinois it has been held that where the form of the return is prescribed by statute and the statute does not require a statement as to the inability of the officer to make the amount of the tax out of the personal property, a return made in the prescribed form is sufficient, and it will be presumed that the officer did his duty in proceeding first against the personalty. Taylor v. People, 7 Ill. 349; Job v. Tebbets, 10 Ill. 376; Ottawa v. Macy, 20 Ill. 413; Goodrich v. Minonk, 62 Ill. 121.

Officer Liable in Damages for False Return. — Ottawa v. Macy, 20 Ill. 413; Kean v. Kinnear, 171 Pa. St. 639; Harris v. Davis, 24 Pa. Co. Ct. 373.

1. Return Prima Facie Evidence. — King v. People, 193 Ill. 530. See also Ottawa v. Macy, 20 Ill. 413; Goodrich v. Minonk, 62 Ill. 121.

Right of Purchaser to Rely on Return. — A bona fide purchaser at a tax sale of realty has a right to rely upon the return of nulla bona as the best evidence that there was no personal property which could be found and sold for the payment of the taxes, and his title will not be defeated by merely showing that, as a matter of fact, there was personal property. Interstate Bldg., etc., Assoc. v. Waters, 50 S. Car. 459.

2. Deed Prima Facie Evidence Only as to Its Recitals. — Ellis v. Kenyon, 25 Ind. 134.

Deed Not Prima Facie Evidence. — Stoudenmire v. Brown, 57 Ala. 481; Keepfer v. Force, 86 Ind. 81; Jackson v. Shepard, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 88, 17 Am. Dec. 502.

In Iowa the deed is conclusive evidence that the officer complied with his duty in attempting to make the tax by a sale of personalty before selling the realty. Stewart v. Corbin, 25 Iowa 144.

Sufficiency of Recital in Deed. — In Jones v. McLain, 23 Ark. 432, it was held that the recital that the taxpayer failed to pay on demand, and "not knowing of any personal property" whereon to levy, etc., is not a direct and satisfactory mode of reciting that sufficient personalty could not be found, but that such recital might be considered sufficient to place the burden of proof upon the taxpayer to show that he had personalty.

Competency of Deed. — In Indiana it has been held that a deed which does not recite that the personal property of the delinquent was insufficient is not competent evidence of title until that fact is shown aliunde. Ward v. Montgomery, 57 Ind. 276; Smith v. Kyler, 74 Ind. 575; Woolen v. Rockafeller, 81 Ind. 208.

And the testimony of the county auditor that the records of his office show that there was no personal property assessed to the delinquent in but one of the two years in which the taxes on the land became delinquent is not a sufficient showing as to the want of personal property to make the deed competent. Smith v. Kyler, 74 Ind. 575.

Constitutionality of Statutes. — In Doe v. Minge, 56 Ala. 121, it was held that a statute which made a tax deed prima facie evidence of the validity of the sale would be upheld, but that a statute making the deed conclusive evidence is unconstitutional.

In State v. Whittlesey, 17 Wash. 447, it was held that a statute making a deed conclusive evidence of regularity, excepting cases where the tax had been paid or the land was not liable, is constitutional.

quent may not be deprived of his property without being put upon his guard, and that competitive bidders may be brought together at the sale, it is necessary in every instance that notice be given,¹ and such notice must be given in substantial compliance with the statutes or the sale will be void.² Where the statute prescribes what notice shall be given, such statutory notice is sufficient.³ Whether the requirements respecting the notice of sale have been complied with, is a mixed question of law and fact for the determination of both court and jury.⁴

By Whom Given — Signature of Officer. — The notice must be given by an officer duly authorized to act,⁵ and should be officially signed by the officer⁶ as of a named county, but the failure of the signature to show the officer's county will not vitiate the notice where the identity of the county is readily apparent.⁷

(b) Notice to Delinquent. — In some states, in addition to the general notice of sale, it is required that the delinquent shall be given personal notice.⁸

affected by the sale must be given notice thereof.¹

Occupant of Land — Unknown Owner. — It is sometimes provided that notice shall be given to the occupant of the land,² or that notice be given an "unknown owner" by publication.³

(c) Contents of Notice — aa. IN GENERAL. — The notice to be valid must state correctly all the material matters required by the statutes. Thus, misdescriptions of the tax, as to its nature and purpose, have been held to vitiate the notice and sale;⁴ and where it is required to state the year or years for which the tax was assessed, a misstatement in that regard is fatal.⁵ So, when required by statute, the notice must state that a certain period has elapsed since the assessment.⁶

bb. AMOUNT OF TAX. — The notice is required to state the amount of tax for which the sale is to be made.⁷ A material error in the statement of the amount will vitiate the notice and sale,⁸ but the validity of the notice will not

Who Is Not an Occupant. — Under a statute requiring notice of sale to be given to the occupant of the lands, one who has erected a hunting lodge, hut, or house, to be occasionally used for hunting or fishing purposes, but who claims no ownership in the land, is not an actual occupant within the meaning of the statute. People v. Campbell, 67 Hun (N. Y.) 590. See also Drake v. Ogden, 128 Ill. 603, holding that one who places a few stacks of hay on a tract of land occupied by another, without any agreement to pay rent but with the owner's permission, is not an occupant.

Notice to Agent — Under a Georgia statute providing that personal notice should be given to the "owner, or tenant in possession if the owner is unknown," it was held that the resident agent of a nonresident owner should have been given notice of a sale of the owner's property, the agent having paid the taxes on the property for several years and his name being entered on the city books as the agent of such owner. McPhee v. Venable, 77 Ga. 772.

3. Notice to "Unknown Owner." — Wellman v. Willis, 52 La. Ann. 1445.

Unknown Owner Defined. — An unknown owner, on whom service may be legally made by publication, is a person whose address is unknown to the collector, and who does not live in the parish and has no agent there. Webre v. Lutch, 45 La. Ann. 574.

4. Fatal Misdescription. — In Pierce v. Richardson, 37 N. H. 307, it was held that an advertisement which calls a "state, county, and school tax" a "money tax" was fatally erroneous.

In Langdon v. Poor, 20 Vt. 13, it was held that where the tax is described as being "for the purpose of making and repairing and building bridges," whereas the tax authorized by the statute was "for the purpose of making and repairing roads and building bridges," the sale under the advertisement was void.

5. Misstatement of Year. — Knowlton v. Moore, 136 Mass. 32.

Where Taxes for Two Years Are Assessed the notice must state separately the amount assessed for each year. Lancy v. Snow, 180 Mass. 411.

Year of Tax Judgment Sufficiently Stated. — A notice which states that the sale is to be made in pursuance of a judgment entered on the 15th day of April for taxes remaining unpaid and delinquent on the first Monday in January of a specified year, sufficiently designates the year in which the tax judgment was rendered. Towle v. St. Paul Permanent Loan Co., 84 Minn. 105.

6. Lapse of Period Since Assessment. — Hobbs v. Clements, 32 Me. 67.

7. Amount of Tax to Be Stated. — Clarke v. Rowan, 53 Ala. 400; National Bank v. Baker Hill Iron Co., 108 Ala. 635; Tolman v. Hobbs, 68 Me. 316.

In Mather v. Darst, 13 S. Dak. 75, it was held that a notice of sale which stated the amount of the tax as the "amount sold for," instead of "the amount of taxes due" as required by the statute, was substantially defective, and that all subsequent proceedings were consequently invalid.

Amounts Due on Separate Lots to Be Stated Separately. — Washington v. Pratt, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 681.

Taxes for Different Years to Be So Stated. — National Bank v. Baker Hill Iron Co., 108 Ala. 635.

Land and Personalty Taxes to Be Stated Separately. — Derry Nat. Bank v. Griffin, 68 N. H. 183.

More Figures placed in a column headed "Amt" opposite the respective descriptions, without anything to indicate whether they were intended to represent dollars, cents, or something else, are not a sufficient statement of the amount of tax. Bonham v. Weymouth, 39 Minn. 92; Coombs v. O'Neal, 1 MacArthur (D. C.) 405.

Interest Up to the Date of Sale Need Not Be Included. — Stevens v. Paulsen, 64 Neb. 488.

All Costs to Be Included. — Elliot v. Doe, 24 Ala. 508.

8. Errors Held to Be Fatal. — Where a notice of sale stated the amount of tax to be four dollars and twelve cents and the true amount was three dollars and thirty cents, the sale was void. Alexander v. Pitts, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 503.

Where the advertisement gave as the sum be affected by an error of a trifling sum¹ or a mistake in respect to an unimportant matter.²

cc. TIME AND PLACE OF SALE. — It is essential to the validity of the sale that the notice should state the time³ and place of sale.⁴

Statement that Sale Will Be Public. — If so required by statute, the notice must state that the sale will be public;⁵ otherwise it need not so state.⁶

dd. DESCRIPTION OF PROPERTY. — The notice must contain a description of the property to be sold, sufficient to identify the premises,⁷ the degree of definite-due an amount including both state and county taxes, and the latter was illegal and therefore not due, the sale was adjudged void. Clarke v. Strickland, 2 Curt. (U. S.) 439.

Mistake Corrected Before Sale. — In Thweatt v. Black, 30 Ark. 732, it was held that an erroneous advertisement of land for the taxes of three years, when only the taxes for one year are due, will not vitiate, if the mistake is discovered, and the lands are sold for only the taxes that are in fact due.

If, however, such a mistake is not corrected, but is carried into the sale, it will be fatal. Kinsworthy v. Mitchell, 21 Ark. 145.

1. A Discrepancy of Ten Cents between the amount of tax as stated in the notice, and the amount actually due, will not invalidate the notice, as the law does not take notice of trifles. Burt v. Hasselman, 139 Ind. 196.

2. Transposition of State and County Taxes. — In Scott v. Watkins, 22 Ark. 556, it was held that the transposition, in the advertisement, of the state and county taxes, did not affect the validity of the sale, as the state and county taxes are not required to be stated separately.

Effect of Second Advertisement. — A second advertisement of sale which improperly includes taxes for which the land has already been advertised, but which is not shown to have misled the owner or intending purchasers, will not vitiate a sale according to the first advertisement. People v. Coler, 46 N. Y. App. Div. 237.

3. Time of Sale to Be Stated. — Lovejoy v. Lunt, 48 Me. 377; Blalock v. Gaddis, 33 Miss. 452; Olsen v. Bagley, 10 Utah 492.

Failure to State Year. — The failure of the notice to specify the year in which the sale is to be made is not fatal, where the body of the notice and controlling statutes indicate clearly the time of the sale. Towle v. St. Paul Permanent Loan Co., 84 Minn. 105; Ireland v. George, 41 Kan. 751; Taft v. Barrett, 58 N. H. 447.

4. Place of Sale to Be Stated. — Midlothian Iron Min. Co. v. Dahlby, 108 Wis. 195; Lovejoy v. Lunt, 48 Me. 377; Blalock v. Gaddis, 33 Miss. 452.

"At My Office" is a sufficient designation of the place of sale where the heading of the notice indicates that it issued from the office of a certain official of a named county. Ireland v. George, 41 Kan. 751.

Naming Court House Instead of Auditor's Office as the place of sale was held to be sufficient where the auditor's office was in the court house. Whitney v. Bailey, 88 Minn. 247.

Name of County. — In Sheldon v. Coates, 10 Ohio 278, it was held that a notice which stated that the sale would be "at the court house in Warren," but failed to add the words "Trumbull County," was nevertheless sufficient, the court taking judicial notice of the fact that at the date of the advertisement there was no township in the state by that name except in that particular county.

Place to Be Named with Certainty. — A notice which states that the sale will take place at the court-house or "at such other place as may hereafter be designated," is fatally defective. Ex p. Tax Sale of Lot No. 172, 42 Md. 196.

Where the Statute Prescribes the Form of Notice, it is sufficient to follow it, although it does not specially name the place of sale. Clark v. Mowyer, 5 Mich. 462; Nance v. Hopkins, 10 Lea (Tenn.) 508; Wisner v. Davenport, 5 Mich. 501.

The Deed Will Be Set Aside upon application within the period of limitation, for the failure of the notice to mention the place of sale. Corbin v. Young, 24 Kan. 199; Russell v. Hudson, 24 Kan. 571.

Omission in Notice Not Cured by Recital in Deed. — Henderson v. White, 69 Tex. 103.

5. Statement that Sale Will Be Public Required. — The omission to state in the notice that the sale will be "at public auction," as required by statute, renders the sale voidable. Hafey v. Bronson, 33 Kan. 598; Hoffman v. Groll, 35 Kan. 652; Belz v. Bird, 31 Kan. 139.

6. Statement Not Required. — Langley v. Batchelder, 69 N. H. 566.

Under a Kansas statute requiring the notice to state that the sale will be conducted by the county treasurer, it was held that the omission of that statement renders the sale voidable. Casner v. Gahlman, 60 Kan. 857, affirming 6 Kan. App. 295; York-Ritchie Exch., etc., Co. v. Mitchell, 6 Kan. App. 317.

Errors and Inaccuracies. — The description is vitiated by errors calculated to mislead,² but mere inaccuracies, notwithstanding which the property may be recognized, are not fatal.³

dulge a presumption that the notice of sale contained a sufficient description of the property. Lee v. Crawford, 10 N. Dak. 482.

In Iowa it has been held that the accidental omission of the description of certain lands from the list of lands advertised will not vitiate the sale, provided the taxes were in fact due, the tax deed not being conclusive evidence of the regularity of the notice. Shawler v. Johnson, 52 Iowa 473; Hurley v. Powell, 31 Iowa 64; Madson v. Sexton, 37 Iowa 562.

Lien Conveyed by Uncertain Description. — In Indiana it has been held that although a description is so uncertain as to render a sale ineffective, the purchaser may thereby acquire a lien on the property for the purchase money. Millikan v. Lafayette, 118 Ind. 323.

Defects in Description Not Cured by Information Given on Day of Sale. — Ronkendorff v. Taylor, 4 Pet. (U. S.) 349.

Distinct Lots to Be Described Separately. — Cruger v. Dougherty, 1 Lans. (N. Y.) 464.

Description Must Be Generally Intelligible. — A description which is intelligible only to persons of more than average intelligence, or can only be understood by persons familiar with the locality in which the land lies, is insufficient. Cooper v. Lee, 59 Ark. 460; Murphy v. Hall, 68 Wis. 202.

Describing Property as a Part of Certain Tract or Division without Designating the particular part intended is totally insufficient. Millett v. Mullen, 95 Me. 400; Bidwell v. Coleman, 11 Minn. 78; Treon v. Emerick, 6 Ohio 391. See also Dane v. Glennon, 72 Ala. 160; Lafferty v. Byers, 5 Ohio 458; Douglas v. Dangerfield, 10 Ohio 152.

But in People v. McGuire, 126 N. Y. 419, it was held that an advertisement of a portion of a city lot numbered 112, as "lot No. 112 part," and stating that further particulars might be obtained at the office of the collector, was sufficient, reversing (Brooklyn City Ct. Gen. T.) 8 N. Y. Supp. 852.

Improper Advertisement of "Undivided Portion." — An advertisement of a certain tract "or such undivided portion thereof as may be necessary" to satisfy the taxes, invalidates the sale. Wall v. Wall, 124 Mass. 65; Sanford v. Sanford, 135 Mass. 314.

And a statute which attempts retroactively to validate such sales is unconstitutional. Forster v. Forster, 129 Mass. 559.

Descriptions Too Indefinite. — A description as a certain number of lots of certain dimensions in a certain square between certain streets, without giving their respective numbers, is too vague to identify the property. Marin v. New Orleans, 30 La. Ann. 293. See also Jacques v. Kopman, 6 La. Ann. 542; Carmichael v. Aikin, 13 La. 205.

The description "Land, east corner Congress and Exchange streets, extending through to Market," is insufficient. Bingham v. Smith, 64 Me. 450.

Advertisement to Sell Tract "or So Much Thereof as May Be Necessary" Held Legal. — Schmoele v. Galloway Tp., 44 N. J. L. 145.

Where a Portion of a Designated Tract Is Excepted, such portion must be identified or the description will be void for uncertainty. Pickering v. Lomax, 120 Ill. 289.

The Advertisement in Gross of a Tract Assessed in Parcels does not affect the validity of the description. Henderson v. Oliver, 32 Iowa 512.

Description According to New Map. — Where a parcel of land, which by the former division of the town was embraced in "lot 6," was assessed and sold under a different description contained in a new map of the town, which had been recognized by the town officers and the citizens, but which had not been formally adopted, it was held that the owner, not knowing of the new map, was not affected by the sale. Richter v. Beaumont, 67 Miss. 285.

Property Taken from One Town and Annexed to Another. — Under a statute requiring that the notice of sale of land situated in a place the name of which has been changed by an act of the commonwealth shall specify the former name as well as the name last known, it was held that where land has been taken from one town and annexed to another, the name of the former town as well as of the latter must be expressed in the advertisement. Porter v. Whitney, 1 Me. 306.

Tract to Be Advertised in Entirety. — In Iowa it has been held that where taxes are delinquent upon the whole or any part of one contiguous tract belonging to the same owner, the entire tract should be advertised in a single description. Iowa R. Land Co. v. Sac County, 39 Iowa 124; Cedar Rapids, etc., R. Co. v. Carroll County, 41 Iowa 153.

1. Degree of Definiteness Depending on Circumstances. — State v. Woodbridge Tp., 42 N. J. L. 401.

2. Notice Vitiating by Misleading Description. — Patrick v. Davis, 15 Ark. 363; Currie v. Fowler, 5 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 145; Richardson v. Simpson, 82 Md. 155; Knight v. Alexander, 38 Minn. 384, 8 Am. St. Rep. 675; Dever v. Hagerty, 43 N. Y. App. Div. 354; Edwards v. Lyman, 122 N. Car. 741.

Lands Described as Situated in the Wrong County. — When lands are described as situated in a certain county, which lie partly in another county, the sale will be void as to the lands lying in the county not mentioned. Williams v. Harris, 4 Sneed (Tenn.) 332.

Incorrectly Naming Grantor. — In Whitmore v. Learned, 70 Me. 276, it was held that where the property was described as "house and lot bought of David Harris," such person being only one of three grantors, and merely joined in the deed for the purpose of releasing whatever interest he might have in right of his wife, the description is both imperfect and inaccurate.

3. Alvord v. Collin, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 418

What Certainty Required.—The requirements of the law will be met if the description informs the owner and the public with reasonable certainty what property is to be sold.¹ Such information, however, must be contained in the notice, and a description which merely enables a prospective purchaser to ascertain the location of the land by inquiry is insufficient.²

If the Notice Does Not Sufficiently Describe the Property, it is void, and acts done in pursuance thereof are of no effect.³

Name of Owner or Occupant.—It is essential to the validity of the sale, under some statutes, that the notice contain, as a further description of the property, the name of the owner⁴ or occupant;⁵ and designating the lands as belonging to another than the true owner is such a misdescription as will invalidate the sale.⁶

Abbreviations, in giving the description, are not objectionable,⁷ but they must be intelligible,⁸ and such as are of common usage and generally understood.⁹

Improved Lands Described as Wild.—In Gardner v. Donaldson, 80 Ga. 71, it was held that the sale is not void because the lands are described as wild, when in fact they are improved, as the collector has power to issue execution against either. See also Langley v. Batchelder, 69 N. H. 566.

1. Description Reasonably Certain.—Doherty v. Real Estate Title Ins., etc., Co., 85 Minn. 518; Keely v. Sanders, 99 U. S. 441; Boles v. McNeil, 66 Ark. 422; *French v. Conformity to Description in Delinquent's Deed Sufficient.—Talle v. De Monasterio, 48 La. Ann. 1232.

A Description Sufficient for the Invoice is adequate for the advertisement for sale. Langley v. Batchelder, 69 N. H. 566.

Description Not Necessarily Same as Contained in List.—Smith v. Messer, 17 N. H. 420.

Failure to Name the City or County in which the lands are situated is not fatal, where the land tax book of the city containing such information is referred to in the advertisement. Comfort v. Ballingal, 134 Mo. 281.

A Description Distinguishing the Land from Any Other Tract in the State, although descriptive of a certain tract in another state, is sufficient. Leigh v. Green, 64 Neb. 533.

Describing a Block by the figures and word "15 entire," printed in a column headed "Block," among descriptions in a special addition to a certain village, was held to be sufficient. Mann v. Carson, 120 Mich. 631.

Tract Divided into Several Lots.—The fact that a parcel of land, advertised and sold as one lot, was divided into six lots by heavy stone walls, does not invalidate the sale where the tract as a whole is described correctly. Howland v. Petty, 15 R. I. 603.

Description in Second Notice Unnecessary.—Under a Michigan statute providing that notice shall precede a sale of lands bid in by the state and left unredeemed, it was held to be not essential to such notice that it contain a description of the property where the notice of the first sale was duly given. Garner v. Wallace, 118 Mich. 387.

2. Sufficiency of Description.—Ronkendorff v. Taylor, 4 Pet. (U. S.) 349. See also Murphy v. Hall, 68 Wis. 202.

3. Notice Not Describing Land Void.—Morris v. Davis, 75 Ga. 169; Smith v. Kipp, 49 Minn. 119; Dever v. Hagerty, 43 N. Y. App. Div. 354; Edwards v. Lyman, 122 N. Car. 741; Lee v. Crawford, 10 N. Dak. 482.

Words Misdescriptive of Owner.—Where the advertisement gave the full name of the owner, who was a male person, the addition of the words "her estate or heirs" does not affect the validity of the notice. Castello v. McConico, 168 U. S. 674.

Giving Name Incorrectly Invalidates Sale.—Marx v. Hanthorn, 148 U. S. 172; Harness v. Cravens, 126 Mo. 233. See also Turner v. Gregory, 151 Mo. 100.

5. New Hampshire Statute.—Amoskeag Sav. Bank v. Alger, 66 N. H. 414.

Unimproved Lands need not, under the statute, be advertised in the name of the occupant. Langley v. Batchelder, 69 N. H. 566.

6. Name of Another than Owner.—Milner v. Clarke, 61 Ala. 258; Gardner v. Brown, 1 Humph. (Tenn.) 354. See also Sargent v. Bean, 7 Gray (Mass.) 125.

Including Name of Person Not an Owner.—Where the lands were described as belonging to D. and P., when in fact they had never belonged to such parties, but had been owned by D. ever since their severance from the public domain, the notice was adjudged void. Denègre v. Gèrac, 35 La. Ann. 952.

Giving Name of Previous Owner in Ignorance of Conveyance.—But in Alvord v. Collin, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 418, it was held that the advertisement of lands in the name of the previous owner, in ignorance of a subsequent conveyance, would not vitiate a description accurate in all other respects.

Name of Person to Whom Lands Taxed Sufficient.—Langley v. Batchelder, 69 N. H. 566.

7. Abbreviations.—Boles v. McNeil, 66 Ark. 422; Sibley v. Smith, 2 Mich. 486.

8. Abbreviation Must Be Intelligible.—Griffin v. Creppin, 60 Me. 270.

(d) Method of Advertisement — aa. IN GENERAL. — The method by which the notice is to be advertised is entirely a matter of statutory regulation, but it may be generally stated that the requirements of statutes, both as to advertisement by publication in newspapers and by posting notices, are mandatory, and must be strictly complied with, or the sale will be void.¹

bb. ADVERTISEMENT IN NEWSPAPERS — What Papers. — It is essential to the validity of the sale that the notice be published in such newspapers as the statute requires.²

Supplement. — There is no objection, however, to the publication being made in a supplement of the paper, provided its circulation is co-extensive with that of the paper itself.³

What Language. — Under a provision that all legal proceedings shall be in the English language, the advertisement of sale must be made in English and in a paper printed in the English language,⁴ and when it is required by statute that publication be made in several languages it is fatal to the notice and sale if the advertisement does not so appear.⁵

Intervals of Publication. — The notice must be published at the intervals and for the full length of time specified in the statute,⁶ but statutes requiring the vitate the notice when the identity of the land appears from another part of the description. Doherty v. Real Estate Title Ins., etc., Co., 85 Minn. 518.

Statute Directory. — In Den v. Lucey, 1 Murph. (5 N. Car.) 311, it was held that the acts prescribing the contents of the notice and the manner of advertisement are merely directory to that officer, and that his neglect to observe these directions may make him liable in damages, but will not affect the title of the purchaser unless there is collusion between him and the officer. See also Sanders v. Earp, 118 N. Car. 275.

And in Mississippi it seems that no defect or error in the advertisement will of itself invalidate the sale. Viriden v. Bowers, 55 Miss. 1.

Changes in Management of Paper During the Period of Advertisement. — Where a statute required the notice to be published in the newspaper of the public printer of the state, and during the running of the advertisement the paper ceased to be a state paper, the publication was held to be insufficient. Bussey v. Leavitt, 12 Me. 378.

Half of Paper Printed Elsewhere — Patent Invalid. — Under a statute requiring the notice to be published in a paper printed in the county, the fact that half of the paper was printed elsewhere, as is the custom with small papers, does not affect the validity of the publication. *Hart v. notice to be published once a week for a specified period are complied with if the notice be published upon any day of each week for the required length of time.¹

When Publication to Begin. — It seems that statutes fixing the time when the publication is to commence are mandatory in so far only as to require it to begin in time to be published for the prescribed period preceding the sale.² But where the language of the statute is that publication shall be "immediately" after a certain day, it must be made so soon thereafter as may be reasonably done.³

The Publication Must Be Continuous and immediately preceding the sale,⁴ but

But see Cobban v. Hinds, 23 Mont. 338.

Publication for Thirty Days. — The requirement that the notice shall be published at least thirty days before the date of the sale is complied with by one insertion of the notice each calendar week for a period of thirty days immediately preceding the sale, the first of the insertions being at least thirty days before the sale. Montford v. Allen, 111 Ga. 18.

Computation of Time—Excluding First Day and Including Day of Sale. — Carpenter v. Shimmers, 108 Cal. 359; O'Hara v. Parker, 27 Oregon 156.

Excluding First Day and Day of Sale. — Steuart v. Meyer, 54 Md. 454.

Date of Publication Fixed by Date of Newspaper. — Under a statute requiring the first publication of the notice in a newspaper to be eight weeks before the day of sale, the date of the paper is ordinarily to be considered as the date of its publication. And evidence tending to prove that the paper was actually printed, and delivered to local subscribers, on the afternoon of the day before such printed date, is not competent evidence to show that the paper was published the day before its date. Schoff v. Gould, 52 N. H. 512.

In Fitch v. Pinckard, 5 Ill. 69, to prove the notice and advertisement, newspapers were introduced, published in 1837, containing the notice and advertisement dated "1836." It was held that it was not permissible to show that the date was a mistake and that it was intended for 1837.

Two Irregular Advertisements for the Statutory Period cannot be coupled together so as to authorize the sale; so where, under a statute requiring three months' advertisement, the officer advertised the property for sale on a day in the following month, but, discovering his mistake, did not sell the property, and changed the date of sale as stated in the advertisement to a day three months from the first appearance of the notice, and continued the publication of the notice to such day, at which time the sale took place, it was held that the collector had no authority to sell although the delinquent was personally notified of the different time fixed for the sale and consented thereto. Scales v. Alvis, 12 Ala. 617, 46 Am. Dec. 269.

In South Carolina, under a statute requiring publication to be made weekly for two weeks, it has been held that where there had been two weekly insertions of the notice a sale could be made whether the full period of fourteen days had expired or not. Ebaugh v. Mullinax, 40 S. Car. 244, following Ex p. Alexander, 35 S. Car. 409.

Injunction. — In Cobban v. Hinds, 23 Mont. 338, it was held that an injunction would not lie to prevent a sale because the publication was for less than the statutory period.

1. Weekly Notice of Publication. — Ronkendorft v. Taylor, 4 Pet. (U. S.) 349; Hansen v. Mauberret, 52 La. Ann. 1565; In re New Orleans, 52 La. Ann. 1073; Monroe v. Winegar, 128 Mich. 309.

Daily Publication Not Required. — Under a statute requiring publication for three weeks, publication twice a week for the period prescribed was held sufficient. Thurston v. Miller, 10 R. I. 358.

2. Time for Commencing Publication. — Miller v. Delta, etc., Land Co., 74 Miss. 110; Chamberlin v. Taylor, 36 Hun (N. Y.) 24. See also Stout v. Coates, 35 Kan. 382.

Reasons for Postponement of Publication. — A statute making "mistake or inadvertence" reasons for postponing the advertisement of the sale does not permit a delay for "want of time to prepare the delinquent tax list." Mathers v. Lewis, 9 Ohio Cir. Dec. 873, 18 Ohio Cir. Ct. 134.

3. Publication to Commence Within Reasonable Time. — Doe v. Flagler, 1 Ind. 542, in which an unexplained delay of fifty days was held to defeat the right to sell.

4. Period of Publication Immediately to Precede Sale. — In Deligny v. Smith, 3 La. 418, it was held that a statute requiring the publication of notice for three months prior to the sale means three consecutive months immediately preceding the sale, as otherwise the publication of the notice might be at such intervals as to defeat the objects desired to be obtained.

New York Statute. — Under a statute requiring the sale to be made not less than thirty days need not extend to the very day of sale.¹

cc. ADVERTISEMENT BY POSTING NOTICES. — Unless the notices are posted for the length of time² and at public places such as are prescribed by statute, the sale will be void.³

What a Public Place. — The question whether a particular place is a "public place," within the meaning of a statute regulating the posting of notices of sale, is held to be a question partly of fact and partly of law. The nature and situation of the place, and the uses to which it is applied, are matters of fact to be settled by the jury; when these are settled, whether the place will be considered a public place within the intent of the statute is purely a question of law.⁴ Certain places, the nature and uses of which are well known, will be presumed by the court to be public for the purpose of posting notices of tax sales.⁵

When a Law Expressly Requires Printed Notices to be posted, a sale under a written notice is void.⁶

dd. PROOF OF PROPER NOTICE. — Under statutory provisions, proof, in the form of an affidavit or certificate, showing that the notice of sale was sufficient in form and advertised according to law, is required to be furnished by the tax officer,⁷ or the publisher, printer, or manager of the newspaper in which the notice was published.⁸ This affidavit or certificate must be made a part of

after the first publication of the notice, it was held that where the notice was first published on March 15th the sale was properly made on April 14th. Kane v. Brooklyn, 114 N. Y. 586.

1. Need Not Extend to Day of Sale. — Davis v. Magoun, 109 Iowa 308; McCurdy v. Baker, 11 Kan. 111; Whitaker v. Beach, 12 Kan. 492; Watkins v. Inge, 24 Kan. 612; Textor v. Shipley, 86 Md. 424.

2. Length of Time. — Farnum v. Buffum, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 260; Cummings v. Holt, 56 Vt. 384.

3. Place of Posting. — Doe v. Sweetser, 2 Ind. 649; Baumgardner v. Fowler, 82 Md. 631; Jones v. Landis Tp., 50 N. J. L. 374; Jarvis v. Silliman, 21 Wis. 600; Ramsay v. Hommel, 68 Wis. 12.

Wisconsin Statute. — Failure by the county treasurer to post a notice of a tax sale in a conspicuous place in his office, as required by statute, will render invalid a deed founded upon such sale. Morrow v. Lander, 77 Wis. 77.

But, posting the notice on the inside of the door of the treasurer's office is a compliance with the statute. Allen v. Allen, 114 Wis. 615.

"The Most Public Places." — Under a statute requiring the notices of sale to be posted at "the most public places in the county," a posting at the court house and three other of the most public places in the county is sufficient. Prince George's County v. Clarke, 36 Md. 207.

Iowa — Irregularities Not Fatal. — A statute of Iowa providing that tax sales shall not be vitiated by irregularities in "the advertisement" refers equally to posting notice and publication in newspapers. Davis v. Magoun, 109 Iowa 308.

4. What Is a "Public Place," Mixed Question of Law and Fact. — Tidd v. Smith, 3 N. H. 178; Cahoon v. Coe, 57 N. H. 576. See also Hart v. Smith, 44 Wis. 213.

The term "Public Place" means a place at which the inhabitants of a community and other persons most frequently meet, or resort, or have occasion to be, so that a notice posted there would, for that reason, be most likely to be seen. Russell v. Dyer, 40 N. H. 173. See also Wells v. Burbank, 17 N. H. 411; Austin v. Soule, 36 Vt. 645; Alger v. Curry, 40 Vt. 437.

Places Not Public. — A shoemaker's shop is not, as a matter of law, a public place. Tidd v. Smith, 3 N. H. 178.

In Cambridge v. Chandler, 6 N. H. 271, the advertisement was put upon a board that was fixed in the sand by the side of a certain river. There was no settlement nor inhabitant in Cambridge at that time; hunters were accustomed to pass up and down the river, and there was a public highway laid out through that place, leading from another point in the state to an adjoining state. It was held that the notice was not posted in a public place.

5. Places Presumed to Be Public. — Hart v. Smith, 44 Wis. 213, holding that post-offices and a certain store are presumptively public places.

In Hoitt v. Burnham, 61 N. H. 620, the court held that a certain inn and post-office were prima facie public places, no evidence being introduced as to the character of either.

And in Scammon v. Scammon, 28 N. H. 419, it is held, that for the purpose of posting a notice, a meetinghouse is prima facie a public place.

6. Printed Notice Required — Written Notice Insufficient. — Lagroue v. Rains, 48 Mo. 536.

7. Proof to Be Furnished by Officer. — Taylor v. State, 65 Ark. 595; King v. Sears, 91 Ga. 577; Doe v. Sweetser, 2 Ind. 649; Bowler v. Brown, 84 Me. 376; Cook v. John Schroeder Lumber Co., 85 Minn. 374; Jones v. Landis Tp., 50 N. J. L. 374; Landis v. Vineland, 60 N. J. L. 271; Magruder v. Esmay, 35 Ohio St. 221.

8. Printer's Certificate. — Morris v. St. Louis Nat. Bank, 17 Colo. 231; Charlton v. Kelly, 24 Colo. 273, reversing 7 Colo. App. 301; Daniel v. Taylor, 33 Fla. 636; Fox v. Cross, 39 Kan. 350; Mann v. Carson, 130 Mich. 631.

the record,¹ and should be so made within the time prescribed by statute.²

Contents of Certificate. — The certificate must state facts and not conclusions of law,³ and must show positively and unequivocally a compliance with every requirement of the statute in reference to the giving of the notice, leaving nothing to inference or conjecture,⁴ as parol evidence is not admissible in proof of facts required to appear of record.⁵

The Affidavit or Certificate Is Presumptive Evidence of its recitals.⁶

Miscellaneous Matters of Proof. — In the notes will be found a few miscellaneous decisions upon the burden of proof as to the sufficiency of the notice and presumptions that may arise in regard thereto.⁷

1. Certificate Must Be Made Part of Record. — Dick v. Foraker, 155 U. S. 404; Logan v. Eastern Arkansas Land Co., 68 Ark. 248; Texas Delta Land Co. v. Sholars, 105 La. 357; Brooks v. Auditor Gen., 119 Mich. 329; Kellogg v. McLaughlin, 8 Ohio 114; Culver v. Hayden, 1 Vt. 359. See also Coit v. Wells, 2 Vt. 318; Isaacs v. Shattuck, 12 Vt. 668; Carpenter v. Sawyer, 17 Vt. 121.

The Loss of the Proof of publication, which is shown to have been duly filed, will not be held to have defeated the jurisdiction. Hoffman v. Pack, 123 Mich. 74.

2. Must Be Recorded within Prescribed Time. — Martin v. Barbour, 34 Fed. Rep. 701, affirmed 140 U. S. 639.

Statutes Construed. — A statute requiring the advertisement to be recorded within ten days after the sale does not prohibit its being recorded after the completion of the publication and thirteen days before the sale. Stieff v. Hartwell, 35 Fla. 606.

Under a Wisconsin statute requiring the printer to transmit to the county treasurer the certificate of publication immediately after the last appearance of the notice, and providing that if such certificate be not so transmitted within six days the printer shall not be paid for the publication, a failure to file the certificate for ten days was held not to invalidate the sale. Allen v. Allen, 114 Wis. 615.

In Kansas, where the proof of the publication of notice is not transmitted to the county treasurer within the time prescribed by the statute, the charge for such publication may not be included in the amount for which the property is sold; and if it is included, the sale will be void. Fox v. Cross, 39 Kan. 350.

In New Hampshire it has been held that a statute requiring the officer to lodge, within ten days, with the town clerk, the newspapers containing the advertisements of the sale, is in this regard directory merely. Smith v. Messer, 17 N. H. 420. See also Cahoon v. Coe, 52 N. H. 518.

Insufficient Certificate. — An affidavit of the posting of the notice in four specified places, "the same being four public places in the village of N," etc., does not show that it was posted in four public places in the county, since the places may have been public so far as the village was concerned, and yet not public so far as the whole county was concerned. Ramsay v. Hommel, 68 Wis. 12.

Delivery of Paper to Subscribers to Be Shown. — Under a Colorado statute requiring the affidavit of publication to state that the several issues of the paper containing the notice were delivered to the subscribers, an affidavit which does not contain this statement is insufficient. Rustin v. Merchants', etc., Tunnel Co., 23 Colo. 351.

The Use of "At" Instead of "In." — Stating that the notices were posted "at" instead of "in" certain places does not affect the validity of the affidavit. Allen v. Allen, 114 Wis. 615.

Sufficient Notice Shown. — Boyle v. West, 107 La. 347; Garner v. Wallace, 118 Mich. 387; Spaulding v. O'Connor, 119 Mich. 45; Mann v. Carson, 120 Mich. 631.

That the Paper Is Published in the County Where the Land Is Situated may be shown by the order and petition, where the affidavit does not recite that fact. Wynkoop v. Grand Traverse Circuit Judge, 113 Mich. 381.

In Rhode Island it has been held that where the return of the collector fails to recite that notice was given, the claimant under the deed may show that fact in whatever way he can. Thurston v. Miller, 10 R. I. 358.

6. Affidavit Prima Facie Correct. — Delogny v. Smith, 3 La. 418; Hart v. Smith, 44 Wis. 213.

In Georgia the Statutory Presumption that the Advertisement Was Regular is not overcome by the fact that the newspaper does not have on

b. CONDUCT OF SALE — (1) Time. — Unless the sale be held at the very time prescribed at law it will be wholly void.¹ And a sale made at a time other than that stated in the notice, being nugatory of the very purpose of the notice, is without legal effect.²

Adjournment. — It being the duty of the officer to conduct the sale for the best interests of all concerned, he may adjourn the sale if he deems it necessary.³ But the sale must have been opened on the day fixed,⁴ and the adjournment must be to a definite time,⁵ at which time the sale must occur.⁶

file, and cannot furnish, certain copies of the paper in which the advertisement ought to have appeared. Bedgood v. McLain, 94 Ga. 283.

Presumption that Notices Were Posted in Proper Township. — Where the sheriff's return showed the proper posting of notices of sale in a certain township without stating that the land was in that township, it would be presumed that the notice complied with the requirements of law, the contrary not appearing. Woolen v. Rockafeller, 81 Ind. 208.

Deed Prima Facie Evidence of the sufficiency of the notice. Jarvis v. Silliman, 21 Wis. 600.

Conclusiveness of Evidence. — In Ireland v. George, 41 Kan. 751, it was held that where some evidence is offered tending to show that a delinquent tax notice was duly posted in four public places as required by law, such evidence is conclusive when approved by the trial court; and in the absence of all proof, such duty is presumed to have been performed. See also Hart v. Smith, 44 Wis. 213.

Further Advertisement Held Unnecessary. — Hurley v. Street, 29 Iowa 429.

Proof of Adjournment. — In Iowa the tax deed is prima facie evidence of a proper adjournment to the day on which the sale took place, and such adjournment need not appear of record. Bullis v. Marsh, 56 Iowa 747. See also Lorain v. Smith, 37 Iowa 67. But the presumption arising from the deed may be overcome by proof. Thompson v. Ware, 43 Iowa 455.

Curative Statute. — Where a sale is void because adjourned to a time not authorized by statute, an act subsequently passed does not impart validity to such sale. Collins v. Sherwood, 50 W. Va. 133.

4. Sale to Be Opened on Day Fixed. — Sullivan v. Donnell, 90 Mo. 278.

5. Adjournment Must Be to Definite Time. — Buzzell v. Johnson, 54 Vt. 90.

6. Sale to Occur at Time to Which Adjourned. — Buzzell v. Johnson, 54 Vt. 90; Butler v.

An adjournment from day to day means from one day to its succeeding day.¹

(2) Place. — The sale must be conducted at the place designated by statute.² Where the statute requires the sale to be held before the court house door it has been held that a sale inside the court house is a nullity.³

(3) By What Officer Conducted. — In each state the officer who is to make the sale is designated by statute — the sheriff, treasurer, auditor, or the collector himself, being usually named. A sale by any other than the officer designated for the purpose, or his deputy, is unauthorized and void.⁴ The sale, being an official act, cannot be made by an officer whose term of office has expired.⁵

Where a County Is Divided after land therein is assessed for taxes and returned delinquent, and before it is sold, and by such division the land is included within a new county, the sale for such taxes should be made by the proper officer of the old county.⁶

(4) Quantity to Be Sold — (a) In General. — The law, in its purpose to protect the interests of the delinquents as well as to collect the tax, does not favor, and usually will not permit, the sale of a greater quantity of land than is necessary to pay the taxes and charges,⁷ and a sale of an entire tract, the

Delano, 42 Iowa 350, in which it was held that where it was announced that the sale would be adjourned "from day to day," but was not resumed on the following days, the sale, when it was made, was irregular and void.

Month's Adjournment Unauthorized. — A statute providing for the continuance of the sale from day to day, when it is not completed on the day fixed, does not authorize an adjournment for a month. Collins v. Sherwood, 50 W. Va. 133.

2. Place of Sale. — Park v. Tinkham, 9 Kan. 615; Richards v. Cole, 31 Kan. 205; Nixon v. Biloxi, 76 Miss. 810; Rubey v. Huntsman, 32 Mo. 501, 82 Am. Dec. 143; White v. Wilkinson, 51 W. Va. 196.

Sale Must Be at Place Advertised. — Sommers v. Ward, 41 W. Va. 76.

Sale Necessarily Removed to Larger Room. — Where the statute required the sale to be held in the office of the county auditor and the sale was opened at such place, but the room proved to be too small to accommodate the large number of bidders present, some of whom could not get within hearing distance, it was held that the sale was properly removed to the courtroom. Whitney v. Bailey, 88 Minn. 247.

Where the Statute Is Silent as to Place of sale, the officer is nevertheless bound to hold the sale at the place where the object of the sale will be most likely to be accomplished; viz., the collection of the tax at the least cost to the taxpayer. Rice v. Johnson, 20 Ga. 639.

In Howland v. Petter, 15 R. I. 603, it was held that a sale at the sheriff's office, about twenty miles from the lands sold, will be upheld, where it appears that the officer acted in good faith, that no objection was made by the complainant to the place of sale during the time the advertisement was running, and that no steps were taken to set it aside for more than five years after the sale.

3. Before Court House Door. — Smith v. Cox, 115 Ala. 503; Rubey v. Huntsman, 32 Mo. 501, 82 Am. Dec. 143; McNair v. Jensen, 33 Mo. 312. See also Vasser v. George, 47 Miss. 713.

Where the Court House Had Been Destroyed, a sale was properly conducted at the door of a building which had been designated by the proper authorities as the court house, although court was actually held at a different place. Thayer v. Hartman, 78 Miss. 590.

Disinterestedness of Officer. — The fact that the officer acquired an interest in the property some time after the sale does not show that he was disqualified to sell. New Orleans Pac. R. Co. v. Kelly, 52 La. Ann. 1741. See also Shelley v. Smith, 97 Iowa 259; Mixon v. Clevenger, 74 Miss. 67.

In Arkansas it has been held that the collector for a particular year is the only officer authorized to collect taxes for that year, and although his term expires before the day fixed for the sale of lands for such taxes, no one other than himself or his deputy may sell; it is only when the collector dies or is removed from office, or is otherwise disqualified to act, that the actual collector may sell. value of which vastly exceeds the amount to be satisfied, will be declared invalid.¹ This rule, outside of any positive enactment of law, has been declared to rest on principles of obvious policy and universal justice.²

Statutes Authorizing Sale of Whole Tract.—In one instance a law requiring the entire tract to be sold, in all cases, without regard to the fact that a division thereof might be made without injury, and the taxes paid by a sale of part, was adjudged unconstitutional,³ but in another instance a similar statute has been upheld.⁴ Under a statute making it optional with the officer to sell the whole or a part, a sale of the whole was upheld, although a part might conveniently have been sold.⁵

Texas—Foreclosure of Tax Lien.—Tex. Rev. Stat. (1895), art. 5184, providing that only so much property be sold as is necessary to satisfy the taxes thereon, has no application to proceedings in foreclosure of tax liens. Master-son v. State, 17 Tex. Civ. App. 91.

In Illinois, Where Several Adjoining Tracts Are Levied upon, it is the duty of the sheriff to offer each tract separately, and if no bids are made for one tract, to add another to it, and so on until all the pieces are offered, and if no bid is made, then to sell all the tracts en masse for a reasonable bid. *Douthett v. Collateral Attack.—In Missouri the sale may not be impeached in a collateral proceeding, for the neglect of the officer to sell the land, by its smallest legal subdivision. Flynn v. Edwards, 36 Fed. Rep. 873; Wellshear v. Kelley, 69 Mo. 343; Brown v. Walker, 85 Mo. 262.

Principle Generally Applicable to Judicial Sale.—In Dyer v. Boswell, 39 Md. 471, it was declared that the statute restricting the quantity of property to be sold for taxes merely asserts a general principle which is applicable to sales made by sheriffs and collectors, and has been often enforced upon grounds of equity and reason.

3. Unconstitutional.—Martin v. Snowden, 18 Gratt. (Va.) 100.

Where the Law Charged Each Tract with a Distinct Tax, the sale of two tracts was held to be not illegal, although the receipts from either were more than sufficient to pay the taxes on both. Lawton v. U. S., 21 Ct. Cl. 44. See also State v. Sargent, 12 Mo. App. 236.

4. Statute Requiring Sale of Whole.—Richards v. Howell, 60 Ark. 215, holding that an offer by the officer to sell the smallest quantity that the bidder would accept and pay the taxes, invalidated the sale, although the bidder would not accept a quantity less than the entire tract, since the statute required the whole tract to be sold to the highest bidder.

deed showing that this course was pursued is void upon its face.¹ But it has been held that several adjoining parcels which are compactly situated and which are used and occupied as a single tract may, for the purposes of taxation, be listed and valued together, and sold for a single consideration and as a single parcel.² Where the sale is by parcels, and the sale of one or more lots or parcels produces the amount actually due on all the land of the delinquent, the officer cannot lawfully proceed to sell further.³

Deed Showing Compliance with Law.—A purchaser of lots sold separately is entitled to a deed reciting that fact, so that it may appear that the sale was conducted legally. State v. Richardson, 21 Mo. 420.

Compliance with Law Sufficiently Shown.—A deed showing that the several tracts conveyed were advertised separately, and that the purchasers offered to pay for them separately, was held to show sufficiently that the lots were separately sold. Waddingham v. Dickson, 17 Colo. 223.

3. Sale Must End When Taxes Satisfied.—Washington v. Pratt, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 681.

Order of Selling Changed for Accommodation of Bidders.—Where the officer, in the early part of a tax sale, offered the property in the order prescribed by statute, but ascertaining that there were bidders present who were anxious to leave but desired to bid on certain pieces of property, offered such pieces out of their regular order, there was no irregularity sufficient to invalidate the sale. *Cook v. to a sale of the whole.¹ If, however, the least quantity that will bring the amount due be the whole tract, a sale of the whole will be sustained.²

(c) Sale According to Assessment.—The question as to the lots or parcels in which the land is to be sold is controlled, as a general rule, by the assessment list.³ If several parcels of land, separately assessed, be sold in a lump, the sale will be declared invalid,⁴ and distinct parcels, assessed as an entirety and for a lump sum, cannot be sold separately,⁵ nor can a single tract, so assessed, be sold in parts.⁶

The Officer Is Not Permitted to Apportion the Tax and sell the parcels separately, each for its proportionate share of the whole tax,⁷ and such a sale may not be upheld by testimony that the apportionment of the tax was a fair one.⁸

Division Which Decreases Value to Be Made.—Bean v. Brownwood, (Tex. Civ. App. 1898) 43 S. W. Rep. 1036.

Bona Fide Sale Upheld.—In Wilson v. Cantrell, 40 S. Car. 114, the sale of an entire tract, without any effort to divide it, was sustained, there being no suggestion of fraud or unfairness.

A Statute Making the Deed Conclusive evidence of the validity of the sale and of the purchaser's title does not cure a failure of the officer to offer for sale the least quantity of property which would have satisfied the taxes. Roth v. Gabbert, 123 Mo. 21.

1. Offering Specified Number of Acres.—Herring v. Moses, 71 Miss. 620; Herron v. Jennings, (Miss. 1902) 31 So. Rep. 965; Yeaman v. Lepp, 167 Mo. 61.

In Mississippi, under Code, § 521 (Code 1892, § 3813), the officer is required to "first offer forty acres, and if the first parcel so offered do not produce the amount due, then he shall offer another similar subdivision, and so on until the requisite amount be produced." Accordingly, where the officer first offered forty acres, then another forty acres, then the remainder, without receiving a bid, and then sold the whole tract, the sale was held to be void. Gregory v. Brogan, 74 Miss. 694. See also Hodge v. Wilson, 12 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 500; Boisgerard v. Doe, 23 Miss. 122; Ray v. Murdock, 36 Miss. 692, in which a similar construction is placed upon a former statute.

Sale of Whole Void Although No Bid Made on Part.—In Hobbs v. Hamlet, 106 Ga. 403, a sale of an undivided one-half interest in twelve hundred and twenty-five acres of land worth from five to six dollars per acre, for a tax of sixteen dollars and twenty cents, was held to be so excessive as to vitiate the sale, although portions of the property were unsuccessfully offered.

3. Sale According to Assessment.—Ballance v. Forryth, 13 How. (U. S.) 18; McQuesten v. Swope, 12 Kan. 32; Hayden v. Foster, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 492; State v. Sargeant, 76 Mo. 557; O'Neil v. Tyler, 3 N. Dak. 47.

Texas—May Sell Other Property than That Assessed.—Brymer v. Taylor, 3 Tex. Civ. App. 103.

Presumption that Sale Was According to Assessment.—Corburn v. Crittenden, 62 Miss. 125.

Partial Validity of Assessment and Sale.—Where property was assessed and sold as belonging entirely to a certain heir, who in fact was the owner of only a one-half interest, the sale was held to be valid in respect to the one-half, on the principle that the greater includes the less. Marti v. Wall, 51 La. Ann. 946.

Statutory Remedy Must Be Followed.—In Montana it has been held that equity will not enjoin a sale of separate lots under an assessment in gross, where no application has been made to the board of equalization to have the alleged irregularity in the assessment corrected as provided by statute. Cobban v. Hinds, 23 Mont. 338; Deloughrey v. Hinds, 23 Mont. 260.

Sale by Parcels Unnecessary under Statute.—In Keely v. Sanders, 99 U. S. 441, it was held, under a statute requiring the commissioners to sell the "lot or parcel of land" upon which the tax was assessed, it is not necessary that the land should have been sold in parcels.

7. Apportionment Not Permissible.—Wyman v. Baer, 46 Mich. 418; O'Neil v. Tyler, 3 N. Dak. 47.

8. Sale Not Sustained by Evidence of Fair Apportionment.—Kregelo v. Flint, 25 Kan. 695.

Undivided Interest. — Without express statutory authority, the officer may not, when the assessment is of an entire tract, sell an undivided interest in the land so as to constitute the purchaser a tenant in common with the owner,¹ unless the interest of the delinquent is already an undivided one.²

Designation of Part Sold. — If less than the whole tract be sold, the portion offered must be so designated as to enable a prospective purchaser to identify it³ or the sale will be void.⁴

(5) Amount for Which Sale to Be Made — (a) In General. — The amount for which a tax sale may be made is a question depending for the most part upon the terms of the statutes. Under some statutes a sale is void if made for less than the whole amount of taxes, interest, and costs.⁵ But under other statutes a valid sale may be made for less than the whole amount due,⁶ and such Inslee*, 24 Kan. 154; Auld v. McAllaster, 43 Kan. 162; Loud v. Penniman, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 539; Wall v. Wall, 124 Mass. 65; Forster v. Forster, 129 Mass. 559; Sanford v. Sanford, 135 Mass. 314; Jordan v. Hyatt, 3 Barb. (N. Y.) 275.

In Maine the statutory requirement that the officer is to sell "so much of such real estate or interest as is necessary to pay the tax," etc., means that he is to sell an undivided fraction of the whole. To sell a separate and distinct portion of the farm would be as illegal as to sell the whole when it is only necessary to sell a part. Allen v. Morse, 72 Me. 502.

2. Where Delinquent Owns Undivided Interest. — Harper v. Rowe, 55 Cal. 132; Townsend Sav. Bank v. Todd, 47 Conn. 190; Boyle v. West, 107 La. 347.

Payment by the Owner of an Undivided Interest, of the taxes due by him, necessarily renders valid a sale of the residue upon default in the payment of the taxes thereon. Ronkendorff v. Taylor, 4 Pet. (U. S.) 349; Payne v. Danley, 18 Ark. 441, 68 Am. Dec. 187; Peirce v. Weare, 41 Iowa 378. See also Lawrence v. Miller, 86 Ill. 502.

3. Designation of Part Sold. — Townsend Sav. Bank v. Todd, 47 Conn. 190; Jacobs v. Buckalew, (Ariz. 1895) 42 Pac. Rep. 619; Gulf State Land, etc., Co. v. Fasnacht, 47 La. Ann. 1294; Hodge v. Wilson, 12 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 498.

In California, the owner of the lands may designate, prior to the commencement of the sale, the portion he wishes offered; if he does not so designate, then the officer shall do so. But the designation, whether by the owner or the officer, must precede the actual sale to the purchaser; and it must be by metes and bounds, so that the purchaser may know its exact boundaries. Roberts v. Chan Tin Pen, 23 Cal. 259.

In Illinois, the quantity sold, when less than the whole, must be taken from the eastern portion of the tract, and the line drawn due north and south, and far enough west of the most eastern point of the tract to make the requisite quantity. Spellman v. Curtenius, 12 Ill. 409.

Sufficiency of Designation. — See Cocks v. Simmons, 55 Ark. 104, 29 Am. St. Rep. 28; Coxe v. Blanden, 1 Watts (Pa.) 533, 26 Am. Dec. 83; Nance v. Hopkins, 10 Lea (Tenn.) 508; Wands v. Brien, 13 Lea (Tenn.) 732; Sheafe v. Wait, 30 Vt. 735.

4. Failure to Designate Vitiates Sale. — Nelson v. Abernathy, 74 Miss. 164.

Curative Statute. — The failure of the officer to designate the property he sells invalidates the sale notwithstanding a statute providing that the validity of the tax sale shall not be affected by errors in conducting it. Nelson v. Abernathy, 74 Miss. 164.

5. Sale for Insufficient Amount Void. — State v. Helmer, 10 Neb. 25; O'Donohue v. Hendrix, 13 Neb. 257; Tillotson v. Small, 13 Neb. 202; McGavock v. Pollack, 13 Neb. 535; Adams v. Osgood, 42 Neb. 450; Medland v. Connell, 57 Neb. 10; Grant v. Bartholomew, 57 Neb. 673. But see Carman v. Harris, 61 Neb. 635.

No Bid Receivable for Less than Whole Amount. — Where the statute provides that no bid shall be received or sale made except for a sum covering the whole amount of taxes and costs, a sale made for a less sum is void. Renshaw v. Imboden, 31 La. Ann. 661; Waddill v. Walton, 42 La. Ann. 763; Carey v. Cagney, 109 La. 77; Douglass v. Lowell, 60 Kan. 239; Detroit F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Wood, 118 Mich. 31; Hughes v. Jordan, 118 Mich. 27. See also Heywood v. Weber County, 18 Utah 57.

Lands Bid In by State. — In Michigan, where it is provided by statute that lands bid in by the state may be purchased by persons applying therefor and tendering the amount of taxes and costs due, an applicant who tenders such amount together with the current taxes is entitled to the property as against other applicants who failed to tender such current taxes. Wilkin v. Keith, 121 Mich. 66; Hall v. Mann, 122 Mich. 13; Moore v. Auditor Gen., 122 Mich. 599. See also Cockburn v. Auditor Gen., 120 Mich. 643; Munroe v. Winegar, 128 Mich. 309. This statute does not apply to public sales. Berkey v. Burchard, 119 Mich. 105.

In Virginia, it has been held under a statute providing for the purchase of lands bought in by the state, that an applicant for the purchase of such lands, in specifying the amounts and charges he will pay for the land, must mention the accrued interest. Lewis v. Coons, 96 Va. 506. See also Brown v. Christian, 96 Va. 254.

Taxes Omitted Not Discharged. — Fisbel v. Stark, 49 La. Ann. 855; Medland v. Connell, 57 Neb. 10. See also Countryman v. Wasson, 78 Minn. 244; People v. Buffalo, (Supm. Ct. Spec. T.) 33 Misc. (N. Y.) 170. But compare supra, this title, Tax Lien — Termination of Lien — Effect of Alienation, Judicial Sale, Etc.

6. Sale Not Defeated by Inadequacy of Amount. — In Iowa, the fact that the land is not sold sale will sometimes operate as a satisfaction and discharge of all taxes due, releasing the delinquent from further liability,¹ and freeing the property in the hands of the purchaser from all liens for taxes.² But where the owner of the property, knowing that the taxes are less than the law requires, allows the sale to be made, and becomes the purchaser himself, the state may subject the same land to the satisfaction of the deficiency.³

A Deficiency of a Mere Trifle will not affect the validity of the sale.⁴

(b) Excessive Amount.—In the absence of validating statutes, a sale of property for the satisfaction of an amount of taxes in excess of the amount lawfully due is without jurisdiction and void, both as to the illegal excess, and the amount for which the sale might lawfully have been made.⁵ It is a presumption of law that when the land has been sold for taxes, in part illegal, some portion of the land is taken to satisfy an illegal demand, and would not have for all the delinquent taxes is an irregularity merely, which will not defeat the sale after the execution and recording of the tax deed made in pursuance thereof. Kessey v. Connell, 68 Iowa 430; Hough v. Easley, 47 Iowa 330; Shoemaker v. Lacey, 38 Iowa 277; Preston v. Van Gorder, 31 Iowa 250.

In New York a Sale Made for One Assessment Only, when there are other taxes in arrears, is valid. People v. Coler, 46 N. Y. App. Div. 237.

Sale of Land for City Taxes.—In Pennsylvania, under a statutory provision that lands shall not be sold for city taxes unless the amount of the taxes due shall exceed twenty dollars, there may be a sale under a lien for less than that amount, if all the taxes against such land aggregate more than twenty dollars. Bole v. McKelvy, 189 Pa. St. 505.

Two Sales of Same Property.—Where land was sold for the taxes of later years and was subsequently sold for the taxes of prior years, the first sale gave a paramount title. Bowman v. Thompson, 36 Iowa 505. But see Crowell v. Merrill, 60 Iowa 53, in which a second sale of land for railroad taxes was upheld.

In Massachusetts the same land may be sold at separate sales for the taxes of two successive years. In such case the purchaser at the second sale and for the later tax acquires title to the property. Keen v. Sheehan, 154 Mass. 208. But a single sale under two warrants for the taxes of two years is valid. Lancy v. Snow, 180 Mass. 411.

Validity of Sale Where Price Is Not Refunded.—Where a county made a sale of land for one-tenth of the taxes due, but the price paid was not refunded to the purchaser, it was held that the sale was binding between the county and the purchaser. Munger v. Halden, 83 Minn. 490.

been sold at all if only what was lawful had been called for.¹ And so, if the sale be made for a sum including costs and charges not lawfully taxable, it is void.²

Even When the Excess Is a Very Insignificant Sum the sale cannot be upheld.³ The maxim de minimis non curat lex can scarcely be said to have any application to tax sales,⁴ the rule being that the sale is void if the excess is as much as the smallest fractional coin authorized by law.⁵ There is authority, however,

Including Forfeited Fees.—Under a Kansas statute providing that the printer shall forfeit his fees for failure to transmit to the county treasurer within a specified time the proof of the publication of the notice, where the statute was not complied with, the inclusion of such fees in the amount for which the land is sold, invalidates the sale. *Fox v. Reason for Rule.—A trivial sum exacted of each taxpayer becomes a matter of importance as applied to the body of the taxpayers at large, and may become important in amount to each individual owner of property by reason of the

to the effect that a slight miscalculation by the officer in computing the amount of taxes and costs, by which property is sold for a small sum more than the amount actually due, but which does not materially change the result or work any appreciable injury to the owner, will not vitiate the sale;¹ and it seems that where a certain sum is claimed to be excessive but is not clearly shown to be so, and there are possible explanations therefor consistent with its legality, the presumption will be that it was lawfully included in the amount for which the sale was made.²

Statutes Changing Rule. — In some states it has been held, under special statutes so providing, that a sale is not rendered invalid because a portion of the amount for which the sale is made is illegal or erroneous, if the amount includes taxes for which the property might lawfully have been sold.³ Where the constitutionality of such a statute was directly assailed it was upheld on the ground that the power to sell arises from the portion of the tax which is legal, and that, as the illegal portion is refunded to the owner, he is not prejudiced thereby.⁴ In one instance, the statute was held unconstitutional,⁵ and it is undoubtedly true that a legislature cannot give such a statute a retroactive operation, as that would deprive the owner of his property without process of law.⁶

(6) Opportunity for Competition at Sale. — The sale is required to be made publicly and fairly, with an opportunity for competition in the bidding.⁷ As

In New York, where the officer returned four cents too much, the mistake was held not to invalidate the sale; the maxim de minimis, etc., being held to apply. Colman v. Shattuck, 62 N. Y. 353.

In Ohio, the sale is not affected by an overcharge of tax subsequent to the forfeiture to the state for nonpayment. Winder v. Sterling, 7 Ohio (pt. ii.) 191.

2. Unexplained Costs Presumed to Be Legal. — Drennan v. Beierlein, 49 Mich. 272; Salls v. Barons, 40 Kan. 697; Crooks v. Whitford, 47 Mich. 283.

Variance between Certificate and Deed. — The recital by the deed of an amount fifty cents in excess of that in the certificate was held not to show an excessive sale, the presumption being in favor of the regularity of official action. Doland v. Mooney, 79 Cal. 137.

3. Sale Supported by Valid Taxes — Georgia. — Montford v. Allen, 111 Ga. 18.

In Barnes v. Lewis, 98 Ga. 558, it was held that where lands held in trust were sold for an amount improperly including the poll tax of the trustee, the purchaser obtained title against the cestuis que trustent.

In Nebraska, owing to the omission of the legislature to provide a seal for the county treasurer, a tax sale does not divest the title of the owner but only operates as an assignment of the tax lien, and consequently a sale for an excessive amount is not invalid. Hall v. Moore, (Neb. 1902) 92 N. W. Rep. 294.

Evidence of Illegal Taxes Is Incompetent upon the question as to the validity of the sale, since, under the statute, the partial invalidity of the tax is immaterial. Eldridge v. Kuehl, 27 Iowa 160.

4. Constitutional. — Parker v. Sexton, 29 Iowa 421.

5. Unconstitutional. — Mich. Comp. L., § 1129, providing that no sale shall be held invalid unless it be made to appear that all legal taxes are paid or tendered, and that all taxes shall be presumed to be legally assessed until the contrary is affirmatively shown, is unconstitutional so far as it sustains sales for taxes which are in part illegal. Sisbee v. Stockle, 44 Mich. 561.

6. Curative Statute Not Retroactive. — Where a sale is made for a sum in excess of that authorized by law and is consequently void, the title of the owner remains the same after the sale as before it, and it is clearly beyond the power of the legislature, at a subsequent time, to divest a title which no process of law had impaired. Harper v. Rowe, 53 Cal. 233.

Necessity for Competition When State the Purchaser.—Lyon County v. Ross, 24 Nev. 102. See also Andrus v. Wheeler, 22 N. Y. App. Div. 596.

Right to Sell at Private Sale.—In Nebraska, where lands had been advertised, and not sold for lack of bidders, the treasurer could sell the same at private sale, and was not required to give notice of, or invite competition at, such sale. Kittle v. Shervin, 11 Neb. 65.

Report Prior to Private Sale.—But he had no right to sell at a private sale until after his report of sales of land at public sale was made, and filed in the office of the county clerk. State v. Helmer, 10 Neb. 25; Medland v. Connell, 57 Neb. 10; Johnson v. Finley, 54 Neb. 733; Medland v. Linton, 60 Neb. 249; Gallentine v. Fullerton, (Neb. 1903) 93 N. W. Rep. 932.

Recitals in Deed.—And a deed purporting to have been founded on a private sale must recite that the land had been previously exposed for sale at a public sale, and not sold for lack of bidders. Ludden v. Hansen, 17 Neb. 354.

Auction Sale to Be Shown by Record.—The record must show that the sale was made by auction. A recital in the deed to that effect is no evidence that the sale was so made. Nason v. Ricker, 63 Me. 381.

1. Prevention of Competition by Officer.—Townsend Sav. Bank v. Todd, 47 Conn. 190; Gage v. Graham, 57 Ill. 144; Bickford v. Poor, 68 N. H. 443. See also Twombly v. Kimbrough, 24 Ark. 460.

Interference by Equity.—Tax sales, whenever characterized by fraud or unfairness, should be set aside, or the purchaser be required to hold the title in trust for the owner. A court of equity is the proper tribunal to afford relief. Slater v. Maxwell, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 268; Schenk v. Peay, 1 Dill. (U. S.) 267.

In Massachusetts it was held that a sale is not invalidated by reason of the fact that the officer announces at the sale that he hopes no one will bid more than the amount of the taxes, interest, and charges, because of the difficulty in disposing of the surplus. Southworth v. Edmonds, 152 Mass. 203.

Inadequacy of Price does not, in itself, constitute a valid objection to the sale. Slater v. Maxwell, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 268; Crosby v. Bonnowsky, 29 Tex. Civ. App. 455.

Owner Held Not Prejudiced.—In Howland v. Pettey, 15 R. I. 603, it was held that an understanding among the bidders that the owner was to receive the land back upon reimbursing the purchaser was not prejudicial to the owner where the land was offered to him by the purchaser for the price paid, with costs and expenses, which offer he did not accept, though able to do so, and never at any time offered to redeem the land.

2. Fraud and Collusion.—A tax deed is void as to a mortgagee who purchased under foreclosure of his mortgage after the execution of the deed, where the mortgagor, in his capacity as county treasurer, fraudulently informed the mortgagee that there were no unpaid taxes on the land, and by collusion with the grantee in the deed attempted to cut off the mortgagee's interest by a sale for taxes. Christian v. Soderberg, 118 Mich. 47.

Facts Vitiating Sale.—Where the officer does not sell the lands at public auction, as required by law, but simply allows persons who desire to purchase, to hand him slips of paper describing the lands which they wish to purchase, and the officer then at his leisure enters these lands on his books as regularly sold at public auction and issues to the purchaser certificates in ordinary form, such a sale is illegal and voidable if not void, and may be proven so by testimony as to the general conduct of the officer without identifying any particular tract illegally sold. Young v. Rheinecher, 25 Kan. 366. See also Arn v. Hoppin, 25 Kan. 707.

Delivery of Certificate Enjoined.—Where the owner of property sold for taxes was prevented from placing a bid thereon at the sale by reason of collusion between the officer and the purchaser, equity will restrain the delivery of the certificate of sale. Glos v. Swigart, 156 Ill. 229.

Iowa.—Where the person wishing to buy, handed to the officer a list of the lands on which he was willing to bid the amount of taxes due, and there being no competition such bid was received, and the land regarded as sold, without any public announcement, the sale was upheld. Leavitt v. Watson, 37 Iowa 93, followed in Slocum v. Slocum, 70 Iowa 259. Compare Butler v. Delano, 42 Iowa 350, in which it was declared that this case went to the very verge in sustaining tax sales, but perhaps not beyond the requirement of the law creating presumptions in favor of the validity of tax sales. Followed in Thompson v. Ware, 43 Iowa 455; Miller v. Corbin, 46 Iowa 150; Chandler v. Keeler, 46 Iowa 596; Truesdell v. Green, 57 Iowa 215.

Irregularity Cured by Lapse of Time.—Where a person gave money to the officer and requested that lands for which there were no bidders be struck off to him, and at the sale, certain lots, being publicly offered without receiving a bid, were struck off to him, the officer acting in good faith in so doing, it was held that while the sale did not comply with the statute it was a sale in fact and that the irregularity was cured by lapse of time. Dodge v. Emmons, 34 Kan. 732.

Collateral Attack.—In Wallace v. International Paper Co., 70 N. Y. App. Div. 298, it was held that an erroneous statement made by the comptroller to the owner of certain lands, to the effect that there was no unpaid tax thereon for a certain year, does not render a subsequent sale of the land for such unpaid tax purchaser to prevent competition,¹ or a combination among the purchasers to the effect that they will not bid against each other, or that they will take turns in bidding, will render the sale void.² But an agreement between two or more persons to bid jointly, if not made to prevent competition, but for the purpose of protecting their own interest, is not fraudulent.³ And the mere fact that one acts as the agent of two purchasers, or that two agents act for one purchaser,⁴ or that both principal and agent are present and bid,⁵ does not per se constitute a fraudulent and illegal combination. Nor is an illegal combination to be implied from the fact that there is no competition among the parties present.⁶ The fraud on the part of the purchaser at the sale will not defeat the title of a subsequent purchaser for value, and without notice of the fraud.⁷ And it has been held that the purchaser at the sale will not be affected by the fraud of others, to which he is not a party, and of which he was ignorant.⁸

void, but at most merely voidable and not open to collateral attack.

1. Misrepresentation by Purchaser to Prevent Competition. — Where the purchaser prevented competition by representing that it was useless to purchase, as the owner would defeat the sale by redemption, and thereby he was enabled to buy for a trifling amount, the sale was adjudged void. Slater v. Maxwell, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 268.

One who induces others to refrain from bidding at the sale by representing that he desires to buy in the land for the defendant in the tax suit, and who so purchases at such sale, will be treated as the trustee for the defendant, or the latter may have the sale set aside. Merrett v. Poulter, 96 Mo. 237.

2. Illegal Combination Among Purchasers. — Singer Mfg. Co. v. Yarger, 12 Fed. Rep. 487; Kerwer v. Allen, 31 Iowa 578; Easton v. Mawkinney, 37 Iowa 601; Johns v. Thomas, 47 Iowa 441; Frank v. Arnold, 73 Iowa 370.

Instance of Unlawful Agreement. — An agreement among several that they will advance funds and one shall buy, so as to prevent competition, and afterwards divide the land purchased, is fraudulent, and equity will relieve against the purchase. Dudley v. Little, 2 Ohio 504, 15 Am. Dec. 575.

bination, is not entitled to protection as an innocent purchaser. Watson v. Phelps, 40 Iowa 482; Light v. West, 42 Iowa 138; Springer v. Bartle, 46 Iowa 688; Merrett v. Poulter, 96 Mo. 237.

The Meaning of the Word "Forthwith" in a statute requiring the purchaser at a tax sale to pay "forthwith," has been held to be, as soon as the officer, in the orderly conduct of the business of his office, is prepared to receive and receipt for the moneys to be paid. Leavitt v. S. D. Mercer Co., 64 Neb. 31, modifying 61 Neb. 874.

Liability of Purchaser. — Under an Iowa statute requiring the officer to proceed as if no sale had been made, where the purchase price is not paid forthwith, an officer who pays the price for which lands were bid off on failure of the bidder to pay, cannot maintain an action against the bidder therefor, since there was in fact no sale and the bidder cannot be bound. Sheldon v. Steele, 114 Iowa 616.

A Statute Requiring a Deposit of fifty dollars by bidders as an evidence of good faith has been held to be reasonable. Whelen v. Stilwell, (Neb. 1903) 93 N. W. Rep. 189.

A Bid by the Officer for the county need not be paid at the time. McCauslin v. McGuire, 14 Kan. 234.

Officer Not Estopped to Show Nonpayment. — Under an Indiana statute making the officer liable to the holder of a certificate of sale for taxes previously satisfied by sale, the officer in defending a suit for such taxes is not estopped from showing that, at the sale, payment was made by a certain "ditch certificate" on which no cash was ever realized and which he had no authority to receive. Baldwin v. Shill, 3 Ind. App. 291.

North Carolina. — Under a statute requiring the purchaser to pay the amount of the taxes immediately, take a receipt, and have the same before the sale would be fatal, yet, in the absence of any such stipulation, the sale will not be invalidated by the fact that the purchase price was not immediately paid,¹ or that the officer accepted the promissory note of the purchaser for part of the purchase money.²

Where the Law Requires the Sale to Be Made to the "Highest Bidder," this method must be pursued, and the officer may not substitute another person therefor.³ By the "highest bidder" in these statutes is ordinarily meant the one who will pay the taxes and the incidental expenses, for the least quantity of land.⁴

c. PROCEEDINGS AFTER SALE—(1) Disposition of Surplus.—Where the sale produces a surplus over and above the amount necessary to discharge the taxes and legitimate charges, the surplus must be paid to the owner whose property was sold.⁵ A statute providing for the payment of the surplus to the owner has been held to mean the owner at the time of the sale, regardless of who was owner at the time of the assessment.⁶ Where there are two claimants to the surplus, and the officer does not interplead, but decides between them, and pays the money to the wrong person, he is personally liable for the amount to the person entitled thereto.⁷

(2) Report and Record.—The statutes of the various states provide for a report by the officer of his proceedings in the tax sale.⁸ These statutes, as registered, it has been held that a purchaser who fails to observe the mandate of the statute obtains no title. Hays v. Hunt, 85 N. Car. 303.

Pennsylvania—Surplus Bond.—In Pennsylvania it has been held that a statute requiring the officer to take a bond for whatever surplus there is, over and above the taxes and costs, is mandatory, and the taking of such bond is indispensable to the validity of the sale. Rupert v. Delp, 7 Pa. Super. Ct. 209; Cuttle v. Brockway, 24 Pa. St. 145; Donnel v. Bellas, 34 Pa. St. 157; Connelly v. Nedrow, 6 Watts (Pa.) 451.

Omission to File Bond Not Fatal.—White v. Willard, 1 Watts (Pa.) 42; Burns v. Lyon, 4 Watts (Pa.) 363; McDonald v. Maus, 8 Watts (Pa.) 364; Dreibach v. Berger, 6 W. & S. (Pa.) 564.

Proof that Bond Was Given.—Devinney v. Reynolds, 1 W. & S. (Pa.) 328; Dreibach v. Berger, 6 W. & S. (Pa.) 564; White v. Willard, 1 Watts (Pa.) 42; *Fager v. St. 9; Alexander v. Bush, 46 Pa. St. 62.

Various Matters pertaining to the surplus bond are decided in the following cases: Sutton v. Nelson, 10 S. & R. (Pa.) 238; Devinney v. Reynolds, 1 W. & S. (Pa.) 328; Frick v. Sterrett, 4 W. & S. (Pa.) 269; Turner v. Waterson, 4 W. & S. (Pa.) 171; Gibson v. Robbins, 9 Watts (Pa.) 156; Rogers v. Johnson, 67 Pa. St. 43.

2. Receiving Note of Purchaser.—Longfellow v. Quimby, 29 Me. 196, 48 Am. Dec. 525.

Security for Payment.—In Buffalo v. Balcom, 134 N. Y. 532, it was held that there is no rule of public policy which requires tax sales to be made for cash, and that a city may, when not contrary to its charter, allow the sale to be made upon credit, with such security as the authorities may deem sufficient to protect the interests of the city.

3. Highest Bidder.—Keene v. Houghton, 19 Me. 368; Cardigan v. Page, 6 N. H. 182; Bean v. Thompson, 19 N. H. 290, 49 Am. Dec. 154.

Evidence.—Where the record of the sale shows that its terms were that the highest bidder should be the purchaser, and then shows that M. was the purchaser, this is evidence that M. was the highest bidder. Smith v. Messer, 17 N. H. 420.

4. "Highest Bidder" Defined.—Lovejoy v. Lunt, 48 Me. 377.

5. Payment of Surplus to Owner.—People v. Palmer, 10 N. Y. App. Div. 395; McDuffee v. Collins, 117 Ala. 487; Thompson v. Cox, 42 W. Va. 566.

A Mortgagee Whose Interest Is Not Assessed has been held not to be a person to whom the surplus proceeds of a sale of the mortgaged premises should be paid, where the statute provided that such interest be assessed and that the mortgagee be regarded, for the purposes of taxation, as a joint owner of the property. Worcester v. Boston, 179 Mass. 41.

Mortgagee in Possession, Legal Owner.—Sutherland v. Brooklyn, 156 N. Y. 605, reversing 87 Hun (N. Y.) 82.

7. Officer Personally Liable.—McDuffee v. Collins, 117 Ala. 487.

8. What Acts Must Be Recited.—Acts in the proceeding of sale which are prerequisite to the right of sale must be shown by the return to have been performed. De Forest v. Thompson, 40 Fed. Rep. 375; Tax Title Cases, 105 Tenn. 243.

But where the omission to perform a certain act would be a mere irregularity, the failure of the report to recite that such act was done is not fatal. Dumphy v. Auditor Gen., 123 Mich. 354; Burns v. Ford, 124 Mich. 274.

Unreported Sale Invalid Against Subsequent Purchaser.—Under a statute of the District of Columbia, requiring the collector to report the a rule, are mandatory, and require the return to recite, according to the provisions of each particular statute, facts showing the sufficiency of the notice of sale,¹ the time and place of sale,² a description of the land,³ and the estate therein sold,⁴ and, where an entire tract is sold, that this course was necessary to pay the taxes due.⁵ The return should also state the name of the purchaser⁶ and the amount for which the property sold.⁷ The return must be made by the officer who conducted the sale,⁸ must be officially signed,⁹ and filed within the time prescribed by statute.¹⁰ It is not intended by the fore-sale to the recorder of deeds, a sale of which there has been no report to the recorder is invalid, as against one who afterwards purchased the land for the full value thereof, and without notice of the sale. King v. District of Columbia, MacArthur & M. (D. C.) 36.

Report by Reference to Tax Records.—In Michigan it has been held that a report reciting the mere fact of the sale and "referring to the tax record for the particulars thereof," is sufficient. Jenison v. Conklin, 114 Mich. 9.

Unattested Copy a Sufficient Report.—Benton v. Merrill, 68 N. H. 369.

Presumptions.—It has been provided in certain jurisdictions that, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, the report will be presumed to have been duly filed. Upton v. Kennedy, 36 Mich. 215; Church v. Nester, 126 Mich. 547; Henderson v. Hughes County, 13 S. Dak. 576. But see McFadden v. Brady, 120 Mich. 699.

Curing Provision in Constitution.—A provision in the constitution of Mississippi that the courts shall apply the same liberal principles in favor of tax sales as sales by execution, cures the failure of the clerk to file the proper return within the time prescribed. Wolfe v. Murphy, 60 Miss. 1. See also Hopkins v. Sandridge, 31 Miss. 668.

Rights of Purchaser Protected.—Brien v. O'Shaughnessy, 3 Lea (Tenn.) 724.

In West Virginia it is provided that the recorder shall note the time of filing the report going to lay down any general rule, but merely to direct the practitioner to the statutes and decisions of his own state upon the particular requisites of the return. When required by statute, the report of the sale must be verified,¹ and the affidavit must be in the form prescribed.² The provisions that the officer's return shall be recorded are also imperative.³

(3) Confirmation. — In states where the judicial confirmation of tax sales is provided for by statute, the sale is not complete and no title vests thereby until the sale is confirmed.⁴

Notice Is Required to Be Given to the Owner that he may have an opportunity to oppose the confirmation,⁵ but no one will be heard to object who is not adversely interested.⁶

The Court Will Refuse to Confirm the sale when it is shown to have been fraudulent⁷ or irregular.⁸

Reasonable Compliance with Statute. — A statute requiring the report to be filed within ten days after the sale was held to have been sufficiently complied with by filing eleven days after the sale. Langley v. Batchelder, 69 N. H. 566.

Michigan Statute. — Under a statute requiring the treasurer to make a report of tax sales, after the confirmation thereof, to the auditor general, a report twelve days after the confirmation was seasonably made. Youngs v. Peters, 118 Mich. 45; Detroit F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Wood, 118 Mich. 31.

Order Equivalent to Confirmation. — Where the court enters an order for the execution of a deed and for possession of the premises, this is tantamount to a confirmation, though prior thereto the usual confirmation was made by a court not legally constituted. Miller v. Reynolds, (Ark. 1890) 13 S. W. Rep. 597.

In Michigan the tax sale becomes confirmed by the failure of the owner to file objections within a specified time, and no formal confirmation is necessary. Conley v. McMillan, 120 Mich. 694.

The Order of Confirmation must identify the sale which it confirms.¹

Conclusiveness of Confirmation. — The confirmation may be conclusive² or only presumptive evidence of the regularity of the sale.³

(4) Certificate. — The various statutes regulating tax sales usually require, as a part of, and essential to, the sale, a proper certificate of sale.⁴ The certificate must be executed at the time of the sale or within a reasonable time thereafter,⁵ and it is required, as a rule, to recite the fact of sale and the name of the purchaser, to give a description of the property which will identify the premises, and to state such other matters as the particular statutes prescribe.⁶ The certificate must be properly signed⁷ and when executed by an officer of another state, it must carry proof that it bears the genuine signature of an officer of such state, authorized by law to execute it.⁸

The Purpose and Effect of the Certificate is not to pass title to the land, but simply to place in the hands of the purchaser evidence that he is entitled to the execution of a deed, or to receive the money necessary to effect redemption.⁹ The certificate is usually made prima facie evidence of the validity of the sale, and of the regularity of the various proceedings by which the sale was accom-

Equitable Interference. — Where the owner of the land makes no offer to pay the taxes justly due, equity will not, on account of mere irregularities, decree the cancellation of the certificate³ or enjoin its assessment.⁴

Discrepancy Between Certificate and Record of Sale. — In the event of a discrepancy between the certificate of sale and the record of sale, it seems that the record will control.⁵

When the Certificate Is Required to Be Recorded, it must be done within a reasonable time.⁶

Assignment of Certificate. — The certificate is not a negotiable instrument, and the owner's interest in the land will not pass by a mere delivery of the certificate,⁷ but the statutes generally give the purchaser the right to assign his certificate and provide the manner in which a valid assignment shall be made.⁸

1. Certificate Prima Facie Evidence of Validity of Sale. — De Treville v. Smalls, 98 U. S. 517; Keely v. Sanders, 99 U. S. 441; Sherry v. McKinley, 99 U. S. 496; Billings v. Stark, 15 Fla. 297; Lee v. Breezly, 54 Iowa 660; Bennett v. Blatz, 44 Minn. 56; Bryant v. Estabrook, 16 Neb. 217; Darr v. Berquist, 63 Neb. 713; Ure v. Reichenberg, 63 Neb. 899; Ryan v. West, 63 Neb. 894; Gallentine v. Fullerton, (Neb. 1903) 93 N. W. Rep. 932; Overing v. Foote, 43 N. Y. 290.

Statute Constitutional. — A statute making the certificate prima facie evidence of the facts therein recited is not unconstitutional as impairing the right of trial by jury. State v. Van Every, 75 Mo. 530.

When Proven by Parol. — The certificate has the prima facie effect given it by statute, even where, on account of its loss or destruction, its contents are proved by parol. Mitchell v. McFarland, 47 Minn. 535.

Presumption Not Overcome by Missing Affidavit. — The presumption of regularity arising from the certificate of sale is not overcome by the fact that the records do not contain the affidavit of the posting of the notice of sale required by statute. Cook v. John Schroeder Lumber Co., 85 Minn. 374.

Insufficient Certificate No Evidence. — Where the certificate fails to recite any matter which under the law is a matter of substance, it is invalid as a statutory certificate of sale and a conveyance, and is incompetent evidence for any purpose in the case. Farnham v. Jones, 32 Minn. 7; Gilfillan v. Hobart, 35 Minn. 185; Vanderlinde v. Canfield, 40 Minn. 541.

In California, the certificate is not evidence of any matters not therein recited, nor of any matter necessarily preceding its valid existence. Hall v. Theisen, 61 Cal. 524.

In Kentucky, it has been held that the certificate cannot be used to prove the jurisdiction of the officer making the sale. Smith v. Ryan, 88 Ky. 636.

A Statute Giving Presumptive Validity to the Deed does not necessarily operate to give any special force to a certificate of sale. Quinby v. North American Coal, etc., Co., 2 Heisk. (Tenn.) 596.

2. Overcoming Presumption. — Roberts v. Fargo First Nat. Bank, 8 N. Dak. 504.

Certificate Not Conclusive as to Ownership of Property. — Under a certificate of sale of island lands by United States tax commissioners, the vacant marshes surrounding the island being the property of the state, and, therefore, not taxable under the Act of Congress, did not pass, and evidence may be introduced to establish the ownership of the state. State v. Pinckney, 22 S. Car. 484.

3. Payment of Taxes Required Before Cancellation of Certificate. — Craig v. Pollock, 5 Dill. (U. S.) 449; Wood v. Helmer, 10 Neb. 65; Hart v. Smith, 44 Wis. 213. See also MacKinnon v. Auditor-Gen., 130 Mich. 552.

4. Enjoining Assignment. — Hagaman v. Cloud County, 19 Kan. 394.

5. Discrepancy Between Certificate and Record. — McCready v. Sexton, 29 Iowa 356, 4 Am. Rep. 214; Henderson v. Oliver, 32 Iowa 512; Clark v. Thompson, 37 Iowa 536; Kneeland v. Hull, 116 Mich. 55. Contra, McQuade v. Jaffray, 47 Minn. 326.

6. Recording Certificate. — Reeds v. Morton, 9 Mo. 878, holding that where the certificate was not recorded until after the period of redemption had expired and a deed been made, the deed was void, since the failure to record the certificate deprived the owner of the notice of sale and opportunity to redeem which the law intended he should have.

Fees for Recording the Certificate where voluntarily paid, under a mistake of law, cannot be recovered. Morgan Park v. Knopf, 199 Ill. 444.

7. Not Negotiable Instrument. — Horn v. Garry, 49 Wis. 464. See also White v. Brooklyn, 122 N. Y. 53.

8. Statutory Manner of Assignment. — See Green v. Hellman, 61 Neb. 875; State v. Winn, 19 Wis. 304, 88 Am. Dec. 689; Hyde v. Kenosha County, 43 Wis. 129; Horn v. Garry, 49 Wis. 464; Smith v. Todd, 55 Wis. 459; Jackson v. Jacksonport, 56 Wis. 310; Dreutzer v. Smith, 56 Wis. 292; Potts v. Cooley, 56 Wis. 45; Lovelace v. Tabor Mines, etc., Co., 29 Colo. 62.

Mere Signature Insufficient Assignment. — Under a statute providing that the certificate "shall be assignable by indorsement," it was held that the terms of the assignment must be written upon the instrument as well as the name of the assignor. Territory v. Perea, 6 N. Mex. 511.

But in Iowa it has been held, under a similar statute that the indorsement in blank and delivery of the certificate to another person, with intent to transfer the property therein, rendered

An assignment in due form vests in the assignee all the right and title in the land which the certificate conferred upon the purchaser, but no more;¹ for the certificate in the hands of an assignee is chargeable with all the infirmities that would affect it in the possession of the original holder.² However, where the owner buys his own land at an illegal sale, and assigns for a valuable consideration his certificate, he cannot be heard to say that the certificate is invalid in the hands of the assignee or those claiming under him, on the ground that the sale was void;³ nor may a purchaser, after he has assigned the certificate, reinvest himself with ownership thereof by fraudulently procuring the certificate to be redelivered to him, and erasing the assignment, and having a deed made to himself.⁴

Descent to Heir at Law. — Upon the death of the purchaser, the certificate will descend to the heir at law.⁵

XVI. FORFEITURE FOR NONCOMPLIANCE WITH TAX LAWS — 1. In General. — It is provided by statute in some of the states that lands on which taxes are, or ought to be, assessed shall be forfeited to the state in case of the failure or refusal of the owner to comply with specified legal requirements designed to facilitate the collection of the revenue.⁶

such other person the lawful holder of the certificate. Swan v. Whaley, 75 Iowa 623.

Designation of Assignee. — An assignment of a tax sale certificate to "J. M. Quimby" is no evidence of right thereby in "J. M. Quimby & Co." Quimby v. North American Coal, etc., Co., 2 Heisk. (Tenn.) 596.

Who May Acquire Certificate. — Stubblefield v. Borders, 92 Ill. 279; Coleman v. Hart, 37 Wis. 180.

Evidence of Assignment. — Where the certificate is issued to one person and the deed to another, there must be some evidence of an assignment of the certificate by the original purchaser. Florida Sav. Bank v. Brittain, 20 Fla. 507.

Burden of Proof as to Bona Fides of Assignment. Where the assignor denies that the assignment was for value, and contends that it was for another purpose than to transfer the title, he must establish it. Bird v. Jones, 37 Ark. 195.

Where Fraud in the Sale Is Established, and the assignment is also alleged to have been fraudulent, the assignee must show affirmatively that he is a bona fide purchaser for value. Light v. West, 42 Iowa 138.

Rights of Assignee of Original Certificate as Against Purchaser of Duplicate. — The purchaser of a duplicate certificate cannot acquire a title thereunder as against or superior to that of a subsequent assignee of the original certificate, who purchased it and obtained a deed thereon without notice of the issue of the duplicate or of the rights of the holder thereof. Griswold v. Wilson, 36 Iowa 156.

Merger of Certificate in Legal Title. — Where the legal owner of the land becomes the owner of the certificates covering the same, and afterwards releases to another all his estate, title, interest, and claim, in and to the land, his interest therein by virtue of the certificate passes with the legal title by the conveyance, and becomes merged in the legal title, so that no valid tax deed may thereafter be issued on the certificate. Bennett v. Keehn, 57 Wis. 582.

Ambiguous Indorsement Explained by Parol. — An indorsement upon the certificate of sale by the officer acknowledging the receipt of an amount in full of the taxes, interest, and costs, but not showing whether the money was received in redemption of the lands or in consideration of the assignment of the certificate, may be explained by parol. Woodman v. Clapp, 21 Wis. 350.

2. Nature of Title Acquired by State.—The rule generally adopted is that a forfeiture vests in the state the absolute title to the property forfeited;¹ and if the state has two distinct titles, a subsequent sale by the state passes both titles.² But in some states the forfeiture is treated as merely vesting the title in the state as security for taxes, and the title of the owner can only be defeated by showing forfeiture and sale by the state.³ The forfeiture is to the state, and, where it has once accrued, no possession adverse to the proprietor can run against the state.⁴

3. Sale of Forfeited Lands.—Provision is usually, if not always, made for the sale by the state or county of the lands which it has acquired by forfeiture,⁵ payment of the taxes charged being made out of the proceeds of the sale.⁶

4. Constitutionality — Construction of Statutes.—Statutes providing for forfeiture for noncompliance with tax laws are usually held to be constitutional, even where the title is vested in the state without an inquisition of office.⁷ Sometimes an inquisition of office, or other adjudication to which the owner is a party, is deemed necessary to divest title,⁸ and a statute will

In America, Forfeitures Were First Directed for nonperformance of tax laws by the legislature of Virginia, several years before the adoption of the Constitution of the United States, in order to determine the titles to unoccupied lands and to promote their settlement. Martin v. Snowden, 18 Gratt. (Va.) 100.

Listing in Good Faith.—When a taxpayer in good faith has listed the lands as his own, the lands are not forfeited because he has not complied with certain formalities in obtaining title. Lohr v. Miller, 12 Gratt. (Va.) 452.

Payment of Taxes on Land Sufficiently Described to identify it will preclude a forfeiture under another description which is inaccurate. Kelly v. Salinger, 53 Ark. 114.

Forfeiture Not Avoided by Payment of Current Taxes.—The owner of land on which back taxes are due cannot avoid a forfeiture thereof by paying the current taxes. Biggins v. People, 106 Ill. 270.

Payment of Amount Chargeable to Tenant in Common Does Not Preclude Forfeiture.—Smith v. Tharp, 17 W. Va. 221.

A Forfeiture Declared After Due Payment of Taxes is void, and the state takes no title to convey to a purchaser. Davis v. Hare, 32 Ark. 387.

Where Land Is in Two Counties it is not subject to forfeiture because not entered in the tax books of both counties. State v. Cheney, 45 W. Va. 478.

not be construed to divest title without inquisition of office, except by express terms or necessary implication.¹ The statutes providing for the forfeiture of lands for nonpayment of taxes are in derogation of common law and must be construed strictly. Doubtful words and phrases must be interpreted in favor of the owner. All statutory provisions must be strictly observed.²

5. Action to Test Validity of Forfeiture. — An action to test the validity of a forfeiture may be maintained by any person interested therein against the county in which the lands are situated,³ or, if they have been sold, against the purchaser.⁴

6. Redemption. — Usually a period of redemption is allowed the proprietor,⁵ and special provision is sometimes made for persons under disability.⁶ Sometimes a further period to redeem is given by subsequent statutes.⁷

7. Waiver. — Strict forfeiture may be waived, both by the state's extension of the time for payment by acknowledging the right of the owner to any balance which may remain in the treasury after sale, and by the continued levy and assessment of taxes after the title in the state is supposed to be complete by forfeiture.⁸ But where the legislature extends the time for redemption the owner must avail himself of the extension in order to release the forfeiture.⁹

On the other hand, the failure on the part of the state to comply with the conditions of a statute extending the time of redemption may be remedied by legislation.¹ A county board has no power to set aside a forfeiture when it has once accrued.² Neither the possession of the land nor the entry of it on the commissioners' books, after the land becomes under those acts absolutely forfeited, can divest the title of the state.³

a. DEFINITION. — Literally the word "redemption" signifies a buying back or repurchase; but in its legal sense it means the recovery or repurchase of property which has been sold or forfeited for nonpayment of a charge on it.⁴

b. AS DISTINGUISHED FROM PURCHASE. — It is often difficult to distinguish between a redemption and a purchase of the tax purchaser's interest. In general, a payment by the owner or by one acting or supposing himself to act in the owner's interest will be construed as a redemption, while it is regarded as a sale if the payment is made by a stranger.⁵

2. Nature of Right — a. IN GENERAL. — In the absence of agreement the right of redemption does not exist except as permitted by statute,⁶ and it can be exercised only as the statute prescribes.⁷ The owner of the property may effect redemption by contract with the holder of the certificate.⁸ But if he elects to take that course, he must know at his peril whether the one with whom he deals is the owner of the certificate,⁹ and the agreement, if oral, must be certain and unambiguous in its terms and must be taken advantage of within a reasonable time.¹⁰

b. CHARACTERISTICS OF RIGHT. — The right of redemption is an interest in land, which may be conveyed or devised, and which descends in the same manner as other real property.¹¹ But it cannot be attached in an action at law.¹ Neither the issuing of a deed to the purchaser before the expiration of the statutory period² nor a judgment can deprive a person of the right.³

c. NECESSITY FOR NOTICE. — No notice of an intention to redeem is necessary,⁴ nor is it requisite to give a notice that the land has been redeemed.⁵

3. Construction of Redemption Statutes. — It may be stated as a general rule that statutes conferring the right of redemption are construed liberally in favor of him whose land has been sold for taxes.⁶

4. Effect of Redemption. — a. IN GENERAL. — The effect of redemption is to divest the outstanding legal title on the payment of what is due to the holder of such title.⁷ After redemption a tax deed to the purchaser effects nothing,⁸ and if the sale is confirmed the confirmation will be set aside.⁹ If the purchaser had another title than the tax title he may assert it, notwithstanding the exercise of the right of redemption.¹⁰

b. REDEMPTION BY OWNER. — If the owner pays the redemption money, the effect is to restore the land and the title thereto precisely as they were held prior to the tax sale.¹¹

c. REDEMPTION BY GRANTEE OF OWNER. — Where a grantee of the owner redeems from a tax sale, the land is not thereby freed from the lien of a mort.

gagee whose mortgage was executed before the land was allowed to go to the tax sale and prior to the conveyance to the grantee.¹

d. REDEMPTION BY MORTGAGEE OR OTHER LIENHOLDER.—Where a mortgagee or other lienholder redeems, he has a lien upon the land for the amount paid, with interest thereon, in like manner as if the sum had been included in his mortgage or lien.²

e. REDEMPTION BY OCCUPANT.—A redemption by the occupant of land gives him no lien for the moneys paid. His redemption is simply for the protection of such right of occupancy as he may have independently of the redemption. The mere fact of redemption gives to the occupant no interest in the land or no right of occupancy as against a deed given by the owner of the land to a third person.³

f. REDEMPTION BY ONE OF SEVERAL LIENHOLDERS.—Where land on which there are several liens is redeemed by one of the lienholders, the title to the land and the liens thereon stand in the same condition as though no sale for delinquent taxes had taken place.⁴

g. EFFECT OF PARAMOUNT TITLE.—It has been held that a redemption, in case there is a paramount title, will inure to the benefit of the true owner.⁵

5. Who May Redeem—a. IN GENERAL.—Any right which in law or equity amounts to an ownership in the land; any right of entry on it to its possession or enjoyment, or any part of it, which can be deemed an estate in it, makes the person the owner, so far as it is necessary to give him the right to redeem.⁶

c. AGENT OF OWNER.—Any payment by an agent or other person occupying a confidential relation to the owner will inure to the benefit of the owner, even though made with the agent's own money.⁷

The Authority of the Agent may be established by slight evidence,⁸ and it has been held that such authority will be presumed.⁹

b. WHEN PERIOD BEGINS TO RUN.—As a general rule the time for redemption begins to run from the date of the sale, in the absence of an express statutory provision on the subject.¹

What Is Date of Sale.—There is some conflict as to when the sale is completed so as to start the running of the redemption period. The rule generally adopted is that the real time is when the bid is accepted,² but there are many cases that hold that the sale is not complete until the execution and recording of the deed.³

Time Fixed by Statute.—Sometimes the date from which the time for redemption begins to run is fixed by statute.⁴

c. COMPUTATION OF TIME.—In computing the period for redemption the day of sale is excluded,⁵ and where the last day falls on Sunday the right to redeem extends through the next day.⁶

d. EXTENSION OF PERIOD FOR REDEMPTION—(1) In General.—While, as a general rule, there can be no redemption after the expiration of the period limited by statute,⁷ the time may be extended in certain instances.

(2) By Statute. — Any statutory extension of the period for redemption vests a substantial property right in the redemptioner, and is as much a portion of the redemption period as the original time.¹

(3) Court May Extend Time on Equitable Grounds. — The court may extend the statutory period within which redemption is to be made if the circumstances render it equitable,² but if the redemptioner does not redeem within the proper time, but depends on an unauthorized extension by the court, he loses his right.³

(4) Waiver of Requirements as to Time. — The purchaser, by express agreement,⁴ or by the receipt of the money after the period allowed for redemption has expired, may waive a strict compliance with the requirements as to time. Payment thus accepted by him will constitute a perfect redemption.⁵

A Public Officer, however, cannot waive the purchaser's right, and acceptance by him will not work a redemption.⁶

e. PERSONS UNDER DISABILITY — (1) In General. — The same strict rules apply to persons under disability as to others, unless the statute otherwise provides.⁷

(2) Statutory Provisions. — Statutes usually provide for an extension of time in favor of minors, married women, idiots, insane persons, and others under disabilities.⁸

(3) Nature of Title. — An infant, to bring himself within the statute, must have been the owner of the property at the time of the tax sale.⁹ So must a married woman.¹ One claiming under such a statute must show himself to be within its terms.²

(4) Effect of Extension.—Statutes giving a person under disability a longer time to redeem merely extend the period; they do not otherwise affect the right of the former owner,³ nor suspend the right of the purchaser to take out his deed at the time allowed by statute. His title is at most subject to be defeated by redemption after the removal of disability.⁴ Such statutes grant an additional privilege, and do not take away the right to redeem during the continuance of the disability.⁵

(5) What May Be Redeemed.—As the right to redeem after the usual period has expired rests on statutes, only such interests as are included therein may be redeemed.⁶

(6) Effect of Subsequent Statute.—The extension of the time for redemption given to minors cannot be divested by a statute passed after forfeiture.⁷

7. Payment and Tender—a. IN GENERAL.—Payment and tender are alike effectual to revest title in the former owner.⁸ If payment or tender is properly performed, it makes no difference whether or not it is entered correctly on the record, or whether the officer issues a proper certificate.⁹ Tender must be of the whole amount,¹⁰ and must be continuous,¹¹ unconditional,¹² and made in good faith. If made collusively, on an agreement that the money shall be refunded, it has no effect.¹³ Where the owner has until a certain time to redeem, a tender on that day by the owner or agent is sufficient.¹⁴ A mere offer to redeem without tender is generally inoperative.¹⁵

1. Married Woman Must Have Owned Land at Time of Sale.—See Finch v. Brown, 8 Ill. 488, which holds that the feme covert must own the land sold at the time of sale. If it belonged to her husband at that time, her contingent right of dower does not entitle her to redeem.

2. Redemptioner Must Show Himself Within Terms of Statute.—Harding v. Vaughn, 36 Fed. Rep. 742.

b. REFUSAL TO ACCEPT. — If a tender of payment is refused solely on the ground that there is no right to redeem, the sufficiency of the tender not being questioned, it has been held to work a redemption.¹ But where the redemptioner, on the refusal to accept the money, withdraws his money and leaves the purchaser in possession for several years, the right of redemption is thereby abandoned.² If a mortgagee makes tender, and the purchaser refuses to accept, the mortgagee may enforce the mortgage.³

c. EFFECT OF TENDER. — Tender relieves the owner from all liability for costs and subsequent charges,⁴ and the purchaser in possession is bound for rents accruing after that date.⁵ A deed made after tender or payment is void.⁶

d. EFFECT OF ERRONEOUSLY MARKING LAND "REDEEMED." — The marking of the land by mistake as "redeemed" avails nothing to the owner who has not paid or tendered the redemption money.⁷

e. KIND OF MONEY REQUIRED. — Sometimes statutes designate the kind of money required for tender or payment.⁸ If the public officer whose duty it is to receive payment disregards the statutory requirement, he may be compelled to pay over lawful money to the holder of the tax title redeemed.⁹ Payment by check may be good, if not objected to.¹⁰

f. TO WHOM MADE. — The statutes provide, frequently, that tender or payment must be made to the person possessing the tax title at the time of redemption;¹¹ for example, to the purchaser or his agent,¹² or to the purchaser's assignee.¹³ An ineffectual assignment does not make it necessary to pay or tender to the assignee.¹⁴ The statutes provide, sometimes, for payment or tender to some specified public officer;¹⁵ this being done, the redemption is effectual even though such officer withholds the money.¹⁶ When the statutes stipulate the person to whom payment or tender may be made, they do not, as a general rule, preclude payment or tender to any other person entitled to receive it.¹⁷

g. WHEN DISPENSED WITH — (1) Conduct of Purchaser. — A tender of the amount necessary to redeem may be excused by the conduct of the purchaser, as where he waives the requirement,¹ refuses to receive the money,² evades the redemptioner so that a tender cannot be made,³ or prevents payment or tender within the time by fraud or deception.⁴

(2) When Amount Cannot Be Discovered. — Tender and payment may be excused if the amount cannot be discovered.⁵

h. MISTAKE OR FRAUD OF OFFICER. — One seeking to redeem may rely on information given him as to time and amount by the proper officer in response to his inquiries.⁶ Thus, if the officer states that no taxes are due or if the amount named be too small, the redemption is valid if the sum given be actually paid or tendered,⁷ but not otherwise.⁸ If the owner be led by the officer to believe that there has been but one tax sale, and redemption is made from that, the owner may redeem from an undisclosed sale, on discovering the fact, even though the statutory time has elapsed.⁹ The inquiry made of the officer must, however, be specific,¹⁰ and refer to matters which it is his duty to disclose.¹¹

i. EQUITABLE REDEMPTION. — Payment may be made otherwise than by the passing of money from the owner to the purchaser. If the latter is indebted to the former, the money due on the debt may be applied toward the redemption price, and if as great, such application may constitute an equitable redemption.¹²

8. Amount — a. IN GENERAL. — The amount required for redemption is usually the sum of the purchaser's bid, with a specified interest by way of penalty, together with costs and subsequent taxes paid by the purchaser, with interest.¹³ The tax to be paid by the redemptioner includes state, county, persons to whom notice must be given. In some states it is sufficient to serve the notice on either the owner or the occupant of the land, while in others it is provided that the notice shall be served on the occupant and also on the owner and the person to whom the land was assessed, if the two last-named persons are to be found in the county.¹ The fact that the occupant is unknown to the purchaser will not dispense with notice,² nor will the fact that the one in possession had in fact no interest in the land.³

Where the Land Is Taxed as Unknown, and no person is in the occupancy of it, it is not necessary to serve notice on any person.⁴

Notice to One Member of a Firm, where land is assessed to the firm, is insufficient.⁵

A Mortgagee in the absence of a statutory provision is not entitled to a notice.⁶

A Corporation requires the same notice as does an individual.⁷

assignee should publish the notice.¹ The making of diligent inquiry, and the failure to find as a result thereof, must precede publication.² The inquiry must be such as will enable the affiant to ascertain that the party as to whom the inquiry has been made cannot be found in the county.³ Notice by publication may be made where the name of the owner is unknown as well as where the land is assessed in the name of a known owner. If it is required to be addressed to any one, it can be addressed to the "unknown owner."⁴ If notice can be given personally, notwithstanding nonresidence, such a notice is generally good, although notice by publication might be equally so.⁵ If the publication is to be in a newspaper printed in the county, one published there answers this description, although actually printed elsewhere.⁶ If it is to be in the nearest newspaper to the county, the one published in the town nearest the county line is the proper one.⁷ The statutes generally require that the notice be published a certain number of times at stated intervals.⁸ Unless the statutory provisions are complied with, the conveyance to the purchaser at the tax sale is void.⁹ Provisions sometimes exist requiring notice by posting.¹⁰ Where the statute requires that the redemption notice be posted, an omission to do this is fatal to the tax deed.¹¹

g. AFFIDAVITS OF SERVICE AND PUBLICATION — (1) In General. — Where the statutes provide for an affidavit of service or publication, to be filed with the officer whose duty it is to execute the tax deed, the service of notice is not complete until this is done,¹² and the affidavit is a prerequisite to the validity of the tax deed.¹³ It must be made by the person designated by the statute. Unless so made, it is, in legal effect, no notice.¹⁴ It cannot be made by the proprietor or publisher of the newspaper unless such person is the agent or attorney of the certificate holder.¹ If so made, however, the defect cannot be taken advantage of after the lapse of the statutory period within which the action to set the deed aside may be brought.²

(2) Contents of Affidavit.—The affidavit must show a compliance with the statute regarding notice.³

The Day on Which Service Was Made must be stated. A mere general statement that notice was served is not sufficient.⁴

The Owner of the Land at the time the notice was served should be named.⁵

The Person in Possession when notice was served must be named.⁶

The Fact that the Property Was Occupied must be shown, and it must be stated that the person on whom notice was served was the occupant.⁷

The Person of Whom Diligent Inquiry Was Made need not be specified.⁸

The Affidavit Must Be Signed, and unless this is done the proof of service is insufficient.⁹

A Copy of the Notice Need Not Be Attached to the affidavit, nor need a copy be filed with the treasurer.¹⁰ Omissions in the affidavit cannot be cured, nor can defects be supplied by parol testimony.¹¹ redemption, nor other facts;¹ neither is it a muniment of title in itself.²

b. BOOKS OF REDEMPTION. — The books of redemption are competent evidence.³

c. TAX DEED. — A tax deed is presumptive evidence not only of the fact of giving the notice, but also that the notice was in due form of law.⁴

d. AFFIDAVIT OF PUBLICATION. — An affidavit by the purchaser that notice has been posted and published in every issue of a designated newspaper during the proper period is prima facie evidence of such publication.⁵

e. RECEIPT OF OFFICER AUTHORIZED TO RECEIVE PAYMENT. — The receipt of the officer authorized to receive payment of the taxes is admissible to prove the fact of redemption.⁶

f. EVIDENCE TO SHOW RIGHT TO REDEEM. — The facts on which the right of redemption is based may be shown by evidence other than the affidavit of such facts. And a failure of the officer to file the affidavit will not defeat the redemption.⁷

g. EVIDENCE TO PROVE TENDER AND PAYMENT. — Tender and payment are matters in pais, which may always be shown by parol evidence in order to defeat a tax title.⁸

h. EVIDENCE TO PROVE OCCUPANCY. — Where proof of the occupancy is made in the application to redeem, and is supported by affidavits, such application and affidavits are admissible to show such occupancy.⁹

i. EVIDENCE TO SHOW RESIDENCE OF OWNER. — Where the place of residence of the owner, a married woman, at the time of the assessment is in issue in a suit to redeem between third parties, neither of whom claims under the owner's husband, it is proper to exclude evidence tending to show where the husband was assessed. His acts and admissions in regard to payment and assessment of taxes are inadmissible so far as the residence of his wife is concerned.¹⁰

j. BURDEN OF PROVING PROPER NOTICE. — The burden is on the party claiming under the tax deed to show that he has complied with the statute relative to notice.¹¹

k. PROOF OF TITLE NOT NECESSARY FOR REDEMPTION. — No proof of title need be deduced before the officer to whom redemption money is to be paid. It is enough to show some connection with the title, past or present, by deed, descent, contract, or possession.¹²

11. Equitable Jurisdiction — a. IN GENERAL. — Redemption cannot be had in a court of equity, in the absence of a statute giving it jurisdiction.¹³ The statutes, however, sometimes grant power to the court to entertain jurisdiction of a bill to redeem.¹ Such a suit cannot be the means of determining the validity of the tax title; that is assumed.² The petitioner must offer to "do equity;" he must be ready to pay all past dues, whether outlawed or not.³ If the bill be brought by a part owner it need not describe his interest.⁴ Such a bill does not lie merely to redeem land from the lien of a tax paid by another part owner.⁵ The decree will be that the purchaser quitclaim to the owner.⁶

An Injunction to Restrain the Execution of the Tax Deed will be granted if tender⁷ has been properly made and refused.⁷

A Writ of Mandamus May Be Allowed in such a case to compel the officer to accept the money and grant the redemption.⁸

b. WHERE VOID TAX DEED IS ISSUED. — Where a void tax deed is issued the claim of the purchaser may be removed as a cloud upon the owner's title,⁹ or it may be treated as a nullity and the land recovered from the tax purchaser in an action of ejectment.¹⁰

c. FORECLOSURE OF RIGHT OF REDEMPTION. — The statutes of many states provide that the right of redemption may be foreclosed.¹¹ The statutory provisions must be strictly followed.¹² An action to foreclose cannot be maintained after redemption, for the purpose of securing costs.¹³ Only those made parties to a bill to foreclose are bound by the decree.¹⁴

XVIII. DISTRIBUTION AND DISPOSITION OF AVAILS OF TAXATION — Each Year's Income Should Pay Each Year's Expenses. — It has sometimes been provided by state constitutions that no indebtedness or liability incurred in any one year shall be paid out of the income or revenue of any future year.¹⁵ But it has been recognized in many cases that where no such constitutional provision exists, a debt arising in one year may constitute a prior claim against the revenue of a subsequent year, and that, if necessary, an increased assessment may be made in order to pay such debt.¹⁶

Funds Should Be Used for the Specific Purposes Intended. — It is a very generally recognized rule that in appropriating or disposing of tax funds, money raised for a specific purpose cannot be used for any other purpose.¹⁷ It has been held, however, that where there is no statute or rule of law forbidding it a tax raised professedly for one purpose may be applied to any other legitimate purpose.¹

Taxes to Pay Interest on Railroad Bonds. — Money raised by taxation in a town or county is sometimes appropriated by the legislature to the payment of interest on bonds issued to aid in the construction of a railroad. In such case the fund so raised is regarded as a trust fund in the hands of the county or township treasurer which may not be diverted by him to any other use.²

Power of Legislature to Apply Tax Funds. — The power of the legislature to apply funds raised by taxation, either state, county, or municipal, is limited only by the constitution of the state, and when such power is exercised within constitutional limits such legislative appropriation does not amount to the taking of property without just compensation, nor to the impairing of the obligation of any contract.³ But an appropriation by the legislature in excess of the constitutional limitation is void and imposes no obligation on the people or on a subsequent legislature to raise money thus improperly appropriated.⁴

Appropriation by County and Municipal Authorities. — The power of county and municipal authorities to dispose of tax funds in their hands is usually regulated by statute or municipal charter, and within such limitations such authorities have a rather wide discretion in the application of funds in their hands.⁵ Such authorities are, however, regarded as, to a certain extent, trustees of the fund committed to them, and the court may interfere to prevent the misuse of such fund,⁶ or to compel its application to the purposes provided by statute or charter.⁷

which apply to all classes of taxation have already been dealt with in the preceding general sections of this title, and certain phases of municipal taxation will be found fully discussed under other titles.¹ It is the purpose of this section to treat of such questions only as are peculiar to taxation by municipalities and quasi municipalities for the purposes of defraying expenses and discharging obligations which they are authorized to assume, or which are imposed on them for other than state purposes.²

2. Power to Tax—a. GRANT BY STATE—(1) In General.—Municipal and quasi-municipal corporations possess no inherent power of taxation. In exercising this attribute of sovereignty they act merely as instrumentalities of the state, and consequently they have no authority to levy taxes unless such power be expressly or by necessary implication delegated to them by constitutional provision or legislative enactment.³

Power of Taxation—Delegation of Power—

Political Divisions of State.

Positive Enactment or Well-defined Usage Essential.—Cushing v. Newburyport, 10 Met.

(Mass.) 508.

The Words "Authority of Law," when used with reference to the power of a municipality

Constitutional Provisions Conferring the Power to Tax on municipal authorities are sometimes self-executing in so far as not to require further action on the part of the legislature,¹ but usually such a provision requires a legislative enactment to make it effectual.²

Power Measured by Charter. — The charter or act of incorporation is ordinarily the source and measure of the taxing power of the municipality,³ and such power cannot be acquired by prescription,⁴ nor can it be imparted by a federal court.⁵

(2) Construction of Statutes Granting Power. — A statute granting to a municipality authority to levy taxes must be strictly construed.⁶ Thus the to tax, can refer only to an act of the legislature, the law-making power under the constitution, duly passed and approved. Reineman v. Covington, etc., R. Co., 7 Neb. 310.

Grant of Power a Franchise. — So far as the power to tax exists in a municipal corporation, it is by grant, and is called a franchise. O'Byrne v. Savannah, 41 Ga. 331, 5 Am. Rep. 532.

Retrospective Taxes. — Unless there is some constitutional restriction, the legislature may authorize the municipality to levy and collect retrospective taxes, and, for this purpose, to use the assessment roll of a previous year. Fairfield v. People, 94 Ill. 244; Cowgill v. Long, 15 Ill. 202.

In an Action by the Municipality to Recover Taxes, the defendant may set up in defense that no authority was ever granted the plaintiff to levy such tax. Conklin v. El Paso, (Tex. Civ. App. 1897) 44 S. W. Rep. 879.

Effect of Unrestricted Delegation. — When the legislature confers upon a municipality general powers of taxation it grants all the powers possessed by itself in respect to the imposition of taxes. Newport News, etc., R. Co. v. Newport News, 100 Va. 157; Woodall v. Lynchburg, 100 Va. 318. And see Henderson Bridge Co. v. Henderson, 173 U. S. 592; Henderson v. Hughes County, 13 S. Dak. 576.

1. Self-executing Provision. — Davis v. Green, 40 La. Ann. 281, construing article 214 of the Louisiana Constitution.

2. Legislation Required — State v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 74 Mo. 163; State v. Kelly, 45 S. Car. 457.

The Adoption of a New State Constitution does not take away the existing powers of taxation in municipalities until the legislature can pass such statutes as are necessary to make its provisions effective. Byrne v. Covington, (Ky. 1893) 21 S. W. Rep. 1050; Long v. Louisville, 97 Ky. 364.

3. Power Derived from Charter. — New Iberia v. Migue, 32 La. Ann. 923; St. Louis v. Russell, 9 Mo. 507; Weinstein v. Newbern, 71 N. Car. 536; Cobb v. Elizabeth City, 75 N. Car. 1; Jonas v. Cincinnati, 18 Ohio 318; Probasco v. Moundsville, 11 W. Va. 501. See also Baltimore v. Gorter, 93 Md. 1; Baltimore v. Robert Poole, etc., Co., (Md. 1903) 54 Atl. Rep. 681; State Tax Com'rs v. Assessors, 124 Mich. 401.

The Taxing Power May Be Exercised under General Statutes independently of special charter provisions. Rodman-Heath Cotton Mills v. Waxhaw, 130 N. Car. 293.

In Spring v. Collector, 78 Ill. 101, it was held that an authority to incorporate cities, to levy taxes annually, to a certain extent, applies as well to cities incorporated under special charters as to those incorporated under general acts.

By the Illinois Act of 1883, power is conferred on cities not organized under the general law, but acting under special charters, to levy, in addition to the municipal taxes authorized by their charters, taxes for distinct objects named — as a sewer-fund tax and a water-fund tax — to be levied at the discretion of the legislative authority of the city. Thatcher v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 120 Ill. 560.

How Far General Laws Apply. — Municipal taxation is distinct and independent of state and county taxation; and general tax laws apply to municipalities only so far as, by the provisions of the laws imposing and regulating municipal taxation, they are either expressly or impliedly adopted. Troy v. Mutual Bank, 20 N. Y. 387; American Transp. Co. v. Buffalo, 20 N. Y. 388, note.

See also People v. Willis, 133 N. Y. 383, wherein a statute applicable to only one kind of property and relating to town taxation only, and which could not be carried out in relation to village taxation without further legislation, was held not to warrant taxation by a village.

4. Cannot Be Acquired by Prescription. — The exercise of a municipal authority by one town, over a portion of the territory of another, and the acquiescence of the latter for a period of more than twenty years, will not authorize the former to levy and collect taxes on persons dwelling in such territory. Ham v. Sawyer, 38 Me. 37.

5. Cannot Be Imparted by U. S. Courts. — Vance v. Little Rock, 30 Ark. 435.

6. Grant of Power Strictly Construed. — Keese v. Denver, 10 Colo. 113; Mee v. Paddock, 83 Ill. 494; Leavenworth v. Norton, 1 Kan. 432; Bussey v. Gilmore, 3 Me. 191; Sioux City, etc., R. Co. v. Washington County, 3 Neb. 42; Wheeler v. Plattsmouth, 7 Neb. 270; Corbett v. Portland, 31 Oregon 407. See also the title STATUTES, vol. 26, p. 667. And see generally the title MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, vol. 20, p. 1140.

No Power to Impose Taxes for Past Years is conferred by a statute authorizing the mayor and aldermen to levy annual municipal taxes. Adams v. Greenville, 77 Miss. 881.

Ordinance Beyond Power Granted Void. — The ordinances of municipal corporations are subject to revision by the courts, and though large discretion is allowed, when an ordinance imposing a tax is found not to be in conformity enumeration of particular objects of taxation is deemed to be an exclusion of all others not enumerated;¹ and where general taxation alone is authorized, the sum required may not be raised by special taxation,² nor will a grant of power to impose a special tax confer authority to accomplish the same purpose by a general tax.³ It is presumed that the legislature in granting the power has clearly indicated its intention,⁴ and doubts or ambiguities arising from the terms used by the legislature must be resolved against the municipality and in favor of the taxpayers.⁵ But the courts must not defeat the legislative to the charter, or not reasonably incident to powers contained in the charter, it will be held to be void. Cape Girardeau v. Riley, 72 Mo. 220.

Proviso in Act Limiting Power.—Where the act granting to a municipality the power to tax contains a proviso, such power is limited by the proviso. "The grant or enactment is to be read, not as if the larger power was ever given, but as if no more was ever given than is contained within the terms or bounds of the proviso." Matter of Second Ave. M. E. Church, 66 N. Y. 395.

Within Statutory Limits Favored by Courts.—In Kyle v. Malin, 8 Ind. 34, it was held that municipal corporations are to be held strictly within the limits prescribed by statute, but within those limits they are favored by the courts.

In Stockle v. Silsbee, 41 Mich. 615, it was held that the action of a board of supervisors in voting money is presumably lawful.

Extension of Time.—In Brunswick v. Finney, 54 Ga. 318, it was held that, under a city charter requiring the payment of a tax in quarterly instalments at such times as the mayor and council shall direct, the council may indulge the taxpayers for the first and second quarters, and make the instalments payable in the second or third quarter; but they cannot make any instalment payable before it would be due under the charter.

1. Objects Not Enumerated Deemed Excluded.—Baldwin v. Montgomery, 53 Ala. 437; Savannah v. Hartridge, 8 Ga. 23; Primm v. Belleville, 59 Ill. 142; Plaquemine v. Roth, 29 La. Ann. 261; St. Louis v. Laughlin, 49 Mo. 559; Concord v. Boscawen, 17 N. H. 465; Newark v. State Board of Taxation, 67 N. J. L. 246; Jonas v. Cincinnati, 18 Ohio 318; Charleston v. Condry, 4 Rich. L. (S. Car.) 254.

Can Only Be Levied for Specified Purposes.—All taxes authorized for specified purposes must be levied for the purpose named. Webster v. People, 98 Ill. 343.

The words "All Necessary Expenses" cannot be construed to enlarge a power to tax for specific purposes. Beatty v. Knowler, 4 Pet. (U. S.) 152.

What Not an Enumeration.—An authority to towns to vote money for certain specified purposes and other necessary charges, is not intended to be an enumeration of objects and purposes for which towns may raise money, but a mere expression of a few prominent objects by way of instance, and a general reference to others extending to all other matters falling within their rights and duties. Van Sicklen v. Burlington, 27 Vt. 70; Willard v. Newburyport, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 230.

2. General Taxation Alone Authorized.—Wright

v. Chicago, 20 Ill. 252; Webster v. People, 98 Ill. 343; Clark v. Davenport, 14 Iowa 494; Bussey v. Gilmore, 3 Me. 191; Annapolis v. Harwood, 32 Md. 471, 3 Am. Rep. 161; Corbett v. Portland, 31 Oregon 407.

Where the Expense of Keeping Up Bridges is a duty imposed upon a county, it is included in a tax for general county purposes, and a special bridge tax is unauthorized. Nashville, etc., R. Co. v. Franklin County, 5 Lea (Tenn.) 707; Nashville, etc., R. Co. v. Hodges, 7 Lea (Tenn.) 663.

Independent Statutes.—A statute authorizing a board of police of the several counties to raise revenue for the support of the poor, and one authorizing them to raise revenue for general county purposes, are distinct and independent statutes, and the tax contemplated by the former may be levied and collected, even though the power conferred by the latter has been exhausted. Coulson v. Harris, 43 Miss. 728.

Special Assessments Distinguished from General Taxation.—Between the right to make special assessments for local improvements, and that of taxation for general corporate purposes, there is a clear distinction involving in their exercise essentially different powers and principles. One is not included in the other, nor can one be exercised any more than the other, without a grant of authority from the legislature. Fairfield v. Ratcliff, 20 Iowa 396. See generally the title SPECIAL AND LOCAL ASSESSMENTS.

4. Legislature Presumed to Have Expressed Intention.—Baldwin v. Montgomery, 53 Ala. 437; State v. Brewer, 64 Ala. 287; Highway Com'rs v. Newell, 80 Ill. 587; Alton v. Aetna Ins. Co., 82 Ill. 45; New Iberia v. Mignes, 32 La. Ann. 923; Crowell v. Hopkinton, 45 N. H. 9.

5. Doubts Resolved Against Taxing Power.—State Bank v. Savannah, Dudley (Ga.) 130; Savannah v. Hartridge, 8 Ga. 23; English v. People, 96 Ill. 566; Clark v. Davenport, 14 Iowa 494; Corbett v. Portland, 31 Oregon 407; Randolph v. Metcalf, 6 Coldw. (Tenn.) 400; Dean v. Charlton, 27 Wis. 522. And see Worthen v. Badgett, 32 Ark. 496; Sewall v. Jones, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 412; Ontario Bank v. Bunnell, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 186.

An Ordinance Imposing a Tax must be strictly construed against the city and in favor of the citizen. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. v. Darenkamp, 66 S. W. Rep. 1125, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 2249.

When an Ordinance Levying a Tax Will Admit of Two Constructions, it should receive that which is consistent with the power given, not that which is in violation of it. Baltimore v. Hughes, 1 Gill & J. (Md.) 480, 19 Am. Dec. 243.

intent by turning the language used from its natural and obvious meaning,¹ nor are powers expressly granted or necessarily implied to be defeated or impaired by a strict construction.²

b. POWER BY NECESSARY IMPLICATION — When Power Implied. — When a municipal corporation is created, the power of taxation is vested in it as an essential attribute for all the purposes of its existence, unless its exercise be expressly prohibited.³ And where authority is granted by the legislature to a municipality having power to levy taxes to contract a debt for a specific object, and no special provision is made for its payment, the power to levy taxes sufficient to meet, at maturity, the obligation to be incurred is conclusively implied, unless there is in the act itself, or in some general statute or in the constitution, a restriction upon the power of taxation which repels the inference.⁴ And if the debt be for an extraordinary purpose, requiring special

To Pay Claim Against Town. — A town or its officers, duly authorized to settle a disputed claim against it, upon doing so in the exercise of good faith and sound discretion, may enforce a tax duly levied upon its citizens to raise money for its payment. Vose v. Frankfort, 64 Me. 229.

In Ralls County Ct. v. U. S., 105 U. S. 733, Waite, C. J., said: "The power to tax is necessarily an ingredient of such a power to contract, as, ordinarily, political bodies can only meet their pecuniary obligations through the instrumentality of taxation."

Authority to Tax for City Purposes involves the power to tax to pay debts contracted for city purposes or for city improvements. Shepard v. Kaypsville, 16 Utah 340.

Tax to Pay Interest on Bonds. — In Davey v. Galveston County, 45 Tex. 291, it was held that an act authorizing the issue and sale of bonds for certain purposes, and a levy of a special tax to meet the same, is sufficient to authorize a tax to pay interest on the bonds.

Power Not Precluded by Constitutional Provision. — A constitutional provision authorizing the legislature to grant to municipalities power to impose taxes "in such manner as shall be prescribed by law," does not preclude an implied power of taxation on the theory that the manner of imposing the tax would not thereby be "prescribed," since the general law fixes the manner of levying taxes. State v. Bristol, 109 Tenn. 315.

Provision Requiring Restriction of Taxing Power. — A constitutional provision requiring the legislature to restrict the taxing power of municipalities to prevent abuse of taxation does not prevent a delegation of the taxing power by authority for its creation, a general limitation on the power of taxation for ordinary municipal purposes will not exclude such inference.¹

When Power Not Implied. — This implied power of taxation depends on the assumption that the legislature must have intended to confer it, and such inference is repelled by evidence of a contrary legislative intent, as, for instance, where the statute giving the power to create the debt, or some other existing law, provides means for its payment,² or expressly limits the power of taxation therefor.³ No doubtful inference from other powers granted, or from obscure provisions of the law, nor mere matter of convenience or necessity, will be sufficient to establish an implied power of taxation.⁴ Thus the power is not to be implied from authority to enact by-laws for the good government of the municipality,⁵ or from a mere grant of police power to regulate certain callings.⁶

c. LIMITATIONS ON POWER — (1) Constitutional Restrictions. — Municipal corporations being merely instrumentalities of the state for purposes of taxation, it follows that limitations set on the taxing power of the state by either the federal or the state constitution will usually apply also to municipal taxation.⁷ Where, however, the constitutional provision is evidently intended to implication. Oconto City Water Supply Co. v. Oconto, 105 Wis. 76.

Louisiana — Ordinance Must Provide Means of Payment. — In Louisiana, where bonds are issued as security for a debt it is essential that the ordinance creating the debt shall provide the means of paying the principal and interest thereon. Knox v. Baton Rouge, 36 La. Ann. 427.

1. General Limitation Does not Exclude Implied Power. — Quincy v. Jackson, 113 U. S. 332; Cleveland v. U. S., (C. C. A.) 111 Fed. Rep. 341; U. S. v. Capdevielle, (C. C. A.) 118 Fed. Rep. 809; Millvale Borough, 162 Pa. St. 374; Nalle v. Austin, (Tex. Civ. App. 1893) 21 S. W. Rep. 375.

2. Means of Payment Provided by Legislature. — U. S. v. New Orleans, 2 Woods (U. S.) 230; Cleveland v. U. S., (C. C. A.) 111 Fed. Rep. 341. Right to Make Additional Levy. — Where the act authorizing the creation of an indebtedness provides for the levying of a special tax to meet it, and the municipality, in accordance therewith, levies a tax sufficient on its face for such purpose, there is no implied power to levy an additional tax thereafter on the ground that the first levy proved insufficient in fact because of the nonpayment of some of the taxes levied. Gay v. New Whatcom, 26 Wash. 389.

3. Taxing Power Expressly Limited. — U. S. v. Macon County, 99 U. S. 582.

4. Implication Must Be Clear and Necessary. — Basnett v. Jacksonville, 19 Fla. 664; Corbett v. Portland, 31 Oregon 407.

The Power to Tax Will Not Be Enlarged by Construction so as to authorize taxation for purposes other than those specified in the charter. Beaty v. Knowler, 4 Pet. (U. S.) 152.

Necessity for Submission to Voters. — Where the state constitution forbids municipal taxation without first submitting the proposition to the voters, except for "necessary expenses," there is no implied power to tax for special purposes without the consent of the voters. Edgerton v. Goldsboro Water Co., 126 N. Car. 93.

But where the voters have authorized the creation of debts and the issue of bonds, the implied power to levy taxes to pay such debts exists without any further vote being taken. Charlotte v. Shepard, 122 N. Car. 602. But see Hamlin v. Meadville, 6 Neb. 227.

Power to Erect Public Buildings. — Where the power of taxation is limited to seven mills on the dollar, a power of a city to raise more than that for the purpose of erecting hospitals, poor-houses, market-houses, etc., is not necessarily implied from a provision in the charter making it the duty of its officers to erect such buildings. Leavenworth v. Norton, 1 Kan. 432, approved in Burnes v. Atchison, 2 Kan. 454.

5. Not Implied from Power to Enact By-laws. — Asheville v. Means, 7 Ired. L. (29 N. Car.) 406. And see Mays v. Cincinnati, 1 Ohio St. 268. But in such case, they may prevent the sale of liquor without a license. Heisembrittelle v. Charleston, 2 McMull. L. (S. Car.) 233; Charleston v. Ahrens, 4 Strobb. L. (S. Car.) 241.

6. Not Implied from Grant of Police Power. — St. Louis v. Western Union Tel. Co., 39 Fed. Rep. 59; Kip v. Paterson, 26 N. J. L. 298; State v. Hoboken, 33 N. J. L. 280; *North Hudson County R. apply to state taxation only, it will not operate as a restriction on municipal corporations.¹

A Limitation on the Power to Contract Indebtedness operates as a restriction on the power to tax to satisfy it.²

(2) Legislative Restrictions—(a) In General.—The legislature, having authority to delegate the taxing power to municipalities,³ may also place limitations on the exercise of such power,⁴ and restrictions thus imposed by the legislature

Special Taxes levied upon districts having territorial limits different from the municipality levying the tax, must likewise be kept within the constitutional limits. In re House Bill, No. 165, 15 Colo. 595.

Louisiana—Limit on Parish or Municipal Taxation.—La. Const., art. 209, imposing a limit of ten mills on parish or municipal taxation, does not restrict a parish and a city to that amount jointly; each may levy its taxes up to that limit. Washington State Bank v. Baillio, 47 La. Ann. 1471.

1. Provision Intended to Apply to State Taxation Only.—York v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 56 Neb. 572.

Provision Requiring Submission to Voters.—In People v. Flagg, 46 N. Y. 401, 11 Am. L. Reg. N. S. 80, it was held that constitutional provisions prohibiting the contracting of any debt by or in behalf of the state, unless authorized by a law submitted to the people, do not apply to the debts of cities or subordinate municipal divisions, but to those of the state itself.

Territory—Federal Statute Applying Only to Municipalities.—24 Stat. at Large, c. 818, § 4, restricting the powers of municipal corporations to contract debts, was held not to limit the power of the territorial legislature to tax property in municipalities. Guthrie v. Territory, 1 Okla. 188.

2. Limitation on Indebtedness Limits Taxing Power.—Springfield v. Edwards, 84 Ill. 626; Law v. People, 87 Ill. 385; Howell v. Peoria, 90 Ill. 104; Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. People, 200 Ill. 541; Reinemann v. Covington, etc., R. Co., 7 Neb. 310; Johnston v. Becker County, 27 Minn. 64; State v. Medbery, 7 Ohio St. 522; Hebard v. Ashland County, 55 Wis. 145. And see Jonas v. Cincinnati, 18 Ohio 318.

But in Habersham County v. Porter Mfg. Co., 103 Ga. 613, it was held that the power of municipalities to tax for the purpose of meeting legitimate obligations was not limited by Ga. Const., art. 7, § 7, par. 1, restricting the power of municipalities to incur debts.

Future or Contingent Debts.—A debt payable in the future, or upon a contingency, or on the happening of some future event, is within a constitutional restriction upon the amount of municipal indebtedness, as well as a debt payable presently and absolutely, and it makes no difference whether the debt be for current expenses or for something else. Springfield v. Edwards, 84 Ill. 626.

3. See supra, this title, Power of Taxation—Delegation of Power.

4. Legislature May Limit Rate of Municipal Taxation.—Most of the questions which arise in regard to the rate of municipal taxation depend entirely on the construction of local statutes, which are liable to constant change by the legislature. Therefore it is practically impossible to derive general principles from the decisions, and it is deemed sufficient here to refer the reader to the following decisions which construe statutory limitations on the taxing power of municipal corporations:

United States.—Kimball v. Grant County, 21 Fed. Rep. 145; C. N. Nelson Lumber Co. v. Lorraine, 24 Fed. Rep. 456; U. S. v. Kent, 107 Fed. Rep. 190, affirmed (C. C. A.) 113 Fed. Rep. 232; Cleveland v. U. S., (C. C. A.) 111 Fed. Rep. 341.

Arkansas.—Vaughan v. Bowie, 30 Ark. 278. California.—Santa Barbara v. Eldred, 95 Cal. 378.

Illinois.—Binkert v. Jansen, 94 Ill. 283; Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. People, 200 Ill. 541.

Kansas.—Manley v. Emlen, 46 Kan. 655; Columbus Water Works Co. v. Columbus, 48 Kan. 99; Stewart v. Kansas Town Co., 50 Kan. 553; Stewart v. Adams, 50 Kan. 568.

Minnesota.—Johnston v. Becker County, 27 Minn. 64.

Mississippi.—Warren County v. Klein, 51 Miss. 807.

Nebraska.—Wheeler v. Plattsmouth, 7 Neb. 270; Dawson County v. Clark, 58 Neb. 756.

North Carolina.—Weinstein v. Newbern, 71 N. Car. 536; Cobb v. Elizabeth City, 75 N. Car. 1.

Ohio.—Jonas v. Cincinnati, 18 Ohio 318.

Wisconsin.—Howard v. Oshkosh, 33 Wis. 309; Somo Lumber Co. v. Lincoln County, 110 Wis. 286.

Illinois—Rate Based on Valuation of Preceding Year.—Under the Illinois City and Village Act, art. 8, § 1, the rate per cent. fixed by a city must be based on the valuation of the "current" year, but such rate cannot exceed two per cent. on the valuation of the "preceding" year. People v. Lake Erie, etc., R. Co., 167 Ill. 283.

Tax Assessed Before Limit Takes Effect.—A tax assessed prior to the time when a limit upon the rate takes effect, but not finally passed until afterwards, is subject to the limit. Overall v. Ruenzi, 67 Mo. 203; St. Joseph Board of Public Schools v. Patten, 62 Mo. 444.

Increase of Maximum Rate.—Under the laws of some of the states, the maximum rate may be increased by a vote of the district upon which it is imposed, taken in a prescribed manner, and when the rate is so increased, the in-

must be observed.¹

In Some States the Constitution Expressly Requires the legislature to limit the taxing power of municipalities.²

Within the Prescribed Limit the fixing of tax rates is a matter within the discretion of the municipality, and the courts will not interfere except in cases of manifest abuse.³

If No Limit Is Prescribed, the power of the municipality in fixing the rate of taxation for legitimate municipal purposes is unlimited.⁴

Limit Not Binding on Legislature. — In imposing a limit on the rate of municipal taxation, the legislature does not bind itself, and may afterwards enlarge the creased rate becomes the maximum limit. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Lamkin, 97 Mo. 496.

Judicial Notice. — All legislative acts conferring or restricting the revenue powers of a municipality are, in their nature, public laws, whether so declared in terms or not, and courts are bound to take judicial notice of them in all proceedings affecting revenue matters. Binkert v. Jansen, 94 Ill. 283.

1. Legislative Restrictions Must Be Observed. — Beck v. Allen, 58 Miss. 143.

Limit on Poll Tax. — If, at an annual meeting, a town has voted to raise so much money as to require the assessment of the full sum allowed by law to be assessed upon polls in any one year, a tax subsequently voted must be assessed only upon property. Freeland v. Hastings, 10 Allen (Mass.) 570.

Creditor Charged with Notice of Limitation. — A creditor is required to take notice of statutes prohibiting or limiting the exercise of the taxing power of a municipality to raise money for the payment of the debt. Rees v. Watertown, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 107.

Poor Taxes Are Current Expenses. — Taxes levied for the support of the poor are to be regarded as current expenses of the county, within a statute limiting the amount which can be raised within any year for current expenses. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Wilhelm, 33 Kan. 206. And see Kansas City, etc., R. Co. v. Albright, 33 Kan. 211.

Contributions to Construction of Public Work. — A statute conferring the power and duty to construct a public work according to a designated plan, with a separate clause authorizing the board charged with the duty to call on certain municipalities for such sums as they deem proper for the expense, providing the amount to be paid shall not exceed a specified sum, limits the amount of contribution by each, but does not limit the entire cost of the work. People v. Kelly, (Ct. App.) 5 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 383, 76 N. Y. 489.

2. In South Carolina it is held that such provision does not require the legislature to limit the rate of taxation, but only to restrict the municipality as to the subjects and objects of the tax imposed; and authority to a city to tax without any limit on the rate of taxation is not in violation of the constitution. State v. Beaufort, 39 S. Car. 5.

In South Dakota it has been held that such a constitutional provision is not self-executing, and if the legislature fail to restrict the rate of taxation, the court cannot say that a tax is in excess of the power of the municipality. Henderson v. Hughes County, 13 S. Dak. 576.

In North Carolina it has been held that such a constitutional provision is not violated by a charter empowering a town "to levy and collect taxes on all persons and subjects of taxation which it is in the power of the general assembly to tax for state and county purposes." State v. Irvin, 126 N. Car. 989.

3. Within Limit Tax Rate Discretionary. — Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. People, 200 Ill. 623; Scovill v. Cleveland, 1 Ohio St. 126; Dwyer v. Hockworth, 57 Tex. 245; Muller v. Denison, 1 Tex. Civ. App. 293; Brown v. Hoadley, 12 Vt. 472; Chandler v. Bradish, 23 Vt. 416. And see McDonald v. Louisville, 68 S. W. Rep. 413, 24 Ky. L. Rep. 271.

Power of Council to Fix Rate under Baltimore Charter. — See Baltimore v. Gorter, 93 Md. 1; Baltimore v. Robert Poole, etc., Co., (Md. 1903) 54 Atl. Rep. 681.

A Levy Which Imposes a Tax Smaller than that which by law might have been imposed, is good. Hollister v. Bennett, 9 Ohio 83.

Tax Producing Greater Amount than Required. — The collection of a tax which does not exceed the rate limited by law cannot be defeated on the ground that it will produce a greater amount than is required by the appropriation ordinance, in the absence of any showing of abuse of discretion in fixing the tax rate. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. People, 200 Ill. 541.

No Presumption Against Propriety of Levy. — A court will not assume, in the absence of any proof, that a tax voted would raise more money than was needed, so that there would be a balance to be applied to an unlawful debt. Greenbanks v. Boutwell, 43 Vt. 207.

Aggregate of Taxes Not Exceeding Limit. — There may be different rates for different taxes in the same year, provided the aggregate does not exceed the limit fixed by law. Benoist v. St. Louis, 19 Mo. 179.

In Alvord v. Collin, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 418, where one list of school taxes, and another of county taxes, was made, under a vote to raise a certain sum for the support of schools and another sum for contingent expenses, and on the first list the sum assessed exceeded the sum voted for schools, but the aggregate of both was less than the amount authorized to be raised by taxation, the assessment was held valid.

4. Power Unlimited Where No Limit Prescribed. — Beck v. Allen, 58 Miss. 143.

Where Limit Not Applicable. — Where a limitation on the rate of taxation does not apply, a municipality may levy, assess, and collect such taxes as are necessary to the accomplishment of a proper object. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Harrison County, 54 Tex. 119.

same,¹ or repeal it, either expressly or impliedly by inconsistent legislation.² But a general law regulating the rate will not be deemed to take away greater powers granted to municipalities by special charter provisions unless it appears that the legislature intended such act to apply to them.³

(b) Effect of Limitation on Special Grants of Taxing Power — When Special Grant Not Controlled by Limitation. — Whether or not a limitation upon the power to tax for general municipal purposes is to be taken as controlling a grant of authority to impose taxation for special purposes, is a question of legislative intent to be gathered from the statutes themselves. Such a limitation is not inconsistent with a grant of power, either express or necessarily implied, to levy special taxes in excess of it,⁴ and, as a general rule, a restriction on general rates of taxation will not apply to special taxes imposed to meet special burdens unless expressly made applicable to them.⁵ And where items embraced in a levy

1. Legislature May Enlarge Limit. — U. S. v. Key West, (C. C. A.) 78 Fed. Rep. 88; People v. Burr, 13 Cal. 343; Mohmking v. Bowes, 65 N. J. L. 469. And see State v. Beaufort, 39 S. Car. 5; Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. People, 200 Ill. 623.

What an Enlargement. — A grant of authority by the legislature to county commissioners to create a debt and provide for the payment thereof is an enlargement of the power to tax to meet the demand, and an implied repeal of any conflicting statutory implication. Com. v. Allegheny County, 40 Pa. St. 349; Com. v. Pittsburgh, 34 Pa. St. 496; East St. Louis v. People, 124 Ill. 655.

2. May Repeal Limitation. — Com. v. Allegheny County, 40 Pa. St. 348.

What Not a Repeal. — A general law requiring a city to make a return of taxes which it requires to be levied, to the clerk of the county, does not work a repeal of a provision in its charter prohibiting it from levying over a certain rate per cent. Edwards v. People, 88 Ill. 340; Kinsey v. Pulaski County, 2 Dill. (U. S.) 253.

3. Charter Provisions Not Repealed by General Law. — Cicero v. McCarthy, 172 Ill. 279; People v. Knopf, 186 Ill. 457; Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. People, 200 Ill. 623.

4. Limitation May Be Exceeded under Special Grant of Power — United States. — Butz v. Muscatine, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 575; Ralls County Ct. v. U. S., 105 U. S. 733; Quincy v. Jackson, 113 U. S. 332; U. S. v. Key West, (C. C. A.) 78 Fed. Rep. 88; Helena v. U. S., (C. C. A.) 104 Fed. Rep. 113.

May Exceed Limit to Pay Judgments. — Power is sometimes conferred by statute on municipal corporations to levy taxes in excess of the general limitation to pay judgments. Helena v. U. S., (C. C. A.) 104 Fed. Rep. 113 (construing the Montana statutes); Dawson County v. Clark, 58 Neb. 756; Omaha v. State, (Neb. 1903) 94 N. W. Rep. 979. And see Britton v. Platte City, 2 Dill. (U. S.) 1; Rice v. Increase of Limit — Judgment on Previous Claim. — A village which obtains a right to levy a higher rate, by reorganization under the general incorporation law, may raise money at such higher rate to pay a judgment upon a claim accruing before the reorganization. Carney v. Marseilles, 136 Ill. 401, 29 Am. St. Rep. 328.

Authority to Construct Wharves, Etc. — A general provision authorizing a municipality to create a debt upon compliance with certain formalities, but restraining it to a certain rate of taxation, and authorizing it to construct wharves, docks, piers, etc., the expense of which might far exceed the annual revenues of a municipality at the general rate of taxes, empowers it to create a debt for these undertakings only. are not within the scope of the limitation, they will be excluded from consideration in determining whether the limit has been exceeded.¹

When Limitation Controls. — But, on the other hand, if it appear that the legislature intended to prescribe a maximum rate for the entire taxing power of the municipality for all purposes, the limitation must be taken as controlling grants of power to tax for special purposes, unless the municipality is expressly authorized to exceed the limit, or the power is necessarily implied from the terms of the grant.² Thus, it is held that, in the face of an evident legislative intent that the limitation shall not be exceeded, it cannot be enlarged by implication from general provisions conferring the power to contract, make improvements, erect usual and ordinary buildings, and incur liability.³ Nor, where such intent is apparent, is there any duty on a municipality, under a special authority to pay judgments, to levy a special tax in excess of the limit to pay a judgment against it for ordinary indebtedness;⁴ though where the judgment is founded on a contract, the obligation of which such a restriction would impair, the rule has been held otherwise.⁵

County Limited to State Rate. — In Nashville, etc., R. Co. v. Franklin County, 5 Lea (Tenn.) 707, it was held that a statutory provision that the rate of taxation for county purposes should not exceed the rate of state taxation for the time being, prohibits the counties, after making a levy for general county taxation, from making an additional levy for special purposes, unless specially authorized by law.

Extra Levy for Prospective Purposes. — Where the charter of a city, construed in connection with the state constitution, allowed the levy of an extra tax, on the approval of the voters, for the accomplishment of measures to be carried out in the future, it was held that such extra tax could not be imposed for the payment of existing indebtedness. 5. Cannot Impair Obligation of Contracts. — See Withowski v. Bradley, 35 La. Ann. 904; Favrot v. East Baton Rouge, 34 La. Ann. 491.

(c) Effect of Taxation in Excess of Limit.—Where the legislature has fixed a maximum tax rate for municipal corporations, any taxation in excess of such limitation is void,¹ and equity will enjoin the collection of such an excessive tax.² The fact that a city has not in past years levied taxes up to the limit does not enlarge its powers for subsequent years and authorize it to tax in excess of such limit.³ And where taxes have been imposed up to the prescribed limit, an additional levy cannot be sustained on the ground that the assessor has rated the taxable property below its real value, the presumption being that the assessor has done his duty.⁴ Nor can an attempt to tax in Must Show that Judgment Founded on Contract.—A party claiming a mandamus to compel the levy of a tax in excess of the limit, to pay his judgment, must allege and prove that it was founded upon a contract. State v. Police Jury, 32 La. Ann. 884.

The Court May Look Behind the Judgment to ascertain the nature of the claim on which it is founded, and such claim retains its original nature after it has been reduced to judgment. East St. Louis v. Underwood, 105 Ill. 308; State v. Royse, (Neb. 1902) 91 N. W. Rep. 559.

Bonds Issued in Satisfaction of Judgments.—In Iowa, the validity of negotiable bonds of a county, issued in satisfaction of judgments, in the hands of innocent holders for value, cannot be questioned by showing that the judgments were rendered upon warrants issued in excess of a constitutional limit upon the right to incur debts, and a tax levied to pay such bonds may be enforced. *Sioux City, etc., R. Presumption in Favor of Legality.—Where a tax is levied, which might have been authorized by either of two statutes, but which would be excessive if levied under one of them, it will be presumed to have been levied under the other. Lima v. McBride, 34 Ohio St. 338.

Illegality of Levy Must Be Shown.—The levy of a school tax of three per cent. is not shown to be illegal, when the law allows a tax of that amount for building purposes if it is not shown in what district the property taxed is situated, or what rate was required to be levied in each district. Gage v. Bailey, 102 Ill. 11.

3. Excess of Limit Not Authorized by Failure to Tax in Past Years.—Cleveland v. U. S., (C. C. A.) 111 Fed. Rep. 341.

But in Bowen v. West, 10 Colo. App. 322, it was held that a city which had not for several years levied any water tax to pay its contractual indebtedness to the water company might levy a tax for that purpose aggregating so much as would have been raised by levying the authorized tax in each of the years within that period.

In Texas, where the fiscal year of a city was changed so as to begin three months later than formerly, it was held that a levy purporting to be for the fiscal year but at a rate in excess of the limit because including the three extra months, was invalid as to the excess. San Antonio v. Raley, (Tex. Civ. App. 1895) 32 S. W. Rep. 180; San Antonio v. Berry, 92 Tex. 319. But see Hernandez v. San Antonio, (Tex. Civ. App. 1897) 39 S. W. Rep. 1022, in which the peculiar circumstances of the case were held sufficient to justify the levy.

excess of the limit be upheld as an exercise of the police power, where its real and professed object is to raise revenue.¹

Interest and Penalties May Be Added Above Limit. — Interest on taxes due and penalties for delinquencies may be added over and above the limit.²

How Far Tax Void. — A levy in excess of the limit does not invalidate the whole tax, if the part within the limit can be separated by computation from that in excess of it.³ And where a levy does not itself exceed the limit, it is not invalidated by a subsequent levy which taken together with the former is in excess of the limit.⁴

(3) Effect of Limitation on Pre-existing Debts. — A limitation, either constitutional or legislative, is not applicable to taxes levied in payment of debts created prior to its adoption, where, at the time such indebtedness was incurred, the municipality had power to impose taxation sufficient to discharge it.⁵

d. WITHDRAWAL OR ALTERATION OF POWER. — In the absence of constitutional restrictions, the power of municipal corporations to levy taxes — except so far as vested rights are concerned — may be enlarged, abridged, or entirely withdrawn, at the pleasure of the legislature.⁶ The legislature can take away the taxing power even after the tax has been legally assessed,¹ or a note authorizing a levy has been taken,² but it cannot entirely release the payment of taxes already levied.³

Withdrawal or Alteration of the Power Will Not Be Presumed in the absence of a clear expression of the legislative intent.⁴

Cannot Impair Obligation of Contracts.—Laws in force when an indebtedness is incurred, which provide for taxation to pay it, enter into the contract with the creditor and constitute a part of it,⁵ and consequently the law withdrawing the taxing power is void if it would operate an impairment of the obligation of contracts entered into on a pledge, either express or implied, that the taxing power should be exercised for their fulfilment.⁶ But an act enlarging the Grant of Power Not a Contract.—The grant of the power of taxation by the legislature does not form such a contract between the state and the municipality as to be within the constitutional prohibition against laws impairing the obligation of contracts. Williamson v. New Jersey, 130 U. S. 189.

Delegating Power May Alter Authority.—A municipal corporation can only raise money and apply it to a particular purpose by virtue of a delegated authority, and the same authority that grants the power may alter the law and direct it to a different object. St. Louis v. Shields, 52 Mo. 354.

Statute Authorizing Vote Confers Mere Privilege.—A statute providing for taking the vote of the people of certain counties in relation to a tax to be laid confers a mere privilege upon the people, and when the right has not been exercised it confers no rights which prevent the legislature from repealing the statute. Covington, etc., R. Co. v. Kenton County Ct., 12 B. Mon. (Ky.) 144.

Montana—Ordinances Not Repealed by Constitution.—The constitution of Montana, adopted at the time of its admission as a state, and the subsequent revenue law of 1891, did not repeal the prior ordinances of cities relating to the levy and collection of municipal taxes so as to invalidate all subsequent proceedings relating thereto, unless had under the general revenue law. Lockey v. Walker, 12 Mont. 577.

Quasi Municipality.—The power of the legislature to abolish, at its discretion, school districts and other districts established by its authority for special municipal purposes, is undoubted. *Whitney v. In Fuller v. Heath, 89 Ill. 296, it was held that the adoption of a general incorporation law relating to cities, and the passage of a general school law, do not modify or impair any former special laws authorizing a city as a public agency to levy and collect taxes for school purposes.

Taxing Power Existing When Contract Made.—Where, at the time the debt was incurred or the bonds were issued, there existed a power of taxation sufficient to pay them, with the accruing interest, such power enters into and forms part of the contract, and cannot be taken away by subsequent legislation. *Scotland County Ct. v. Where Bonds Have Been Issued under an authority providing for the levy of taxes for their protection, the holder thereof has a right to look to the taxing provision as a part of his security, and to demand at the proper time that it be exercised in his favor. The measure of that right is the constitutional limit of the power which the legislature could grant to the municipality when the contract was made. Brodie v. McCabe, 33 Ark. 690.

On the Dissolution of a Municipal Corporation the taxing power reverts to the state.²

c. POWER TO IMPOSE SPECIAL TAXES. — The power of the legislature to authorize municipal corporations to engage in, or aid in the prosecution of, private enterprises partaking of a public nature, and to levy special taxes to meet the obligations thereby incurred, has been already discussed elsewhere in this work.³

Special Authority Required. — Special taxation is not authorized under a general power to tax; special authority is necessary to its imposition.⁴

3. How Power Exercised — a. CONFORMITY TO STATE METHODS. — It is not essential that the system of taxation in a municipality be made to conform exactly to that of the state either as to the rate or the manner of imposition.⁵

Different Mode of Payment Cannot Be Substituted. — A creditor of a county cannot be compelled to accept another and an essentially different mode of payment from that provided by his contract, that is to say, by the laws existing at the time he became a creditor of the county; and if there were funds in the treasury of the county applicable to such payment at the time he made demand therefor, which were raised under the law as it stood at the time of the contract, he has a right to be paid from these funds, and the legislature cannot deprive him of it without his consent. *Rose v. 4. Consent or Recommendation. — Reynolds v. Lofton, 18 Ga. 47; Barlow v. Ordinary, 47 Ga. 639; Solomon v. Tarver, 52 Ga. 405; State v. Wabash, etc., R. Co., 97 Mo. 296; Kitchen v. Smith, 101 Pa. St. 452.

Failure or Refusal to Recommend. — Under statutes requiring certain taxes to be levied only upon a recommendation of some designated board or body, if such board or body fails or refuses to recommend a tax sufficient to pay the necessary current expenses, and any debts that may be in judgment against the municipality, it may, as a general rule, levy a tax of its own motion sufficient to meet such expenses and liabilities. See Waller v. Perkins, 52 Ga. 233; Couper v. Rowe, 42 Ga. 229; Arnett v. Griffin, 60 Ga. 349.

5. Appropriation Ordinance, Certificate, or Estimate. — State v. Gadsden County, 17 Fla. 418; Misner v. Bullard, 43 Ill. 470; Weber v. Ohio, etc., R. Co., 108 Ill. 451; Riverside Co. v. Howell, 113 Ill. 256; Smith v. Crittenden, 16 Mich. 152; Hogelskamp v. Weeks, 37 Mich. 422;

c. IRREGULARITIES AND INFORMALITIES.—While a departure in any material respect from the legislative requirements is fatal to an attempt to exercise the taxing power, yet mere irregularities or informalities not going to the substance will usually not be allowed to defeat the tax.¹

State v. Harvey, 12 Neb. 31; Burlington, etc., R. Co. v. Lancaster County, 12 Neb. 324; Burlington, etc., R. Co. v. Saunders County, 16 Neb. 123; Arnold v. Juneau County, 43 Wis. 627.

But see Raley v. Guinn, 76 Mo. 263, where the failure of the county court to ascertain and enter of record the sum necessary for county purposes, before levying a tax, was held but an irregularity not invalidating the entire county levy.

Sufficiency of Form.—See State v. Gadsden County, 17 Fla. 418; Gage v. Bailey, 102 Ill. 11; Hogelakamp v. Weeks, 37 Mich. 422; Harding v. Bader, 75 Mich. 316; Burlington, etc., R. Co. v. Lancaster County, 12 Neb. 324; Dent v. Bryce, 16 S. Car. 1.

A Levy Made in Excess of the Published Estimate is not void in Nebraska, though the county commissioners are rendered liable for the penalty prescribed, for including such excess in their levy. State v. Wise, 12 Neb. 313.

But in McIntosh v. People, 93 Ill. 540, it was held that the amount stated in the appropriation ordinance was a limit upon the amount that could be levied, although it was not essential that the whole of such amount be levied.

Time of Filing Certificate.—In Smith v. Crittenden, 16 Mich. 152, a statute directing a certificate to the supervisors of the township of town indebtedness, to be filed on or before the first Monday of October in each year, was held to be directory, and a tax levied upon a certificate filed after the first but before the second Monday was held valid. See also Chiniquy v. People, 78 Ill. 570; Thatcher v. People, 79 Ill. 597.

In Illinois, if the certificate is not filed in season, the levy cannot be made in any succeeding year for back taxes. Weber v. Ohio, etc., R. Co., 108 Ill. 451. And see Shawneetown First Nat. Bank v. Cook, 77 Ill. 622; Mix v. People, 72 Ill. 241.

Vermont.—Henry v. Chester, 15 Vt. 460.

By Statute in some states it is provided that informalities which do not prejudice the substantial rights of the taxpayers shall not vitiate the tax. Spring Valley Coal Co. v. People, 157 Ill. 543; People v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 189 Ill. 397; Auditor-Gen. v. Sparrow, 116 Mich. 574. And see Southern Warehouse, etc., Co. v. Mechanics' Trust Co., (Ky. 1900) 56 S. W. Rep. 162.

Such statutes are to be liberally construed for the purpose of sustaining the tax. Auditor-Gen. v. Hutchinson, 113 Mich. 245.

Directory Provisions in a statute need not be strictly followed. State v. West Duluth Land Co., 75 Minn. 456; Wingate v. Ketner, 8 Wash. 94.

Designation of Tax Not Material.—A levy is legal if made for a proper purpose without reference to the name by which the tax is designated. Burlington, etc., R. Co. v. Cass County, 16 Neb. 136.

Sufficient Description of Tax.—In Shontz v. Evans, 40 Iowa 139, it was held that the levying of a tax described as "railroad tax, five mills," is sufficiently explicit, when the purpose and object of the tax and the beneficiary corporation can be ascertained alunde.

Where the Levy Is Capable of Being Construed as Based on Either of Two Acts, if it would be valid under one but not the other, that construction will be adopted which will sustain the levy. Lima v. McBride, 34 Ohio St. 338.

Intent to Make Levy under Other Law.—Where there is a law authorizing a levy, the levy is valid, even though it was intended to be made under a different law. Davis v. Brace, 82 Ill. 542.

Presumption in Favor of Regularity.—In the absence of any showing to the contrary it will be presumed that in imposing the tax the municipality has observed all the statutory requisites. Fonda v. Louisville, (Ky. 1899) 40 S. W. Rep. 785; Powell v. Louisville, (Ky. 1899) 52 S. W. Rep. 798; Sherley v. Louisville, (Ky. 1899) 53 S. W. Rep. 530; Southern Warehouse, etc., Co. v. People, 161 Ill. 132.

Sufficient Compliance.—In the following cases the requirements of the statutes were held to have been sufficiently complied with: Otis v.

d. EFFECT OF PARTIAL INVALIDITY. — In some courts the view has been maintained that a levy which is illegal as to part is wholly void.¹ But, according to the weight of both reason and authority, a tax levy containing illegal items will not be entirely invalid if the part which is legal can be separated from that which is illegal,² though, if the parts be not separable, the tax is void in toto.³

4. Compelling Exercise of Taxing Power — a. LEGISLATIVE COMPULSION — Matters of General Public Interest. — As regards matters of general interest, and duties which municipalities owe to the state at large, the control of the latter is complete, and the legislature may, by mandatory act, compel the levy of a tax necessary to the performance of such public duties and functions as fall within the general scope and object of the municipal organization.⁴ Thus, the legislature may compel the corporation to levy taxes for the construction of a highway,⁵ or of a bridge,⁶ or for the improvement of a river or harbor within its

4. Legislature May Compel Levy of Tax. — People v. Detroit, 28 Mich. 228, 15 Am. Rep.

202; People v. Flagg, 46 N. Y. 401; Duaneburgh v. Jenkins, 57 N. Y. 177; State v. Franklin County, 35 Ohio St. 458; Newman v. Justices, 5 Sneed (Tenn.) 695. See also People v. And as to legislative control over municipal corporations in general, see the title MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, vol. 20, p. 1218.

Mandatory Statute. — In Phelps v. Lodge, 60 Kan. 122, it was held that a statute providing that the city council "may" provide for the payment of the city's debts was mandatory, the "may" being construed as "must."

The Legislature Can Compel Local Improvements which, in its judgment, will promote the health of the people and advance the public good, and in the exercise of this power it may abate nuisances, construct and repair highways, open canals for irrigating arid districts, and perform many other similar acts for the public good, all at the expense of those who are to be chiefly and more immediately benefited by the improvement. Hagar v. Yolo County, 47 Cal. 222; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 701. See generally the title SPECIAL OR LOCAL ASSESSMENTS, vol. 25, p. 1166. And it may compel the payment of the police expenses. State v. St. Louis County Ct., 34 Mo. 546. And see Baltimore v. State, 15 Md. 376, 74 Am. Dec. 572; People v. Mahaney, 13 Mich. 481.

Losses Caused by Riot. — Statutes which will result in requiring contributions from the taxpayers of local communities to make good losses of persons who have suffered through the acts of rioters, are constitutional and valid and within the general scope of legislative authority. Darlington v. New York, 31 N. Y. 164, 88 Am. Dec. 248.

Damage Caused by Removal of County Seat. — The legislature may compel a county to pay the damages resulting to the property owners of a town from the removal of the county seat therefrom. Wilkinson v. Cheatham, 43 Ga. 258.

5. For Construction of Highway. — People v. Flagg, 46 N. Y. 401.

6. Construction and Maintenance of Bridge. — Talbot County v. Queen Anne's County, 50 Md. 245. In this case the bridge was located within the limits of another county, but the tax was sustained on the ground that its purpose was limits,¹ or to pay municipal debts.² But a municipality cannot be compelled to incur debts exceeding in amount a limit imposed upon its taxing power by the constitution.³

Purely Local Matters. — As regards property rights and matters of exclusively local concern, it is generally deemed to be beyond the authority of the legislature to compel the exercise of the municipal taxing power.⁴ Thus, it has been held that the legislature cannot compel a municipality to tax for private purposes,⁵ or to incur a debt or issue its bonds for local, corporate purposes without its consent,⁶ or to bear burdens in respect to matters not strictly municipal which other counties or towns are not required to bear.⁷ But some cases recognize the right of the legislature to control municipalities even as to purely local affairs.⁸

6. JUDICIAL COMPULSION. — The authority of the courts to compel municipal corporations to exercise the taxing power has already been discussed under another title.⁹

5. Submission to Popular Vote — a. POWER OF LEGISLATURE TO SUBMIT DECISION TO VOTERS. — It was formerly held in some jurisdictions that a statute not to become effective until approved by the voters of the locality to be affected thereby was an unauthorized delegation of legislative functions, but according to the great weight of modern authority such statutes are valid if they contain a complete declaration of the legislative will and only require the approval of the voters to make them operative.¹⁰ But the submission to the people of a mere plan or project of the law imposing a tax, for their adopnot only public, but the object was at the same time local in its character and of special and peculiar interest to the people to be taxed.

1. Improvement of River or Harbor. — Kimball v. Mobile County, 3 Woods (U. S.) 555, wherein it was held that the fact that the county was vitally interested in the improvement was sufficient to justify the improvement, although other counties and the state at large would derive benefit therefrom.

2. To Pay Municipal Debts. — Dunnovan v. Green, 57 Ill. 63; Decker v. Hughes, 68 Ill. 33.

Moral Obligation. — The legislature can compel the municipality to pay a demand which in good conscience it ought to pay, though there be no legal liability to pay it. Sinton v. Ashbury, 41 Cal. 525; Union Tp. v. Rader, 39 N. J. L. 509.

Question of Obligation a Judicial One. — But the power to decide whether a municipality is under a legal obligation to pay a claim is a judicial one which must be exercised by the courts alone. State v. Tappan, 29 Wis. 664, 9 Am. Rep. 622.

3. But a municipality cannot be compelled to incur debts exceeding in amount the constitutional limit. People v. Chicago, 51 Ill. 19, 2 Am. Rep. 278.

4. Purely Local Matters. — People v. Detroit, 28 Mich. 228. See also State v. Haben, 22 Wis. 660. And see the title MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, vol. 20, p. 1219.

5. Cannot Compel Tax for Private Purposes. — State v. Foley, 30 Minn. 350.

6. Debt on Bond Issue for Local, Corporate Purposes. — People v. Chicago, 51 Ill. 17, 2 Am. Rep. 278; Sleight v. People, 74 Ill. 47; Williams v. Roberts, 88 Ill. 11; Brunswick v. Litchfield, Me. 28; Bowdoinham v. Richmond, 6 Me. 112; 19 Am. Dec. 197; Hampshire County v. Franklin County, 16 Mass. 76.

Unconstitutional Act. — A mandatory act requiring a town to issue bonds and exchange the same for, or invest the proceeds of a sale thereof in, the stock of a railroad, is unconstitutional. People v. Batchellor, 53 N. Y. 128, 13 Am. Rep. 480.

7. Burdens Not Borne by Other Municipalities. — State v. Tappan, 29 Wis. 664, 9 Am. Rep. 622. And see Callam v. Saginaw, 50 Mich. 7.

8. See the title MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, vol. 20, p. 1220, note 2. See also People v. Flagg, 46 N. Y. 401, wherein it was said that wherever the legislature can authorize a town to incur a debt, it may direct this to be done.

9. See the title MANDAMUS, vol. 19, p. 864.

10. Submission to Voters Not Delegation of Legislative Function. — People v. Burr, 13 Cal. 343; Cheaney v. Hooser, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 330; Alcorn v. Hamer, 38 Miss. 652; Clarke v. Rochester, 24 Barb. (N. Y.) 446; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Davidson County Ct., 1 Sneed (Tenn.) 637; Winston v. Tennessee, etc., R. Co., 1 Baxt. (Tenn.) 60; Bull v. Read, 13 Gratt. (Va.) 78. See the titles LOCAL OPTION, vol. 19, p. 489 et seq.; STATUTES, vol. 26, p. 567.

May Not Submit Tax in Excess of Limit. — No authority exists to submit to electors of a county, the question of voting taxes in excess of the limit fixed by law, and taxes levied under such proposition are illegal and may be enjoined. Burlington, etc., R. Co. v. Clay County, 13 Neb. 367.

Minnesota — To Whom Submission Proper. — In Minnesota, under the constitution, the legislature cannot authorize any person or class of persons other than the electors or officers chosen by the electors of the town, to determine what action the town will take in any particular case requiring local taxation. Harrington v. Plainview, 27 Minn. 224.

tion or regulation, is an unconstitutional delegation of power to tax.¹

2. NECESSITY FOR APPROVAL OF TAXPAYERS.—In the absence of any constitutional restriction the legislature can authorize municipal corporations to incur obligations and raise revenue without the approval of the taxpayers and voters generally;² but a vote of the persons interested is frequently required as a condition precedent thereto,³ and where this is the case, no valid tax can be levied without a submission of the proposition to the voters in conformity with the requirements of the statute.⁴

1. Unconstitutional Delegation of Power.—Alcorn v. Hamer, 38 Miss. 652. And for a full treatment see the title LOCAL OPTION, vol. 19, p. 486.

The True Distinction is between the delegation of power, to make the law which necessarily involves the discretion as to what it shall be, and conferring the authority or discretion as to its execution to be exercised under and in pursuance of law. Lafayette, etc., R. Co. v. Geiger, 34 Ind. 185.

Even Where the Majority Votes in Favor of a Tax, it cannot be sustained if the law authorizing it be unconstitutional, since the minority would thereby be deprived of their property without due process of law. Anderson v. Hill, 54 Mich. 477.

The Legislature May Repeal a law authorizing a submission to the voters, although the vote has been taken. Covington, etc., R. Co. v. Kenton County Ct., 12 B. Mon. (Ky.) 150.

Effect of Adverse Vote under Former Statute.—A statute imposing a tax upon a town is not invalid because, by a former statute, the question whether a tax should be levied for the same purpose had been submitted to electors of the town, and had been adversely determined by them. Guilford v. Chenango County, 13 N. Y. 143.

The Word "Assent," when used with reference to the levy of a tax with the assent of the electors, or of some board or body, must be given its usual and ordinary signification, that is, agreeing or consenting to; and this can be manifested only in an election by actual vote. Hawkins v. Carroll County, 50 Miss. 735.

What Does Not Cure Omission.—The erection of a schoolhouse, without a submission to a vote of the people, is not cured by a vote to defray the expenses, or by the acceptance and use of the building. School Directors v. Fogleman, 76 Ill. 180.

Right to Increase Amount Voted.—A township tax exceeding the amount voted by the township may be sustained on the presumption that the township board has exercised its statutory

The Propositions Most Frequently Submitted to popular vote are those in regard to municipal aid to public enterprises,¹ and for public school purposes.²

In Cases of Public Improvements the operation of the law is generally conditional on the petition of a specified proportion of the property owners to be affected thereby.³

c. NOTICE OF ELECTION — Necessity for. — When a vote for a tax for any purpose is to be taken, due notice or warning of the time, place, and purpose thereof must be given in the manner prescribed,⁴ and notice of some kind is necessary even though the statute which authorizes the election contains no right to increase the amount, if there is no showing to the contrary. Silsbee v. Stockle, 44 Mich. 561; Stockle v. Silsbee, 41 Mich. 615.

Voting Taxes in Advance. — Where electors at a town meeting have legal authority to vote taxes in advance, in order to meet the prompt payment of existing obligations, the question as to how far in advance they may be voted is to be determined by a vote of the electors of the town. Wright v. People, 87 Ill. 582.

Power Not Affected by Subsequent Vote. — Where an act, providing that a city could raise money for school purposes either by taxation or by issuing bonds, was adopted by popular vote, it was held that a subsequent vote against the issuance of the bonds did not take away the taxing power which had been conferred by the adoption of the act. Ayers v. McCalla, 95 Ga. 555. See also Charlotte v. Shepard, 122 N. Car. 602. But see Hamlin v. Meadville, 6 Neb. 227.

The North Carolina Constitution, art. 7, § 7, prohibits the levy of municipal taxes for other than "necessary expenses" except by a vote of the majority of the qualified voters. Under this the procuring of a water supply for the municipality is not a "necessary expense." Charlotte v. Shepard, 120 N. Car. 411; Edgerton v. Goldsboro Wafer Co., 126 N. Car. 93. Nor is a school tax. Rodman v. Washington, 122 N. Car. 39.

But after an issue of bonds has been duly voted for a purpose which is not a "necessary expense," implied authority to levy taxes to pay the debt exists without any further vote being taken. Charlotte v. Shepard, 122 N. Car. 602.

A charter giving a town general powers of taxation is not repugnant to this section of the constitution, it being presumed that the town authorities will obey the constitutional requirements in levying taxes. State v. Irvin, 126 N. Car. 989.

Iowa — Tax Authorized Before Vote Taken. — Under Iowa Acts 26th Gen. Assem., c. 1, cities of the first class may levy the tax provided therein for the purchase and erection of water-works before the contract for the purchase or construction has been approved by the voters. Youngerman v. Murphy, 107 Iowa 686.

"To Warn" Means nothing more than to notify a meeting appointed by other authority. Stone v. School Dist. No. Four, 8 Cush. (Mass.) 592.

Notice of Special Meeting. — As a general rule, no special notice is required of a regular annual meeting, the time of the annual meeting being fixed by law; but where the subject is to be considered at a special meeting, a special notice must be given. See Smith v. Crittenden, 16 Mich. 152; Marchant v. Langworthy, 6 Hill (N. Y.) 646; Hodgkin v. Fry, 33 Ark. 716.

Posting Notices. — A statute requiring an officer to post notices does not require him to do so in person. Phillips v. Albany, 28 Wis. 341. The posting of a warrant instead of a copy does not render the meeting illegal. Brewster v. Hyde, 7 N. H. 206. A requirement that notices of elections shall be posted in "three of the most public places in the town," means such express provision for notice.¹ If a meeting held for an election be not legally called, the tax voted is void.²

Necessity to Specify Purpose.—No tax for any purpose other than that stated in the notice of the meeting can be legally voted.³ Thus, for example, a notice stating the purpose to be the levying of a tax for the expenses of repairing a schoolhouse, will not warrant an additional tax to pay for the insurance of such house.⁴ But it has been held sufficient if the notice of the meeting or election enables those interested to understand its purpose.⁵ public places in the judgment of the officer. Sauerhering v. Iron Ridge, etc., R. Co., 25 Wis. 447.

A jury may presume that a warrant for a town meeting, shown to have been properly posted, remained so during the time required by law, after the lapse of thirty years. Schoff v. Gould, 52 N. H. 512.

Return of Warrant.—It seems that it is not necessary that any return of the warrant by the officer to whom it is directed should state the manner of service; so a return that "he had warned the inhabitants of the town" is sufficient, Houghton v. Davenport, 23 Pick. (Mass.) 237. See also Saxton v. Mimms, 14 Mass. 320. "That he had warned the inhabitants by posting up copies," has also been held sufficient. Thayer v. Stearns, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 109. See also Briggs v. Murdock, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 305. But see Perry v. Dover, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 206. In Nelson v. Pierce, 6 N. H. 194, a certificate that a warrant for holding a meeting had been duly posted more than fifteen days, was held insufficient to show that the meeting was duly notified. See also Tuttle v. Cary, 7 Me. 426.

Notice Too Long.—In Greenbanks v. Boutwell, 43 Vt. 207, where the statute required the notice of the meeting to be given at least seven, and not exceeding twelve, days before the meeting, a tax voted at a meeting held under a warning giving more than twelve days' notice was held invalid.

Request to Clerk to Warn Meeting Unnecessary. It is not essential to the validity of the proceedings of a school district to raise a tax at their annual meeting, that there should have been a request to the clerk to warn the meeting. Chandler v. Bradish, 23 Vt. 416.

Change of Voting Place After Notice.—In Lafayette, etc., R. Co. v. Geiger, 34 Ind. 185, it was held that an election was not rendered illegal by the fact that the place of voting was changed two days before such election, of which change no notice was given to the voter, there being no fraud and no evidence that any legal voter had been prevented from voting, and no illegal voter being thereby enabled to vote.

Trustees Not Liable as Trespassers.—Where a district clerk, in giving notice of a special district meeting regularly called, misrepresents the objects of the meeting to some of the taxable inhabitants, who, in consequence thereof, omit to attend, and a tax is voted, the trustees who caused the tax to be collected are not thereby to be rendered trespassers, unless they are parties to the fraud. Randall v. Smith, 1 Den. (N. Y.) 214.

3. Only for Purposes Specified.—Thatcher v. People, 93 Ill. 240; Drisko v. Columbia, 75 Me. 73; Little v. Merrill, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 543; State v. Greenleaf, 34 N. J. L. 441; Wyley v. Wilson, 44 Vt. 404; Atwood v. Lincoln, 44 Vt. 332; Allen v. Burlington, 45 Vt. 202. And see the title MUNICIPAL AID, vol. 20, p. 1112.

Purposes Not Specified.—A meeting warned to vote upon the question of raising money to meet the accruing expenses of the city government, and for school purposes for the ensuing year, cannot legally vote a tax for the purpose of erecting a high-school building. Allen v. Burlington, 45 Vt. 202.

No Purpose to Levy Tax Specified.—When a meeting was warned to see whether the town should appropriate money in the treasury for an object, it was held that the question of laying a tax for that purpose could not be considered. Torrey v. Millbury, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 64.

Combining Taxes for Different Purposes.—Two distinct taxes for two distinct village purposes, though both are authorized, cannot be combined in one notice and resolution, so as to compel voters to vote either for both or against both. North Tonawanda v. Western Transp. Co., Sheld. (N. Y.) 371.

4. Holt's Appeal, 5 R. I. 603.

5. Sufficient if Notice Fairly Expresses Purpose.—South School Dist. v. Blakeslee, 13 Conn. 234; Bartlett v. Kinsley, 15 Conn. 327.

Sufficiency of Notice.—A warning for a school meeting to decide whether the district shall have a school, and to provide for the expenses of the same, is sufficient to authorize a vote for a tax. Chandler v. Bradish, 23 Vt. 416.

A notice for a town meeting "to raise such sums of money as may be necessary to defray

d. PROCEEDINGS — Method of Conducting Election. — Where the statute provides no method for the conduct of the election, it must be conducted in the manner provided for general elections in the municipality where it is held.¹

Qualification and Registration of Voters. — The statutory provisions control almost entirely questions relating to qualification² and registration of voters.³

A Form of Ballot so clear and explicit that no voter can be misled as to the effect of his vote is sufficient.⁴

Majority Required. — The question what constitutes the required majority under such statutes has been discussed elsewhere.⁵

Fraud in the Election, or Undue Influence brought to bear on the voters, invalidates the tax voted.⁶

Merely Informalities or Irregularities which cannot prejudice any substantial right will not affect the validity of the tax.⁷

town charges for the ensuing year," is sufficient to authorize a vote to raise money for specific general purposes. Westhampton v. Searle, 127 Mass. 502. A meeting held in pursuance of a notice signed by one of the selectmen only "by order of the selectmen," was held to be unauthorized. Reynolds v. New Salem, 6 Met. (Mass.) 340.

Purpose Stated in Application for Meeting. — An application for calling a meeting of a school district, containing the purpose of the meeting, annexed to the warrant for calling the meeting, addressed to a person directed to warn the inhabitants of the district to meet for the purpose of acting on the articles named in such application, is a part of the warrant as effectually as if it were embodied in it. George v. Second School Dist., 6 Met. (Mass.) 497.

A Notice Which Is Ambiguous will be construed to intend a tax which would be valid, rather than one which the law does not permit; and when a valid tax is voted upon such a notice, it may be lawfully collected. Bartemeyer v. Rohlf, 71 Iowa 582.

1. Method Provided for General Elections. — Oregon v. Jennings, 119 U. S. 74; People v. Dutcher, 56 Ill. 144; Prairie v. Lloyd, 97 Ill. 179; Phillips v. Albany, 28 Wis. 340. See also People v. Laenna, 67 Ill. 65.

Requirement Not Applicable to Town Meetings. — A requirement that elections to authorize municipal subscriptions by towns shall be conducted as in case of annual elections, does not refer to town meetings, but to general elections. Prairie v. Lloyd, 97 Ill. 179.

Necessity for Ordinance. — Where the statute requires that an ordinance shall be passed authorizing the election, a mere resolution is not sufficient, and a vote taken thereunder is void. Miller v. State, (Tex. Crim. 1902) 69 S. W. Rep. 522.

2. Qualification of Voters. — See the titles MUNICIPAL AID, vol. 20, p. 1111; MUNICIPAL SECURITIES, vol. 21, p. 49.

Those Qualified to Vote at General Elections are those entitled to vote on taxing propositions, in the absence of any provision to the contrary. MacKenzie v. Wooley, 39 La. Ann. 944.

3. Registration. — See the titles MUNICIPAL AID, vol. 20, p. 1111; MUNICIPAL SECURITIES, vol. 21, p. 49. And see generally the title ELECTIONS, vol. 10, p. 611.

Massachusetts, etc., Const. Co., 96 N. Car. 515.

Opportunity to Register must be given to all persons qualified to vote; failure to do so will vitiate the election, if the denial should materially affect the result. McDowell v. Massachusetts, etc., Const. Co., 96 N. Car. 514.

4. Form of Ballot. — See the titles MUNICIPAL AID, vol. 20, p. 1112; MUNICIPAL SECURITIES, vol. 21, p. 49.

The Ballot Must Show that the Specific Question contemplated by the act, which authorizes a tax for a specific purpose, was passed upon. People v. Woodhull Tp., 14 Mich. 27.

5. Majority. — See the title MAJORITY, vol. 19, p. 613. And see also the titles MUNICIPAL AID, vol. 20, p. 1112; LOCAL OPTION, vol. 19, p. 506, and the following additional cases: *Mobile Sav. Proof of Vote. — Where it is required that the vote should be proved by affidavit in writing, the affidavit is not conclusive, but only prima facie evidence of the facts contained, unless otherwise provided by statute. Cagwin v. Hancock, 84 N. Y. 532.

Number Insufficient to Hold Election. — In Arkansas, where a school meeting is not attended by a sufficient number of electors to hold an election, it is the duty of the trustees to lay their estimate before the county court for their action, upon which the county court is required to make the levy. Union County Ct. v. Robinson, 27 Ark. 116.

6. Fraud or Undue Influence. — People v. San Francisco, 27 Cal. 655; Bish v. Stout, 77 Ind. 255; Truesdell v. Green, 57 Iowa 215; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Shea, 67 Iowa 728; State v. Lake City, 25 Minn. 404. And see the title MUNICIPAL AID, vol. 20, p. 1113.

The Burden Is upon the Taxpayer who resists the collection of a tax voted, to show that the election was void. School Dist. No. 88 v. Garvey, 80 Ky. 159.

As to Contesting the Election, see the titles MUNICIPAL AID, vol. 20, p. 1113; MUNICIPAL SECURITIES, vol. 21, p. 49. See also Dwyer v. Hackworth, 57 Tex. 247; Eddy v. Wilson, 43 Vt. 362.

Question for Jury. — Whether a special tax has been directed by popular vote, is a question of fact for the jury. Dent v. Bryce, 16 S. Car. 1.

7. Mere Irregularities Do Not Vitiolate. — Irwin v. Lowe, 89 Ind. 540; Rose v. Hindman, 36

Statement of Purpose in Vote. — It is sufficient if the vote states in general terms the purpose and object for which the money is raised,¹ and if the warrant for holding the meeting states the purposes for which the tax is to be levied, the tax will not be invalidated by reason of the fact that the vote fails to specify such purposes.²

Extent of Authority Conferred by Vote. — A tax can be levied only in conformity with the terms of the power conferred by the election.³

Certification of Vote. — To constitute the basis of a legal tax, the vote must be certified by the proper officers to the board or persons authorized to act upon it,⁴ and the certificate must conform to the law, else it will confer no authority to levy the tax.⁵

See also titles MUNICIPAL AID, vol. 20, p. 1108; MUNICIPAL SECURITIES, vol. 21, p. 49.

Insufficient Signatures to Petition. — After the tax has been voted and levied, its validity cannot be attacked on the ground that a petition calling for the election was not signed by the required number of taxpayers. Ryan v. Varga, 37 Iowa 78.

Time of Payment. — In Bartlett v. Kinsley, 15 Conn. 327, an omission in a vote to fix the time for the payment of a tax was held not to render the tax invalid, as otherwise it was legally imposed and payable on demand within a reasonable time.

Waiver of Objections. — Where no objections are made to the person who acts as judge at an election, at the time it is held, it is too late to raise any question afterwards. School Dist. No. 88 v. Garvey, 80 Ky. 159.

1. Vote Need Not State Specific Purpose. — A vote to raise a certain sum is sufficiently definite to authorize the assessment of a tax. Taft v. Barrett, 58 N. H. 447.

In West School Dist. v. Merrill, 12 Conn. 437, where it appeared from the vote, that the tax was for "defraying the expenses of the district as reported by our committee and approved of by vote of the district," the tax was held to be lawful; it not being essential to its validity that the particular object be specified.

A vote to raise "all the law allows" is sufficient, as it can be rendered certain by reference to the law. State v. Sickles, 24 N. J. L. 125. The vote that a tax be raised to pay the expense of repairs is sufficient, without a limitation as to the amount of the tax or the rate. Adams v. Hyde, 27 Vt. 221. A vote "to raise fifty-five cents on the dollar of the grand list to pay the bounty offered to soldiers," is sufficiently definite. Blodgett v. Holbrook, 39 Vt. 336. And see Halleck v. Boylston, 117 Mass. 469.

2. Purpose Stated in Warrant. — Mowry v. Mowry, 20 R. I. 74.

3. Authority Conferred by Election. — See the title MUNICIPAL AID, vol. 20, p. 1114.

Authorizes Tax for Specified Purpose Only. — A vote to raise money to defray town charges will not authorize a tax for the support of the ministry. Lisbon v. Bath, 21 N. H. 319.

A vote to levy a tax sufficient to keep schools open for a specified time will not authorize the levy of a tax for the succeeding year or any future year. Wells v. Board of Education, 20 W. Va. 157.

A vote to adopt an act regarding the establishment of public libraries does not authorize taxation by a library board created by an act passed after such vote is taken. State v. Des Moines, 103 Iowa 76, 64 Am. St. Rep. 157.

Discretion of Municipal Authorities. — When the voters empowered the municipal authorities to create a debt, issue bonds, and levy a special tax therefor, it was held that the authorities could, in their discretion, create the debt and levy the tax without issuing the bonds. Gray v. Bourgeois, 107 La. 671.

4. Vote Must Be Certified. — Cairo, etc., R. Co. v. Parks, 32 Ark. 131; Worthen v. Bodgett, 32 Ark. 496; Hodgkin v. Fry, 33 Ark. 716; School Directors v. Fogleman, 76 Ill. 189; Weber v. Ohio, etc., R. Co., 108 Ill. 451; State v. Van Winkle, 25 N. J. L. 73; Hardcastle v. State, 27 N. J. L. 551; State v. Duryea, 40 N. J. L. 266; Dent v. Bryce, 16 S. Car. 1; Matteson v. Rosendale, 37 Wis. 254; Plumer v. Marathon County, 46 Wis. 163.

Failure to Return in Time. — It is held that the failure to return the certificate of the vote, within the time required, will not invalidate the tax voted. Moore v. Fessenbeck, 88 Ill. 422; Smith v. Crittenden, 16 Mich. 152.

5. Certificate Must Conform to Law. — State v. Sullivan, 36 N. J. L. 89; State v. Duryea, 40 N. J. L. 266; School Dist. No. 8 v. Padden, 44 N. J. L. 151; McIntyre v. White Creek, 43 Wis. 620; Arnold v. Juneau County, 43 Wis. 627. But see Smyth v. Titcomb, 31 Me. 272.

Must Show Action of Trustees. — The action of the trustees in calling and holding the meeting at which a tax was voted according to law, should appear in the certificate of the clerk to the assessor. State v. Hurff, 38 N. J. L. 310.

Sufficient Certificate. — Where the clerk was required to certify the rate per centum of a tax voted, a certificate that the election was held upon the appropriate day, and that a majority of the votes cast were in favor of the tax, was held sufficient. Shontz v. Evans, 40 Iowa 139.

In New York, it was held that the certificate of town auditors allowing accounts, regular on its face, is a sufficient authority for the board of supervisors to proceed and cause the amount certified to be levied on the town, and such a certificate precludes the supervisors from inquiring as to the merits of particular items al-

6. Purposes of Municipal Taxation — a. IN GENERAL — Must Be Municipal and Corporate. — As has been shown hitherto the state has no power to tax except for purposes which are public,¹ and it follows that the legislature has no power to authorize a municipal corporation to levy taxes for private as distinguished from public purposes.² The exercise of the general grant of power to levy taxes must be for such purposes only as are municipal and corporate.³

At to What Constitutes a Corporate Purpose no exact rule which will cover all cases can be laid down. The question must necessarily be decided in view of the facts of each particular case.⁴ The point has been quite fully elaborated under a previous title,⁵ and it will be sufficient here to give a few additional illustrations of purposes which have been held to be municipal,⁶ and of those lowed. People v. Queens County, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 195.

Unlimited Grant of Power Void. — An attempt by the legislature to confer on a municipality an unrestricted power to tax for any and all purposes is invalid. Smith v. Fond du Lac, 10 Biss. (U. S.) 418; Foster v. Kenosha, 12 Wis. 618; Brodhead v. Milwaukee, 19 Wis. 624.

The Fact that a Tax May Incidentally Be Used for a Private Purpose is not sufficient ground to defeat its collection where its main object is to accomplish a proper municipal purpose. In case the city diverts such tax to an unlawful purpose the taxpayer can then obtain appropriate relief. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. People, 200 Ill. 541. See also Mayo v. Dover, etc., Village Fire Co., 96 Me. 539.

A Tax Is Not Necessarily Void in Toto where levied partly for a lawful purpose and partly for an unlawful one. Nalle v. Austin, 91 Tex. 424.

A Statute Giving a Town Power to Raise Money for Necessary Charges has been held to mean such sums as shall be necessary to meet the ordinary expenses of the year: such as the payment of municipal officers, the support and defense of actions to which it may be a party, and the expenses it incurs in performing duties imposed upon it by law. It does not extend to raising money to pay militia in time of war. Stetson v. Kempton, 13 Mass. 272, 7 Am. Dec. 145.

4. McCallie v. Chattanooga, 3 Head (Tenn.) 317.

In People v. Kelly, 76 N. Y. 475, Earl, J., discussing what are and what are not "municipal" purposes, said: "It is impossible to define in a general way with entire accuracy what a city purpose is, within the meaning of the constitution. Each case must largely depend upon its own facts, and the meaning of these words must be evolved by a process of exclusion and inclusion in judicial construction."

Need Not Be Wholly Within City Limits. — It is not essential to constitute a "city purpose," that the work shall be wholly within the city limits. A bridge connecting two cities is a city purpose for each. People v. Kelly, 76 N. Y. 489.

In Illinois the constitution, art. 9, §§ 9, 10, provides that the corporate authorities of the municipal governments may be invested with power to tax for corporate purposes. As to what constitutes a "corporate purpose" under this provision, see Taylor v. Thompson, 42 Ill. 9; Johnson v. Campbell, 49 Ill. 317; People v. Chicago, 51 Ill. 17, 2 Am. Rep. 278; People v. Salomon, 51 Ill. 37; Harward v. St. Clair, etc., Drainage Co., 51 Ill. 132; Gage v. Graham, 57 Ill. 144; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Smith, 62 Ill. 268, 14 Am. Rep. 99; School Trustees v. People, 63 Ill. 299; People v. Dupuyt, 71 Ill. 651; Sleight v. People, 74 Ill. 47; People v. School Trustees, 78 Ill. 136; Middleport v. Aetna L. Ins. Co., 82 Ill. 562; Law v. People, 87 Ill. 385; Will County v. People, 110 Ill. 511; Mather v. Ottawa, 114 Ill. 659; Wetherell v. Devine, 116 Ill. 631.

In Livingston County v. Darlington, 101 U. S. 407, the court reviewed the Illinois decisions and held that Livingston County v. Weider, 64 Ill. 427, was out of line with the other cases.

Taylor v. Thompson, 42 Ill. 9, defined a corporate purpose to mean "a tax to be expended in a manner which shall promote the general prosperity and welfare of the municipality which levies it." See also Middleport v. Aetna L. Ins. Co., 82 Ill. 562.

Not to Be Too Strictly Construed. — The term "corporate purposes" should not be so strictly construed as to render null a self-imposed tax, merely because it might be questionable whether it would promote the corporate welfare. Taylor v. Thompson, 42 Ill. 9.

Whether a Tax Is Necessary for purposes embraced within the charter, is to be determined by the taxing power,² and the courts will not interfere unless the determination is clearly erroneous.³

b. SINKING-FUND TAXES. — Power may be conferred on municipalities to provide a sinking fund for the payment of public loans, principal or interest.⁴

2. Necessity to Be Determined by Taxing Power.

— Hawkins v. Jonesboro, 63 Ga. 527; Anderson v. Mayfield, 93 Ky. 234; Mayfield Woolen Mills v. Mayfield, 61 S. W. Rep. 43, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 1676; Wheeler v. Plattsmouth, 7 Neb. 270.

In Public School Com'rs v. Allegany County, 20 Md. 449, it was held that a power to levy all needful taxes, and discharge all claims authorized by law, confers authority to provide for any local object sanctioned by the legislature.

Presumption of Legality. — A tax levied to pay the expenses of officers not named in the general law will be presumed to be legal. Law v. People, 87 Ill. 385.

3. Courts Will Not Interfere. — Mayfield Woolen Mills v. Mayfield, 61 S. W. Rep. 43, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 1676; McInerney v. Huelfeld, (Ky. 1903) 75 S. W. Rep. 237; Mitchell v. 4. Sinking Fund Taxes. — Union Pac. R. Co. v. Buffalo County, 9 Neb. 449; Union Pac. R. Co. v. York County, 10 Neb. 612; Newark Aqueduct Board v. Newark, 50 N. J. L. 126; Wilkes Barre's Appeal, 116 Pa. St. 246; Bagby v. Bate-man, 50 Tex. 446; Houston v. Voorhies, 70 Tex. 356; Conklin v. El Paso, (Tex. Civ. App.

1897) 44 S. W. Rep. 879. See also Stilz v. Indianapolis, 81 Ind. 582; Sinking Fund Com'rs v. Grainger, 98 Ky. 319; Wright v. San Antonio, (Tex. Civ. App. 1899) 50 S. W. Rep. 406.

What Will Not Invalidate Tax. — The fact that a tax levied to pay interest on bonds and create a sinking fund will not provide a sufficient fund to meet the bonds at maturity, will not invalidate the levy. Nor is such tax invalidated by the fact that the city which issued the bonds purchased them as an investment for its sinking fund. Conklin v. El Paso, (Tex. Civ. App. 1897) 44 S. W. Rep. 879.

And where such a tax was made payable to a sinking fund commission which no longer existed, it was held that this did not invalidate it, since there was no substantial prejudice to the taxpayers. Wooley v. Louisville, 71 S. W. Rep. 893, 24 Ky. L. Rep. 1357.

Power to Tax Before Sale of Bonds. — Under a statute authorizing a city to tax for a sinking fund for its bonded indebtedness existing at the time of the levy, no tax can be levied before the bonds are sold. But after the sale of a bond issue with accrued interest thereon a tax may be imposed for the annual interest and sinking fund thereon, although such bonds have been sold less than a year before the levy. And if part of the bonds have been sold prior to the levy the tax may be sustained as to them, though not as to the unsold bonds. Nalle v. Austin, (Tex. Civ. App. 1897) 42 S. W. Rep. 780.

Commissioners' Report a Prerequisite. — Where an act providing for the creation of a sinking fund, also provided that the commissioners of the fund should report to the council the amount necessary to be raised, it was held that the council had no authority to levy the tax until the commissioners had made their report. St. Louis County v. Nettleton, 22 Minn. 356.

Reservation of Special Tax. — In New York, it is provided that taxes assessed upon any railroad in a town, city, or village, which has issued bonds in aid of the construction of the road, are to be set apart as a sinking fund to be applied in payment of such bonds. This statute is not unconstitutional. Clark v. Sheldon, 106 N. Y. 104.

In North Carolina, there is a similar provision which has been held to be constitutional. Brown v. Hertford County, 100 N. Car. 92.

Pennsylvania — Annual Taxes to Pay Public Debts. — The constitution of Pennsylvania requires cities to impose annual taxes, when necessary for the purpose of paying their public debt. They are in addition to the usual taxes for city purposes; and, although limited, they may be used to extinguish indebtedness arising subsequently to the adoption of the constitution, as well as those previously existing. Wilkes-Barre's Appeal, 116 Pa. St. 246.

And it has been held that authority to make a levy to pay interest on a debt and provide a sinking fund for its extinction authorizes a tax to pay the instalments of such debt which fall due from year to year.¹ Under the power to tax for such a fund, taxes may not be levied to pay a floating indebtedness.² The tax cannot be continued after the purpose for which it was authorized has been accomplished;³ nor can the fund, when collected, be applied to any other purpose than that specified.⁴

7. Subjects of Municipal Taxation — a. IN GENERAL. — From the fact that a municipality has no taxing power at all except such as is granted to it by the state, it follows that only such property is liable to municipal taxation as is made so by the legislature.⁵

Under a General Power to Levy Taxes, a municipality may tax all property within its limits which is subject to taxation by the general laws of the state,⁶ not

1. May Tax to Pay Annual Instalments. — Mayfield Woolen Mills v. Mayfield, 61 S. W. Rep. 43, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 1676.

2. May Not Be Levied to Pay Floating Indebtedness. — Union Pac. R. Co. v. Buffalo County, 9 Neb. 449; Union Pac. R. Co. v. York County, 10 Neb. 612; Burlington, etc., R. Co. v. Clay County, 13 Neb. 367. But see Conklin v. El Paso, (Tex. Civ. App. 1897) 44 S. W. Rep. 879.

The State May Reserve to Itself the Right to tax a certain class of property without delegating a similar power to municipal corporations. See Newark v. State Board of Taxation, 67 N. J. L. 246, reversing 66 N. J. L. 466.

Act Relating to Counties Not Applicable to Boroughs and Townships. — An act enlarging the basis of county taxation so as to comprehend all objects liable to taxation for state purposes, does not render the additional subjects liable to taxation for borough and township purposes. Blickensderfer v. School Directors, 20 Pa. St. 38.

Property Exempt under the General Laws of the State cannot be taxed by a municipality under a grant in general terms of power to tax property within the municipal limits. Johnson Home v. Seneca Falls, 37 N. Y. App. Div. 147; Columbia, etc., R. Co. v. Chilberg, 6 Wash. 612. See generally the title EXEMPTIONS (FROM TAXATION), vol. 12, p. 266.

Property Not Enumerated by State Law. — In Baker v. Panola County, 30 Tex. 87, it was held that under a statute authorizing counties to levy and collect taxes for county purposes upon all subjects of taxation on which a tax may be levied by the state, if the state law omits to enumerate any particular thing or pursuit in the subjects to be taxed, it is not a subject of taxation on which a tax may be levied by the state and, therefore, is not taxable by the county.

The Good-will of a Business is not subject to municipal taxation. People v. Feitner, 44 N. Y. App. Div. 278.

What Included by "Taxable Property." — The definition of the words "taxable property" when used in a grant of the power to tax, as "all property not excepted by law from taxation," was approved in State v. Charleston, 10 Rich. L. (S. Car.) 240; St. Philip's Church v. Charleston, McMull. Eq. (S. Car.) 140; State v. Charleston, 5 Rich. L. (S. Car.) 564.

"Under the Revenue Laws of the State." — A city authorized to levy a tax upon the "taxpayers of the city taxable under the revenue laws of the state," must levy upon the same persons and property as prescribed by the revenue laws of the state. "Taxpayers of the city, taxable under the revenue laws of the state," authorizing the levy of a tax, designates both the person and subject of taxation. Barret v. Henderson, 4 Bush (Ky.) 255.

In Louisiana, police juries are vested with power to tax all property and persons within the limits of incorporated towns, unless the power be withheld or withdrawn by express legislative provision. Cook v. Dendinger, 38 La. Ann. 261; Benefield v. Hines, 13 La. Ann. 420; Maurin v. Smith, 25 La. Ann. 445.

Land of Nonresidents. — In Alexander v. Alexandria, 5 Cranch (U. S.) 1, it was held that the city of Alexandria had power to tax the lands of nonresidents within its limits.

Bridges. — So much of a bridge as is within the corporate limits is taxable by the city. St. Louis Bridge Co. v. East St. Louis, 121 Ill. 238; State v. Columbia, 27 S. Car. 137. See also Ft. Smith Bridge Co. v. Hawkins, 54 Ark. 509; Point Pleasant Bridge Co. v. Point Pleasant, 32 W. Va. 328.

But it cannot tax a bridge outside its limits. Sioux City Bridge Co. v. Dakota County, 61 Neb. 75.

In Kentucky it was formerly held that a bridge within the corporate limits could not only such as was taxable when the power was granted, but all made so by any general statute subsequently enacted.¹ Property which is taxable for one purpose must be held to be taxable for all purposes of general taxation;² and the fact that the state does not actually tax certain property will not prevent the municipality from taxing it, if it has not been exempted from taxation by the legislature.³

Personal Property which has its legal situs within the corporate limits is taxable by the municipality.⁴

Choses in Action are held to be embraced in some of the statutes authorizing municipal taxation,⁵ but under others they are not deemed to be included.⁶

Taxation of Corporations, their capital stock, franchises, and shares of stock in the hands of shareholders, is treated under a separate title.⁷

Relinquishment of Power Not Presumed.—As in the exercise of the power by the general government, it is never to be presumed that the right is abandoned or surrendered by the municipality unless it clearly appears that such was the intention.⁸

be taxed, since it was not within the range of municipal benefits. Louisville Bridge Co. v. Louisville, 81 Ky. 189.

But under the present constitution such a bridge is taxable. Louisville Bridge Co. v. Louisville, 58 S. W. Rep. 598, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 703, 65 S. W. Rep. 814, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 1635; Henderson Bridge Co. v. Henderson, 90 Ky. 498, 105 Ky. 32, affirmed 173 U. S. 592.

Designation by City Council.—A charter made taxable whatever property "the city council may designate." It was held a sufficient designation, where the council ordered the taxation of "any property of any kind subject to taxation under the laws of this commonwealth." Covington Gas-Light Co. v. Covington, 84 Ky. 94.

In Tackaberry v. Keokuk, 32 Iowa 155, it was held that any change in the general law in respect to the subject of taxation effects a corresponding change as regards the subject of taxation for municipal purposes where the power in the city refers to the general laws of the state for the subjects of taxation.

b. PUBLIC PROPERTY. — The question of the liability of public property to taxation has been fully discussed elsewhere.¹

c. PROPERTY OUTSIDE CORPORATE LIMITS. — As a general rule a municipal corporation has not, nor can the legislature give it, power to tax property the situs of which is outside the corporate limits.² Thus, where a city extended streets beyond its limits, and the owner of property situated outside such limits used the streets for certain purposes with the consent of the city, it was held that the city did not thereby acquire power to tax such property.³ But the legislature can authorize a city to assess and levy benefits on adjacent property where the assessment is for the benefit of all the property taxed and not for city purposes only.⁴ And a statute authorizing a city to collect water rents outside its limits has been upheld.⁵

d. ANNEXED TERRITORY — (1) In General. — In the absence of any provision by the legislature to the contrary, territory which is annexed to a municipality becomes at once liable to taxation for municipal purposes in the same manner as the territory lying within the original boundaries,⁶ and this Coal under River Beyond Low-water Mark. — Where the boundary of a corporation was the low-water mark in a river, it was held that the city had no power to tax coal under a river beyond that mark. Gilchrist's Appeal, 109 Pa. St. 600.

Land Not Legally Annexed. — Where an attempted extension of city limits is invalid, municipal taxes levied on the territory sought to be annexed are void. Pensacola v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 21 Fla. 492. And the fact that such territory is afterwards legally annexed will not validate previous taxes. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Maquillin, 12 Kan. 301.

Land Partly Within and Partly Without. — Where a municipality levies a tax on an entire tract which lies partly within and partly without the corporate limits, such tax is void as to the portion lying outside; and if the portions are not readily separable, the whole assessment is void. Sioux City Bridge Co. v. Dakota County, 61 Neb. 75.

A Bridge outside the corporate limits is not taxable. Sioux City Bridge Co. v. Dakota County, 61 Neb. 75.

Personal Property, whose situs assigned by the local law is outside the municipal limits, is not subject to municipal taxation. Montgomery v. Lebanon, 64 S. W. Rep. 509, 23 Ky. L. Property Removed After Passage of Act. — In Board of Aldermen v. Chollar-Potosi Gold, etc., Min. Co., 2 Nev. 86, it was held that the removal of property from a city after the passage of an act authorizing the city to tax all property within its limits, but before the passage of an ordinance prescribing the amount and manner of assessing and collecting, did not take away the city's right to tax such property.

Property Constructively Within City. — In Johnson v. Lexington, 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 521, it was held that the power of taxation conferred upon the city of Lexington extended only to property within the city, meaning visible property actually situated within the city, and not such property as had there merely a legal or constructive status.

Land Within Limits When Tax Levied. — Where land had been brought within the limits of a city before the levy of the annual taxes it was held to be subject to taxation for that is true although the purpose of the taxation is to meet obligations incurred by the municipality previous to the annexation.¹

On the Consolidation of Two or More Municipalities it is customary for the legislature to make provision as to how their respective liabilities shall be met.² Frequently each is required to discharge its own indebtedness, the existence of the original corporations being considered as continuing to the extent necessary to the payment of their debts.³

(2) Agricultural Lands—(a) Majority Rule.—It often happens that by the extension of municipal boundaries lands are included within the municipal limits which on account of their situation and unimproved condition remain available for agricultural purposes only. The question then arises whether such lands can be subjected to the payment of municipal taxes for purposes from which they derive no benefit, and on this point two conflicting doctrines obtain. According to the great weight of authority, if the annexation is legitimate and valid,⁴ the matter is to be regarded as one within the control of the legislature and not to be interfered with by the courts, notwithstanding such taxation be unequal and unjust and confer no benefit on the lands taxed.⁵

year although the statute authorized the obtaining of an abstract of the county assessment, whereon the municipal levy was based, at a date previous to the annexation. There was no statutory requirement that the city should levy its taxes on any certain day. Westport v. McGee, 128 Mo. 153. See also State v. Craig, 11 Ohio Cir. Dec. 348, 21 Ohio Cir. Ct. 13, wherein it was held to be the county auditor's duty to enter upon the annexed land the municipal instead of the township levy where the annexation took place on April 24, and the township levy was certified to him on April 27, and the municipal levy on May 15.

Land Annexed After Beginning of Year.—In Austin v. Butler, (Tex. Civ. App. 1897) 40 S. W. Rep. 340, it was held that land annexed after the beginning of the year could not be taxed for that year, although the assessment was not made till after the annexation.

Estoppel to Deny Liability.—Owners of annexed territory who show acquiescence in the annexation by voting at municipal elections, and other acts, are estopped to deny the liability of their lands for municipal taxes. Seward v. Rheiner, 2 Kan. App. 95; Lebanon v. Edmonds, 101 Ky. 216; Kuhn v. Port Townsend, 12 Wash. 605, 50 Am. St. Rep. 911. And see Sage v. Plattsmouth, 48 Neb. 558 (following South Platte Land Co. v. Buffalo County, 13 Neb. 605) wherein it was held that the owner of annexed land could not, after the lapse of several years, restrain the collection of municipal taxes on the ground that the extension was unauthorized.

Levy Based on Preceding Assessment.—In Iowa, where a territory is incorporated as a city, the levy following the incorporation must be based upon the preceding assessment made before the incorporation. Snell v. Ft. Dodge, 45 Iowa 564.

If the Annexation is Illegal, taxes levied by the municipality on the lands attempted to be annexed are void. Pensacola v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 21 Fla. 492; Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Maquillin, 12 Kan. 301.

4. Cannot Impair Vested Rights.—An act providing for the union of two or more districts or townships is wholly prospective in its operation; it furnishes a rule for the future only, and interferes with no vested rights, nor with the obligation of any contract. U. S. v. Memphis, 97 U. S. 284.

5. Power of Legislature to Extend Municipal Limits.—See the title MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, vol. 20, p. 1152.

Land Not Contiguous or Adjoining.—In Smith v. Sherry, 50 Wis. 210, it was held that the legislature could not authorize the inclusion in a village of land not contiguous to or joining it, and in which the existing corporation had no interest, the only purpose of such annexation being to increase the village revenues by taxing the annexed lands, therefore village taxes could not be imposed on such lands.

(b) "Benefit" Rule. — But in a few jurisdictions the courts have decided that, while the legislature possesses full power to extend the boundaries of municipal corporations, yet it cannot authorize the imposition of municipal taxation on land which derives no benefit from its inclusion within the municipality, such taxation being deemed a taking of private property for public use without due compensation.¹ Where this doctrine prevails, however, it is held that land is taxable, although used for agricultural purposes, if it fall within the range of municipal benefits.²

As to special assessments on agricultural lands for local improvements, see the title SPECIAL OR LOCAL ASSESSMENTS, vol. 25, p. 1193.

1. In Iowa the doctrine has been firmly maintained that agricultural lands cannot be subjected to municipal taxes if receiving no benefit therefrom. Morford v. Unger, 8 Iowa 82; Butler v. Muscatine, 11 Iowa 433; Langworthy v. Dubuque, 13 Iowa 86; Fulton v. Davenport, 17 Iowa 404; Buell v. Ball, 20 Iowa 282; Davis v. Dubuque, 20 Iowa 458; O'Hare v. Council Bluffs, 65 Iowa 238; Tubbesing v. Burlington, 68 Iowa 691; Taylor v. Waverly, 94 Iowa 661.

If the Land Is Included on the Original Incorporation the rule is the same as if it had been included by extension of the municipal limits. Buell v. Ball, 20 Iowa 282; Deeds v. Sanborn, 26 Iowa 214.

In Kentucky it was formerly held that land used exclusively for agriculture could not be taxed by the municipality where it received no benefit from such taxes. Cheaney v. Hooser, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 330; Covington v. Southgate, 15 B. Mon. (Ky.) 491; Sharp v. Dunavan, 17 B. Mon. (Ky.) 223; Arbegust v. Louisville, 2 Bush (Ky.) 271; Swift v. Newport, 7 Bush (Ky.) 37; Henderson v. Creech, (Ky. 1894) 26 S. W. Rep. 1101. And the same principle was applied to a bridge within the city limits. Louisville Bridge Co. v. Louisville, 81 Ky. 189.

But under the Present Constitution the rule is different, and farm lands lying within the municipal limits are now taxable without regard to benefits received. Board of Councilmen v. Scott, 101 Ky. 615; Board of Council v. Rarick, 102 Ky. 352; Richmond v. Gibson, (Ky. 1898) 46 S. W. Rep. 702; Latonia v. Hopkins, 104 Ky. 419; Hughes v. Carl, 106 Ky. 533; *Shuck v. Rep. 525, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 933. And the same rule applies to a bridge within the city limits. Louisville Bridge Co. v. Louisville, 58 S. W. Rep. 598, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 703, 65 S. W. Rep. 814, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 1655. And see Henderson Bridge Co. v. Henderson, 173 U. S. 592.

In Utah it has been held that municipal taxation should be limited to the range of municipal benefits, and therefore the territorial legislature had no power to authorize the taxation of lands which were located beyond the range of municipal benefits. People v. Daniels, 6 Utah 288; Ellison v. Linford, 7 Utah 166; Kaysville v. Ellison, 18 Utah 163, 72 Am. St. Rep. 772.

c. DETACHED TERRITORY.—In the absence of any provision to the contrary by the legislature, where territory is detached from a municipality it is no longer liable to taxation for municipal obligations incurred either before or after such division or detachment took place.²

But the Legislature May Provide for an Equitable Apportionment between the respective portions of burdens existing at the time of the division so that they will still be borne by the whole of the original territory.³

Conflict Between City and Parish.—Where a city undertook to annex territory and claimed that the parish authorities had no right to tax it, but the parish considered the annexation illegal, it was held that the parish might proceed to levy its taxes on the disputed territory and thus present for judicial determination the conflicting pretensions of the city, the parish not being bound to refrain from levying such taxes until it has tested the validity of the annexation in direct proceedings. *Lake Charles v. 8. Assessment.—In the main, the rules governing assessments by municipalities may be said to be the same as those governing assessments of state taxes.²

By Whom Made.—The question who is to make the assessment is usually dependent on the provisions of the local statutes.³ No one other than the authorized person or board can make a valid assessment,⁴ nor can the assessor's powers be delegated to another.⁵

Basis of Valuation.—Sometimes the municipality is by statute required to take the assessment for state, county, or town purposes as the basis of valuation for local purposes,⁶ and, in such case, the assessment must follow as far as possible that of the state, county, or town, even though the property be so situated as to render an original valuation necessary.⁷ But this is purely a matter of statutory regulation, and, of course, the municipality may be

The assessment in each town should be made by its own authorities. Hundley v. Lincoln Park, 67 Ill. 559.

5. Assessor's Powers Cannot Be Delegated.—Tampa v. Kaunitz, 39 Fla. 683, 63 Am. St. Rep. 202. But in Tampa v. Mugge, 40 Fla. 326, it was held that if the work is either done under the personal supervision of the assessor, or if he personally considers and adopts it, the assessment is valid although another person be employed in a clerical capacity to write up the assessment roll and put valuations of property thereon.

6. State, County, or Town Assessment as Basis of Valuation.—See Perry County v. Selma, etc., R. Co., 58 Ala. 546; Police Jury v. Harris, 10 La. Ann. 676; James Clark Distilling Co. v. Cumberland, 95 Md. 468; Westport v. McGee, 128 Mo. 152; Ridgefield v. Goodday, 65 N. J. L. 153; Covington v. Rockingham, 93 N. Car. 134; Germania Sav. Bank v. Darlington, 50 S. Car. 337; Wingate v. Ketner, 8 Wash. 94.

Time of Assessment.—In San Luis Obispo v. Petit, 87 Cal. 499, a provision that a city council may adopt a system for the assessment, levy, and collection of taxes, which shall conform to the general laws of the state as nearly as circumstances will permit, "except as to the times for such assessment," was held not to forbid the council selecting the time fixed for other taxes, but to leave the selection of the time to their discretion.

7. Original Valuation Necessitated.—People v. Adams, 125 N. Y. 471.

9. Collection. — Except in so far as specific statutory provisions control, the collection of taxes by municipal corporations is regulated by the same general principles that apply to state taxation.² It is a general rule that power to levy taxes carries with it authority to enforce their collection.³ Questions relating to the manner of collecting municipal taxes depend almost entirely on statutory or charter provisions.⁴

Right to Sue for Taxes. — On the theory that a tax is not a debt in the ordinary sense,⁵ it is generally held that no action can be maintained for its collection unless the legislature has granted power to do so,⁶ but power to sue for taxes is generally conferred on municipal corporations either by the special provisions of their charters or by general statutes.⁷ The conferring on a municipality of a

The Municipal Authorities May Elect to take the state and county assessment as the municipal assessment although the charter authorizes them to make an independent assessment. Lockey v. Walker, 12 Mont. 577.

New York — Village Assessment. — In Glover v. Edgewater, 3 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 497, a charter provision requiring the assessment roll of the village to be prepared, as far as practicable, in the manner prescribed by law in respect to assessments made by town assessors, was held to relate only to taxes to be raised for municipal purposes.

special remedy for the collection of taxes will not take away its authority to maintain an action at law therefor,¹ unless such special remedy be prescribed in the very law that confers the power to tax.²

Penalties. — The power to tax is usually deemed to include the power to prescribe penalties for nonpayment of the taxes assessed,³ though in some cases it has been held that such power does not exist unless expressly granted by the legislature.⁴ The penalty, when added, becomes part of the taxes due.⁵

The Collector. — Questions as to who is the proper person to collect municipal taxes depend almost entirely upon statutory provisions.⁶

1. Special Remedy Does Not Exclude Collection by Action. — See U. S. v. Lyman, 1 Mason (U. S.) 482; Oakland v. Whipple, 39 Cal. 113; Dubuque v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 39 Iowa 56; Burlington v. Burlington, etc., R. Co., 41 Iowa 134; State v. Southern Steamship Co., 13 La. Ann. 497; Dugan v. Baltimore, 1 Gill & J. (Md.) 499; Camden v. Allen, 26 N. J. L. 398; Durant v. Albany County, 26 Wend. (N. Y.) 66; Howard v. Houston, 59 Tex. 76.

In San Antonio v. Berry, 92 Tex. 319, it was held that a statute giving a municipal corporation authority to collect taxes in accordance with the provisions of such statute did not take away its power to collect by suit.

2. Special Remedy Exclusive. — Rochester v. Gleichauf, (Supm. Ct. Tr. T.) 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 446; Howard v. Houston, 59 Tex. 76.

3. May Prescribe Penalties. — Denver City R. Co. v. Denver, 21 Colo. 350; Burlington v. Burlington, etc., R. Co., 41 Iowa 134; Augustine v. Jennings, 42 Iowa 198; Slack v. Ray, 26 La. Ann. 674; State v. Consolidated Virginia Min. Co., 16 Nev. 445.

Interest on Delinquent Taxes. — The legislature may authorize a city to collect interest on delinquent taxes; and such a statute is not in conflict with a constitutional provision limiting the rate of interest under contracts. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Galveston, (Tex. 1903) 74 S. W. Rep. 537.

For Refusing Information to Assessor. — The municipal authorities may add a penalty for refusal to give the assessor proper information to enable him to properly make the assessment. Board of Alderman v. Chollar-Potosi Gold, etc., Min. Co., 2 Nev. 86.

In the Case of Special Assessments, however, only such penalties can be collected as are affixed by statute; the discretionary power of the municipality in regard to penalties extending to general taxes only. Ankeny v. Henningsen, 54 Iowa 29. And see Bucknall v. Story, 36 Cal. 67.

Who Liable. — A purchaser from the person who owned the land at the time the taxes were assessed is not liable to the penalty prescribed by ordinance against "the person owing such tax." San Antonio v. Raley, (Tex. Civ. App. 1895) 32 S. W. Rep. 180.

When Penalty Not Incurred. — Where, pending an appeal by a taxpayer from a tax assessment, the city makes no endeavor to collect the tax, and, immediately on the appeal being decided against him, the taxpayer tenders the amount of his taxes, the penalty for nonpayment cannot be enforced against him. Ferguson v. Pittsburgh, 159 Pa. St. 435.

Exorbitant Penalty. — In Weber v. San Francisco, 1 Cal. 455, it was held that a penalty of one per cent. a day was exorbitant, and that the common council had no authority under the charter of the city to impose it.

May Impose Penalty of Ten Per Cent. — Under a statute giving a city discretion as to the imposition of penalties, it may inflict a penalty of ten per cent. on the amount due. Owensboro Waterworks Co. v. Owensboro, (Ky. 1903) 75 S. W. Rep. 268.

4. Express Grant of Power Required. — Augusta v. Dunbar, 50 Ga. 387; Jefferson v. Whipple, 71 Mo. 519; San Antonio v. Raley, (Tex. Civ. App. 1895) 32 S. W. Rep. 180.

Fine or Imprisonment. — In Missouri, general words in a city charter are held not to be sufficient to give to the city the power to enforce a tax by fine or imprisonment, when the tax is levied not as a police regulation, but as a means of revenue, the municipality not having power to make the nonpayment of a purely revenue tax a misdemeanor punishable by fine and imprisonment. St. Louis v. Green, 6 Mo. App. 591; St. Louis v. Heinrich, 6 Mo. App. 591.

5. Penalty Becomes Part of Taxes Due. — Burlington v. Burlington, etc., R. Co., 41 Iowa 134; Kansas Pac. R. Co. v. Amrine, 10 Kan. 318. And see New Orleans v. Fisher, 180 U. S. 185.

6. By Whom Taxes Collected. — See the statutes, and the following cases: People v. Kelsey, 34 Cal. 470; Baird v. People, 83 Ill. 387; Springfield v. Edwards, 84 Ill. 626; Mix v. People, 106 Ill. 425; People v. Wilson, 3 Ill. App. 368; Britten v. Clinton, 8 Ill. App. 164; Suppiger v. People, 9 Ill. App. 290; White Sulphur Springs v. Pierce, 21 Mont. 130; Ferguson v. Pittsburgh, 159 Pa. St. 435; State v. Carson, 6 Wash. 250. And see generally supra, this title, XIV. Collection.

Cannot Collect for Adjoining Town. — A municipal tax collector cannot collect the taxes for an adjoining town, and this even though it has, after his election and after the levy of the tax, been annexed to the city. Mason v. Johnson, 51 Cal. 612.

No One but Authorized Collector Can Act. — Where a city treasurer is alone empowered by law to enforce the collection of unpaid city taxes, any contract made by the city or its common council, with any person, for their collection, is ultra vires, and absolutely void. Ft. Wayne v. Lehr, 88 Ind. 62.

Compensation of Collector. — Hagerstown v. Startzman, 93 Md. 606.

10. Taxes in Particular Districts and Quasi-Municipalities — a. IN GENERAL. — Districts for school, highway, levee, irrigation, drainage, and other similar purposes may be, and often are, invested by the state with a corporate character¹ and endowed with the taxing power.² They are quasi corporations — mere subdivisions of the state for political purposes — and not corporations within constitutional provisions prohibiting special acts conferring corporate powers;³ and in levying taxes for the purposes of their creation, they are in a large sense mere agencies of the state in carrying into effect general laws which have been enacted for the common good.⁴

b. SCHOOL DISTRICTS AND SCHOOL TAXES — (1) Delegation of Taxing Power. — As has already been shown, the establishment and maintenance of public schools is deemed to be a legitimate purpose of taxation,⁵ and, since the state has power to levy school taxes, it can delegate such power to its subordinate political divisions.⁶ Usually the power is expressly conferred by

1. Invested with Corporate Character. — See Dean v. Davis, 51 Cal. 406; Turlock Irrigation Dist. v. Williams, 76 Cal. 360; Taft v. Wood, 14 Pick. (Mass.) 362; Com. v. Beamish, 81 Pa. St. 389. And see such titles as DRAINS AND SEWERS, vol. 10, p. 233; FIRE LIMITS, vol. 13, p. 402; IRRIGATION, vol. 17, p. 527; PARKS AND PUBLIC SQUARES, vol. 21, p. 1065; SCHOOLS, vol. 25, p. 31.

Distinguished from Municipal Corporations. — See the title MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, vol. 20, p. 1130.

School Districts Are Not Strictly Municipal Corporations, but territorial divisions for the purposes of common schools exercising, within a prescribed sphere, many of the faculties of a corporation. Wharton v. School Directors, 42 Pa. St. 358.

City May Be a District. — The word "district" signifies a part or portion of the state. A city therefore may be a district. Keely v. Sanders, 99 U. S. 441.

Corporation Created by Implication. — Powers or privileges may be conferred, or duties enjoined, of such a character that a corporation would be required, and from which the corporation must be implied. If such powers or privileges cannot be enjoined, or if such duties cannot be performed, without acting in a corporate capacity, a corporation, to that extent, is created by implication. People v. Reclamation Dist. Number One Hundred and Eight, 53 Cal. 346.

2. Endowed with Taxing Power. — See People v. McAdams, 82 Ill. 356; Bowles v. State, 37 Ohio St. 35; Kinney v. Zimbleman, 36 Tex. 564.

Park Commissioners. — South Park Com'rs v. Chicago First Nat. Bank, 177 Ill. 234.

Effect of Statute Relating to General Taxation. — An act authorizing assessments for reclamation purposes is an act in relation to local taxation, and is not repealed by an act applicable to taxation for general purposes. Reclamation Dist. No. 3 v. Goldman, 61 Cal. 205.

4. Mere Agencies of State. — Will County v. People, 110 Ill. 511; Dean v. Davis, 51 Cal. 406; People v. Flagg, 46 N. Y. 401; People v. Ulster County, 93 N. Y. 397; State v. Powers, 38 Ohio St. 54.

To Whom Legislature May Delegate Taxing Power. — The legislature may delegate the power to impose a tax to commissioners, or such other agents as it may see fit to choose. Kinney v. Zimbleman, 36 Tex. 564; Bull v. Read, 13 Gratt. (Va.) 78. For a general discussion of this question, see supra, this title, Power of Taxation — Delegation of Power.

Corporate Authorities. — By the phrase "corporate authorities," as used in a constitutional limitation upon the power of the legislature to grant the right to tax to any other than "corporate authorities," are understood those officers who are directly elected by the people of the district sought to be taxed, or appointed in some mode to which they have assented. Harwood v. St. Clair, etc., Drainage Co., 51 Ill. 130; Lee v. Ruggles, 62 Ill. 427; Hessler v. Drainage Com'rs, 53 Ill. 105; Cornell v. People, 107 Ill. 372; People v. McAdams, 82 Ill. 356; *People v. As to school funds created by taxation, see cases cited in the title SCHOOLS, vol. 25, p. 63, note 4.

That this power is not delegated by the constitution to Congress or prohibited to the states, see Marshall v. Donovan, 10 Bush (Ky.) 681; Collins v. Henderson, 11 Bush (Ky.) 74.

6. Right of State to Delegate Taxing Power. — See supra, this title, Power of Taxation — Delegation of Power.

Validity of Statutes Granting Power. — See Southern R. Co. v. St. Clair County, 124 Ala. 491; People v. Lodi High School Dist., 124 Cal. 694; *Board of Education v. the state on existing political divisions,¹ or on districts constituted as corporations for school purposes.² But these municipal and quasi-municipal corporations have no inherent authority to tax for school purposes, and can exercise the taxing power only when it is conferred upon them by constitutional provision,³ or by legislative enactment in express terms,⁴ or by necessary implication.⁵ Questions relating to the nature and extent of the power delegated School Districts Cannot Be Voted with Taxing Power in some states. Schultes v. Eberly, 82 Ala. 242; Lipscomb v. Dean, 1 Lea (Tenn.) 546.

In Illinois, There Is No Constitutional Limitation to "the power" of the legislature in the formation of school districts, or in prescribing who shall and who shall not be empowered with the levy and collection of school taxes. See Speight v. People, 87 Ill. 595.

For What Schools Taxation May Be Authorized.—See generally supra, this title, Purpose of Taxation. And see the title SCHOOLS, vol. 25, p. 64.

Private School.—In People v. McAdams, 82 Ill. 356, it was held that the legislature could not constitute a private schoolhouse, erected under the provisions of a will, a district school, and provide for the election of trustees therein and invest them with the taxing power for the support of the school.

Agricultural College.—The legislature may authorize the town to raise money for an agricultural college to be established therein by the state. Merrick v. Amherst, 12 Allen (Mass.) 500.

Schools Not Required to Be Supported by General Laws.—The general power to tax for the support of town schools is not restricted to such schools as are required to be supported by general laws. Cushing v. Newburyport, 10 Met. (Mass.) 508.

Mandatory Act.—An act providing that the county commissioners may levy a tax for school purposes is held to be mandatory. Jones v. State, 17 Fla. 411.

School District Must Have Legal Existence.—Green Mountain Stock-Ranching Co. v. Savage, 15 Mont. 189. And see Hamilton v. San Diego County, 108 Cal. 273; Benson v. Bloomfield Tp., 58 N. J. L. 491.

Towns May Be Authorized to Determine the Limit of such districts. Taft v. Wood, 14 Pick. (Mass.) 362; Withington v. Eveleth, 7 Pick. (Mass.) 106.

Neglect or Refusal of District.—In New Hampshire, power is given, in the first instance, to school districts, to raise money by vote, to build or repair schoolhouses for the use of the district, and to locate the same; but upon their unreasonable neglect or refusal, the jurisdiction devolves on the selectmen of the town, who are bound to assess a sufficient tax on the district for that purpose. Blake v. Sturtevant, 12 N. H. 567.

After a City Assumes Control of Its Free Schools, its schoolhouses become public buildings, and the city can impose a tax of one-quarter of one per cent. for their erection. Dwyer v. Hackworth, 57 Tex. 246.

Consolidation of Two Districts.—A new school district created by vote of a town, uniting two old districts, has no authority to raise money by a tax to repay to one of the old districts the proportion of the value of a schoolhouse existing therein at the time of the union, for which the other old district would have been liable had it been built by the union district. Bacon v. Thirteenth School-Dist., 97 Mass. 421.

If There Be a Fair Doubt as to the Existence of the power, it must be resolved in favor of the public. Marion, etc., R. Co. v. Alexander, 63 Kan. 72.

Not a Municipal Purpose.—In Nelson v. Homer, 48 La. Ann. 258, it was held that such a tax is not for a municipal purpose, and could not be levied under a general grant of power to tax for municipal purposes, or under the general welfare clause in a municipal charter. See also Root v. Erdelmeyer, 37 Ind. 225.

But see Horton v. Mobile School Com'rs, 43 Ala. 598, in which the power to tax for the maintenance of schools was deemed to be within a general grant of power to tax for municipal purposes.

In Maine, school districts are under no legal obligation to support schools and have no power to raise money for that object; the law imposes this duty on towns. School Dist. No. 3 v. Brooks, 23 Me. 543; Dore v. Billings, 26 Me. 56.

5. The Power to Tax Is Implied in a law providing for the establishment of schools, and that for the purpose of supporting schools and other necessary expenses the trustees shall have the power and discharge the duties of school directors, etc. Fisher v. People, 84 Ill. 491.

And see generally supra, this section, Power to Tax—Power by Necessary Implication.

Power to Tax for Building Schoolhouses is conferred by a law giving authority to establish schools and levy taxes to defray the expenses thereof. Bull v. Read, 13 Gratt. (Va.) 78.

depend almost entirely on the terms of the statutes granting such power, which vary widely in the different states.¹

(2) Exercise of Power — By Whom Exercised. — The power to impose taxes for school purposes must be exercised by the proper officials, else the tax will not be valid.²

Mode of Exercise. — The manner in which school taxes shall be levied is generally provided for by statutes, the provisions of which vary widely in the different jurisdictions, and questions relating to the sufficiency of a levy must, for the most part, be resolved by consulting them.³ In order for the tax to be valid it is essential that all the mandatory provisions of the statutes be complied with,⁴ and where the validity of such a tax is assailed, compliance with

Submission to Popular Vote.—While the legislature may, if it sees fit, confer the power to levy school taxes without requiring a previous submission to the voters,⁴ yet it is usually provided that the approval of the voters shall first be obtained.⁵ Where this is the case no valid tax can be levied without a previous submission to the voters,⁶ and the election must be conducted in compliance with the statutory requirements.⁷

Limitations on Rate. — Limitations on the rate of taxation for school purposes may be, and frequently are, fixed by statute,¹ and, where such a limit is prescribed, no valid tax can be levied in excess thereof.² But a limitation will apply to such taxes only as are contemplated by the statute creating it,³ and restrictions upon the rates of taxation for other purposes are held not to affect school district taxes.⁴ Authority is sometimes given by statute to tax in excess of the limit under certain circumstances.⁵

Judicial Control. — In the absence of any manifest abuse of discretion the courts will usually refuse to interfere with the action of the constituted authorities in levying school taxes.⁶

(3) Persons and Property Taxable. — The statutes usually indicate the persons and property taxable for school purposes. Unless otherwise provided such taxes may be imposed upon all the property within the district subject to taxation generally.⁷ But in the absence of express legislative authority a

Statute Attaching Land for School Purpose.—In Kent v. Kentland, 62 Ind. 291, 30 Am. Rep. 182, it was held that a statute authorizing a municipality to collect a tax for the payment of a debt contracted in the construction of a school building, upon the property of persons residing and having property outside of the municipal limits, who have sent their children to a school within the municipality in such school building, is constitutional.

A Tract Lying Partly Within a District is usually taxable only as to the part therein. Shaw v. Lockett, 14 Colo. App. 413; Jackson v. Brewer, 66 S. W. Rep. 396, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 1871. And see Paintsville Graded Free School Dist. v. Davis, 64 S. W. Rep. 438, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 838. Joint Free High School District—Apportionment.—State v. Lamont, 86 Wis. 563.

Estate of Nonresidents—Massachusetts.—A compliance with a requirement that the estates of nonresident owners shall be taxed in such districts as the assessors of the town determine, is a condition precedent to a valid assessment of a school tax, and if it is not complied with, any inhabitant of the district may avail himself of the defect. Rawson v. School Dist., 100 Mass. 134; Taft v. Wood, 14 Pick. (Mass.) 362. But a school tax is not rendered void by the omission of the assessor, through misinformation or error of judgment, to assign the real estate of one or more resident owners to any school district. George v. Second School Dist., 6 Met. (Mass.) 497.

The union of two school districts is such a redistricting of a town as makes it necessary for the assessors to make a new certificate, before the estate of a nonresident previously taxed in one of the old districts can be taxed in the new one, under the Massachusetts statute requiring such a certificate whenever a town is redistricted anew. *Bacon v. (4) Collection and Disposition of Fund.—The principles governing the collection of school taxes are in the main the same as those applicable to general taxes.²

The Disposition of the School Fund is generally subject to the control of the legislature,³ and questions relating thereto usually depend for their solution upon the terms of the statutes.⁴ A school fund cannot be appropriated to any other purpose than that contemplated by the statute under which it was raised.⁵

c. HIGHWAY DISTRICTS AND STREET AND HIGHWAY TAXES—(1) Delegation of Taxing Power.—In the absence of any constitutional provision to the contrary,⁶ the paramount and primary control, both of the highways in the state and of the streets in its cities, is vested in the legislature,⁷ and it may itself

6. Constitutional Provisions sometimes govern the control of the highways. See Logan v. Ouachita, 105 La. 499; Atty.-Gen. v. Bay County, 34 Mich. 46, and jurisdiction thus conferred on designated officials cannot be taken away by the legislature. Jefferson County v. Arrighi, 54 Miss. 668. But the manner of its exercise is subject to legislative control. Jefferson County v. Arrighi, 54 Miss. 666; Paxton v. Baum, 59 Miss. 531.

7. Control Vested in Legislature.—Hingham, etc., Bridge, etc., Corp. v. Norfolk County, 6 exercise such power directly.¹ However, unless prohibited by the constitution, it may, and usually does, delegate such control, together with the power to tax for the construction and maintenance of streets and highways, to municipal or quasi-municipal corporations or districts created for that purpose.² In marking out highway districts the legislature need not follow existing lines,³ and in order to equalize the burden it may unite several districts and municipalities into one taxing district.⁴

Extent of Power. — The power to levy highway taxes exists in municipalities and other subordinate political divisions only when expressly given by law,⁵ Legitimate Purpose of Taxation. — It has already been shown that the construction and maintenance of highways is a legitimate purpose of taxation. See supra, this title, Purpose of Taxation. See also Lowe v. White County, 156 Ind. 163.

As to power to impose special assessments for highway purposes, see the title SPECIAL OR LOCAL ASSESSMENTS, vol. 25, p. 1183.

Car. 570; Dawson v. Barron, 9 Ohio Dec. 706.

Constitutional Provisions must not be violated by the statute delegating the power, such as a provision fixing an equation between the tax on the poll and the tax on property. State v. Godwin, 123 N. Car. 697; and see Stone v. Bean, 15 Gray (Mass.) 42. Or one requiring uniformity of taxation. Fletcher v. Oliver, 25 Ark. 289. See also Gunnison County v. Owen, Nature of Highway District. — Highway districts are merely divisions of highways made from year to year, for the sake of convenience and system in keeping the roads in repair. They do not possess any of the attributes or functions of corporations. Kimball v. Russell, 56 N. H. 488.

Commissioners of Highways. — In Illinois, commissioners of highways are corporate bodies whose power and jurisdiction are limited territorially to their respective towns, but they are a part of the machinery of the county and state governments, and as such, under certain contingencies, are required to act in concert with the county authorities. Will County v. People, 110 Ill. 511.

Special Commissioners Not County Officers. — Special commissioners named by statute to lay out state roads are not county officers, though required, for purposes of record, to render an account of their proceedings to the board of supervisors. Alcona County v. White, 54 Mich. 503.

What Included in Road Taxes. — Taxes levied for road purposes include all taxes collected for the payment of damages arising from opening and laying out roads, and the purchase of materials for constructing and repairing roads and bridges, etc., as well as a tax for making and repairing roads only. People v. Wilson, 3 Ill. App. 368. And see People v. Buffalo County, 4 Neb. 150.

Road Tax a County Tax. — In State v. Hannibal, etc., R. Co., 101 Mo. 120, it was held that a road tax is a county tax, within the meaning of a corporate charter exempting a corporation from the payment of county taxes.

3. Need Not Follow Existing Lines. — Monroe County v. Harrell, 147 Ind. 500; People v. Lawrence, 41 N. Y. 141; Bowles v. State, 37 Ohio St. 35.

4. May Unite Several Municipalities or Districts. — Carter v. Cambridge, etc., Bridge Proprietors, 104 Mass. 236; Com. v. Newburyport, 103 Mass. 129.

A district may be made to consist of an entire city, or only one of its wards or precincts; an entire county, or only one or two of its towns. Cooper v. Ash, 76 Ill. 11; Atty. Gen. v. Cambridge, 16 Gray (Mass.) 247; Uhrig v. St. Louis, 44 Mo. 458; People v. Richmond County, 20 N. Y. 252.

5. Power Exists Only When Expressly Given. — Haisten v. Glower, 114 Ga. 992; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. People, 184 Ill. 174; Johnson v. Boske, 66 S. W. Rep. 400, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 1845; Ryersson v. Laketon Tp., 52 Mich. 509; and its extent is limited by the terms of the statute conferring it.¹

(2) Exercise of Power. — In levying highway taxes the local authorities must comply with all the substantial requirements of the statute conferring the power, else the tax will be invalid,² but mere irregularities not affecting the substantial justice of the tax will generally not be allowed to defeat it.³ The authorized officials are usually required to ascertain annually the sum necessary for roads and bridges for the ensuing year, and after levying a tax therefor⁴ make a return of the levy to the county clerk, or other proper officer, Michigan Land, etc., Co. v. Republic Tp., 65 Mich. 628.

Leviable Only for Purposes Contemplated by Statute. — Libby v. State, 59 Neb. 264; Dixon County v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (Neb. 1901) 25 N. W. Rep. 340.

For What Roads Taxes Leviable. — Taxes may be levied for highways which are contemplated, though not actually laid out. Sawyer-Goodman Co. v. Crystal Falls Tp., 56 Mich. 597; Peninsula Iron, etc., Co. v. Crystal Falls Tp., 60 Mich. 510. And see Mix v. People, 106 Ill. 425. And the same is true where the highways are actually used as such but the use of the land has never been legally acquired from the owners. Peninsula Iron, etc., Co. v. Crystal Falls Tp., 60 Mich. 510.

But such taxes cannot be levied where not laid for any existing highways or in contemplation of any intended to be opened. Michigan Land etc., Co. v. L'Anse Tp., 63 Mich. 700.

The Necessity for Laying Out a Highway is left to the discretion of the highway commissioners and supervisors by the Illinois statutes; and the fact that it will operate as a hardship on the taxpayers and is not required by the public interests cannot defeat the tax. Highway Com'rs v. Jackson, 165 Ill. 17.

Necessity for Tax held to be sufficiently shown, notwithstanding the fact that there was a considerable fund on hand. Thayer Lumber Co. v. Springfield Tp., (Mich. 1902) 90 N. W. Rep. 677.

Report by Board of Supervisors. — Where the county is required to contribute to a township one-half the expense of building a bridge, the township commissioners of highways do not levy the tax, but simply determine, in pursuance of the statute, when the contingencies have arisen requiring the county to contribute, and ascertain and report to the county authorities the cost of the structure, one-half of which the law requires them to pay; and in such case it is their duty to levy a tax to raise the required sum. Will County v. People, 110 Ill. 511. And that he may extend it the same as other taxes for collection.¹ They must not levy taxes in excess of a limitation imposed by the legislature,² or violate constitutional provisions, such as those requiring taxation according to value,³ or uniformity of taxation.⁴

(3) Persons and Property Taxable. — It is for the legislature to decide, subject to constitutional restrictions, on what persons and property the cost of constructing and maintaining highways shall fall,⁵ and it may determine whether such cost shall be borne by the contiguous property, by the city, or county at large, or in part by each.⁶ Where a highway runs through several without such action by the board of supervisors, the tax cannot be extended. Leachman v. Dougherty, 81 Ill. 324.

Illinois — Town Meetings May Direct Raising of Money. — Under the Illinois township organization law, the town meeting is also authorized to direct the raising of money for the maintenance and construction of roads and bridges. Thatcher v. People, 79 Ill. 597.

1. Return of Levy. — Highway Com'rs v. Newell, 80 Ill. 587.

What Does Not Vitiolate Tax. — Though the law directs town taxes to be extended in a separate column, the failure of the clerk to extend the road tax in a separate column will not vitiate the tax; nor will the failure of the town clerk to certify the levy to the county clerk within the time required by law. Thatcher v. People, 79 Ill. 597. And see Silsbee v. Stockle, 44 Mich. 561.

Authentication. — If not authenticated by the officer whose duty it is to return it, according to law, subsequent proceedings are invalidated. Hogelskamp v. Weeks, 37 Mich. 422.

Failure to Apportion the valuation and the amount of the tax among the various road districts in a town was held not to vitiate the tax. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. People, 174 Ill. 80.

2. Must Not Exceed Limitation. — People v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 201 Ill. 365; Flint, etc., R. Co. v. Auditor Gen., 41 Mich. 635; *Peninsular Sav. Bank v. Local Assessments for Benefits are the means usually adopted to raise funds for the construction and maintenance of streets and other local improvements in cities, and the same principle has been sometimes applied to agricultural lands in defraying the expense of constructing roads. See the title SPECIAL OR LOCAL ASSESSMENTS, vol. 25, p. 1166.

Apportionment of Expense Between Town and County. — Norwich v. Hampshire County, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 60; Boston Water Power Co. v.

districts, or other subordinate political divisions, it may be made the duty of each to maintain its respective portion.¹

Persons and Property in Incorporated Cities and Towns. — The legislature may, if it sees fit, include persons and property in incorporated cities and towns within the operation of road taxes.² But it may, and frequently does, exempt them from such taxes,³ and such exemption is not unconstitutional if an equivalent burden be imposed on them for the maintenance of their streets,⁴ but in the absence of such equivalent burden a constitutional provision requiring uniform taxation would be violated.⁵

(4) Collection and Disposition of Fund. — Questions concerning the collection of road taxes depend almost entirely upon the terms of the statutes.⁶

Boston, etc., R. Co., 23 Pick. (Mass.) 360; Hingham, etc., Bridge, etc., Corp. v. Norfolk County, 6 Allen (Mass.) 353.

Whole Township Liable. — In Maine, when a county road exists within the limits of an unincorporated township, the whole township is liable to be taxed to keep it in repair, notwithstanding the road is entirely within the western half of the township. King v. Aroostook County, 63 Me. 567.

Exemption Not a Contract. — A provision that certain towns shall never be compelled to support any part of certain roads or bridges without their consent, is not in the nature of a contract between the commonwealth and such towns that they shall be forever exempt from the burden of maintaining such roads and bridges. Brighton v. Wilkinson, 2 Allen (Mass.) 27.

1. Apportionment Among Districts. — Shaw v. Dennis, 10 Ill. 405; Will County v. People, 110 Ill. 511; Cambridge v. Lexington, 17 Pick. (Mass.) 222; *Hingham, etc., Bridge, etc., Corp. v. And see Herrington v. Dixon, 122 N. Car. 420; Seanor v. Whatcom County, 13 Wash. 48.

In Jensen v. Polk County, 47 Wis. 298, it was held that the general rule and policy of the law of the state is to impose the burden of constructing and repairing highways upon the several towns through which they run, whether such roads are provided for by state, county, or town authorities; and an intent to the contrary must plainly appear in the act providing for the road.

Apportionment Based on Judicial Investigation. — Where the legislature finds that the apportionment of the burden of providing a thoroughfare among several counties and towns requires a more full and exact investigation than a committee of its own body could make, it may properly institute an investigation of a judicial character, giving parties interested an opportunity to be heard by evidence and argument. Salem Turnpike, etc., Bridge Corp. v. Essex County, 100 Mass. 282.

Contribution to Maintenance of Highway in Another Town. — Sometimes provision is made by statute for contribution by one town towards the maintenance of a highway in another town.

See Campton v. Plymouth, 64 N. H. 304; Wardsboro v. Jamaica, 59 Vt. 514; Parker v. East Montpelier, 59 Vt. 632; Grand Isle v. Milton, 68 Vt. 234.

Bridge Between Two Towns. — County commissioners may be authorized to lay out a highway across a river separating two towns, and apportion the expense of erecting and maintaining the bridge upon the towns in proportion to their valuation. Waterville v. Kennebec County, 59 Me. 80.

Burden of Maintaining Bridge Put on County. — Towns in which a bridge is situated may be relieved of the burden of maintaining it and the liability imposed upon the county. People v. Dutchess County, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 50.

2. May Include Cities and Towns. — O'Kane v. Treat, 25 Ill. 557; Cooper v. Ash, 76 Ill. 11; Peoria, etc., R. Co. v. People, 144 Ill. 458; Byran v. Marion County, 145 Ind. 240; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Murphy, 106 Iowa 43; State v. Arnold, 136 Mo. 446. And see Bennehoff v. Mansfield, 2 Ohio Dec. 404, 2 Ohio N. P. 225.

Kerr*, 123 Ill. 659; Marks v. Woodbury County, 47 Iowa 452; Shapter v. Carroll, 18 N. Y. App. Div. 390. And see Osborne v. Mecklenburg County, 82 N. Car. 400.

Land Taken into City. — Where land subject to taxation to meet outstanding bonds, issued for the maintenance of a road, was taken into a city, it was held to be still subject to such taxes till the bonds were paid. Boas v. Ft. Hunter Road Commission, 20 Pa. Co. Ct. 482.

4. Exemption Valid Where Equivalent Burden Imposed. — Miller v. Kern County, 137 Cal. 516; Gunnison County v. Owen, 7 Colo. 467; Fairplay v. Park County, 29 Colo. 57; Washington County v. Saltville Land Co., 99 Va. 640.

5. Violation of Provision Requiring Uniformity. — Fletcher v. Oliver, 25 Ark. 289. See generally supra, this title, Power of Taxation — Constitutional Restrictions — Restrictions in State Constitutions — Equality and Uniformity. And see the title EXEMPTIONS (FROM TAXATION), vol. 12, p. 266.

6. Collection of Road Taxes. — See the statutes, and the following cases: Kinney v. People, 52 Ill. App. 359; Morrow v. Shober, 19 Ind. App. 127; Wallace v. International Paper Co., 53 N. Y. App. Div. 41; Creswell v. Montgomery, 13 Pa. Super. Ct. 87; Mason County v. Simpson, 13 Wash. 250.

By Whom Collected — Supervisors. — Magill v.

Such taxes, when collected, become no part of the funds of the municipality collecting them,¹ but must be apportioned among the respective districts in accordance with the statute,² and cannot be applied to any other purpose than that for which they were levied.³

(5) Work on Highways — (a) In General. — In some states there are statutory provisions for keeping highways in repair by requiring the citizens to labor thereon for a specified number of days or pay a certain sum of money in lieu thereof.⁴ But a road tax is not payable in labor unless the statutes so provide.⁵

Power to Compel Work on Roads. — The municipal authorities cannot compel citizens to work on the highways unless given power to do so by the legislature,⁶ Hellyer, 2 Pa. Dist. 644; Creswell v. Montgomery, 13 Pa. Super. Ct. 87.

Payment to Wrong Person. — Baier v. Hosmer, 107 Wis. 380.

1. See Lima v. McBride, 34 Ohio St. 338.

Not County Moneys. — Moneys raised by road tax as a special fund for the construction of state roads are not county moneys, though placed in the hands of the county treasurer for safe keeping. Alcona County v. White, 54 Mich. 503.

Wrongful Collection — Remedies. — See Butler Fayette County, 46 Iowa 326; Des Moines, etc., R. Co. v. Lowry, 51 Iowa 486; Stone v. Woodbury County, 51 Iowa 522; Florer v. McAfee, 135 Ind. 540; Kimball v. Russell, 56 N. H. 488; Lewis v. Symmes, 61 Ohio St. 471; Judd v. Fox Lake, 28 Wis. 583.

2. Apportionment of Fund. — Fairplay v. Park County, 29 Colo. 57; Duval County v. Jacksonville, 36 Fla. 196; Genesee v. Latah County, 4 Idaho 141; Libbey v. State, 59 Neb. 264; Salem v. Marion County, 25 Oregon 449; Oregon City v. Moore, 30 Oregon 221; Oregon City v. Clackamas County, 32 Oregon 491.

In Illinois, road taxes collected by the officers of a town within a village are required to be paid to the village treasurer, and that part of the tax which is derived from property outside the village is to be paid to commissioners of highways. McFarland v. People, 2 Ill. App. 615; Clinton v. Clintonia, 3 Ill. App. 36; Baird v. People, 83 Ill. 387; People v. Suppiger, 103 Ill. 434.

3. Not Available for Other Purposes. — Highway Com'rs v. Newell, 80 Ill. 587. And see Clark v. Dayton, 6 Neb. 192. See generally supra, this title, Distribution and Disposition of Avails of Taxation.

A Wrongful Application of the Road Fund May Be Restrained at the instance of a taxpayer. Miller v. Bowers, 30 Ind. App. 116.

Appropriation Before Collection. — The highway authorities cannot make expenditures on account of the road fund in anticipation of the ensuing annual levy. Webster v. Douglas County, 102 Wis. 181, 72 Am. St. Rep. 870.

But in Barnard v. Argyle, 20 Me. 296, it was held that, where the highway tax had been assessed and was in process of collection, orders might be drawn on such fund.

4. Statutes Authorizing Labor on Highways. — Cooper v. Ash, 76 Ill. 11; Mee v. Paddock, 83 Ill. 494; Wahl v. Nauvoo, 64 Ill. App. 17; Matter of Dassler, 35 Kan. 678; Ryerson v. State, 24 N. J. L. 622.

In Maine, where the citizen fails to appear and labor on the roads after due notice, the amount is then charged against him as a cash tax. See Treat v. Orono, 26 Me. 217; Patterson v. Creighton, 42 Me. 367; Ingalls v. Auburn, 51 Me. 352; Hayford v. Belfast, 69 Me. 63; Tufts v. Lexington, 72 Me. 516.

In Michigan the tax may be provisionally placed on the assessment roll without a previous return showing delinquency, subject to be canceled on presentation of receipts showing payment in labor. Lake Superior Ship Canal R., etc., Co. v. Thompson Tp., 56 Mich. 493.

The Citizen Cannot Dictate the Time and Place at which he will work out his road taxes. Creswell v. Montgomery, 13 Pa. Super. Ct. 87.

If the Place Does Not Appear to Be Improper or Inconvenient it is enough; such place need not be directly on a highway in the district. Mason v. Thomas, 36 N. H. 302.

A Tender of Payment in Lieu of Work must be made to the proper official. Gross v. State, 4 Tex. App. 249.

Power to Employ Labor. — The statutes authorizing the surveyor of highways to allow taxpayers to work out their highway taxes do not authorize him to employ labor on highways for pay. If the interests of the town require further expenditures, it is his duty to consult the selectmen, and they may authorize him to employ laborers to a certain amount. Ingalls v. Auburn, 51 Me. 352; Haskell v. Knox, 3 Me. 445; Moor v. Cornville, 13 Me. 293; Morrell v. Dixfield, 30 Me. 157; Field v. Towle, 34 Me. 405.

And where a town has duly authorized highway officers, the selectmen cannot bind it by a contract to pay for labor on highways, either in money or by an allowance upon the highway tax. Tufts v. Lexington, 72 Me. 516.

5. Tax Not Payable in Labor. — People v. Suppiger, 103 Ill. 434; Van Dien v. Hopper, 5 N. J. L. 880; Ferguson v. Moore, 5 Pa. Super. Ct. 349, 353. And see Osborne v. Mecklenburg County, 82 N. Car. 400.

Submission of Proposition to Voters. — See Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Randle, 183 Ill. 364, wherein the adoption of the labor system by the voters of a town was held not to be sufficiently shown.

Sufficient Proof of Adoption of System. — Fenton v. Peters, 50 Ill. App. 41.

6. Legislative Authority Necessary. — Gallaway v. Tavares, 37 Fla. 58.

When General Laws Not Applicable to Cities. — Where complete jurisdiction is given a city in regard to the improvement of its streets, the general laws of the state in regard to roads and nor will a mere delegation of authority to control and regulate the highways confer such power.¹ And the municipal authorities, in order to compel the citizens to work on the roads under a statute giving them such power, must comply with all the statutory prerequisites.²

Nature of Liability — Not a Poll Tax. — The statutory liability of citizens to work on the highways is a duty required to be rendered the state without compensation, being analogous to military and jury service; and it is generally held that the money equivalent in which the labor is allowed to be commuted is not a poll tax,³ and therefore not within constitutional and statutory provisions relating to capitation taxes.⁴

(b) Notice. — The statutes usually prescribe the notice to be given to persons called to work on the highways, and it is essential that notice shall be given in the manner and form prescribed.⁵ But such notice may be waived, and the road labor in counties cease to be applicable as soon as the city has exercised its powers. Fox v. Rockford, 38 Ill. 451; East Portland v. Multnomah County, 6 Oregon 63.

1. Not Implied from General Authority to Control Highways. — Galloway v. Tavares, 37 Fla. 58; Ex p. Campbell, (Tex. Crim. 1893) 22 S. W. Rep. 1020; Ex p. Grace, 9 Tex. App. 381.

But see State v. Halifax, 4 Dev. L. (15 N. Car.) 345, where an act authorizing commissioners to make such rules and ordinances as seemed proper to them for repairing the streets authorized them to compel citizens to labor on the streets, that being the method commonly in vogue throughout the state at the time the act was passed.

2. Failure to Comply with Statute — No Power to Compel Labor. — Baader v. Cullman, 115 Ala. 539; Sumner v. Gardiner, 88 Me. 584.

An Apportionment of the Labor in the same proportion as the assessment of taxes is a prerequisite under some statutes. Wallace v. Bradshaw, 55 N. J. L. 117, 56 N. J. L. 339; Hampton v. Hamsher, 124 N. Y. 634, affirming 46 Hun (N. Y.) 144.

Ordinance or Order — Sufficient Compliance with Statute. — Wapella v. Davis, 39 Ill. App. 592; In re Hagan, 65 Kan. 857, 68 Pac. Rep. 1104; Tipton v. Norman, 72 Mo. 380; State v. Yoder, 132 N. Car. 1111.

Unreasonable Ordinance Void. — State v. Richards, 74 Conn. 57.

Assessment — Presumption as to Regularity. — See Hoffman v. Lynburn, 104 Mich. 494.

Where Sufficient Money for Road Purposes Is on Hand the citizens cannot be called out to work on the roads. Wallace v. Bradshaw, 55 N. J. L. 117.

3. Not a Poll Tax. — Galloway v. Tavares, 37 Fla. 58; Johnston v. Macon, 62 Ga. 645; Sawyer v. Alton, 4 Ill. 127; Pleasant v. Kost, 29 Ill. 490; Fox v. Rockford, 38 Ill. 451; Macomb v. Twaddle, 4 Ill. App. 254; Leedy v. Bourbon, 12 Ind. App. 486; State v. Halifax, 4 Dev. L. (15 N. Car.) 345; State v. Sharp, 125 N. Car. 628, 74 Am. St. Rep. 663.

But see Hassett v. Walls, 9 Nev. 387, wherein a road tax of four dollars annually, or two days' labor, imposed by the Nevada statute, was held to be a capitation or poll tax, and under their constitution, prescribing specifically what poll tax could be levied, unconstitutional, the court disapproving the Illinois decisions and declining to follow them.

4. Not Within Constitutional Provisions. — Johnston v. Macon, 62 Ga. 645; Fox v. Rockford, 38 Ill. 451; Macomb v. Twaddle, 4 Ill. App. 254; State v. Topeka, 36 Kan. 76, 59 Am. Rep. 529; State v. Sharp, 125 N. Car. 628, 74 Am. St. Rep. 663.

Performance of Labor Not Payment of Tax. — The word "taxes" means a contribution in money, not labor or personal service, and the performance of labor on highways is not the payment of a tax so as to give a legal settlement within the meaning of an act for the settlement and relief of the poor. Overseers of Poor v. Stanford, 6 Johns. (N. Y.) 92; Starksborough v. Hinesburgh, 13 Vt. 215.

5. Prescribed Notice Must Be Given. — Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. People, 171 Ill. 525; Patterson v. Creighton, 42 Me. 367; Coxe v. Sweeney, 10 Pa. Co. Ct. 289; Matteson v. Rosendale, 37 Wis. 254; Biss v. New Haven, 42 Wis. 605.

Must Be Given Prescribed Length of Time. — Jones v. State, 42 Ark. 93; Ford v. State, 51 Ark. 103; Moore v. State, 52 Ark. 265; Lowry v. State, 52 Ark. 270.

Must Be Served on Prescribed Person. — Lowry v. State, 52 Ark. 270; State v. Wainright, 60 Ark. 280.

Service by Publication on Nonresident Owners. — Miller v. Gorman, 38 Pa. St. 309.

When Notice to Railroad Company Unnecessary. — Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. People, 183 Ill. 196.

Road Overseer Need Not Serve in Person. — State v. Covington, 125 N. Car. 641.

Sufficiency of Verbal Notice. — Lowry v. State, 52 Ark. 270; State v. Telfair, 130 N. Car. 645.

Informal Notice Held Sufficient. — State v. Baker, 108 N. Car. 799. And see State v. Yoder, 132 N. Car. 1111.

Notice Need Not Specify Tools to Be Brought. — State v. Wainright, 60 Ark. 280.

Failure to Notify Does Not Invalidate Assessment. — Hayford v. Belfast, 69 Me. 63.

Failure to Notify Will Not Release Lien on Land. — Burlington, etc., R. Co. v. Lancaster County, 4 Neb. 293.

Failure to Notify Not Ground for Enjoining Collection. — In Iowa, the fact that a taxpayer has not been notified to work out the part of his road tax allowed to be paid in labor, will not authorize the collection of the entire tax to be restrained. Sioux City, etc., R. Co. v. Osceola County, 45 Iowa 168.

Where the Statute Requires Notice to Residents Only, failure to give notice will not invalidate waiver need not be in express words.¹

(c) Who Liable to Road Duty. — The persons liable to perform road duty are to be determined from the statutes, and in the absence of any constitutional or statutory exemption no person within the terms of the statute can avoid such duty.² Thus, where there is no exemption, a person cannot excuse himself on the ground of age,³ or of physical inability,⁴ or that he has no occasion to use the road,⁵ or is a member of a fire company,⁶ or has been previously assigned to another highway,⁷ or has answered a warning and done road work in another district,⁸ or is employed in daily labor on the roadbed of a railroad company.⁹ But usually the legislature makes certain exemptions,¹⁰ such as persons above or below a specified age,¹¹ or physically unable to do the work,¹² or persons performing military duty,¹³ or belonging to a fire company,¹⁴ or the employees of certain corporations.¹⁵

(d) Liability for Failure or Refusal to Work. — The power to require citizens to work on the streets and highways carries with it the power to prescribe punishment for a failure or refusal to work by the imposition of penalties, or by making it a criminal offense.¹⁶ the tax assessed on the lands of nonresidents. Burlington, etc., R. Co. v. Lancaster County, 4 Neb. 293.

1. Waiver of Notice. — McDonald v. Madison County, 43 Ill. 22.

2. Liable unless Exempted Expressly or by Implication. — Sanders v. Levi, 42 La. Ann. 406; McBoyle v. Hanks, 1 Jones L. (46 N. Car.) 133.

3. Mail Riders Not Exempt. — James v. State, 41 Ark. 451.

Nonresidents. — Under a statute applicable only to residents of the district, nonresidents cannot be compelled to work on the roads although temporarily employed in the district. On Yuen Hai Co. v. Ross, 8 Sawy. (U. S.) 385; State v. Hinton, 131 N. Car. 770.

But under a statute including "all able-bodied male persons" it was held that a person in the employ of a local corporation for an indefinite period was liable to road duty notwithstanding he was a citizen of another state to which he intended to return on the conclusion of his employment. State v. Johnston, 118 N. Car. 1188.

3. Age No Excuse. — Fox v. Rockford, 38 Ill. 451.

4. Physical Inability No Excuse. — Macomb v. Twaddle, 4 Ill. App. 254.

5. Absence of Occasion to Use Road. — State v. Gillikin, 114 N. Car. 832.

6. A Member of a Fire Company is not exempted from road duty by a statute exempting him from military and jury service and from payment of a poll tax. Leedy v. Bourbon, 12 Ind. App. 486.

7. Previous Assignment to Another Highway. — State v. Yoder, 132 N. Car. 1111. Compare Waters v. State, 117 Ala. 189.

8. Road Work in Another District No Excuse. — James v. State, 41 Ark. 451.

9. Other Employment No Excuse. — State v. Hathcock, 20 S. Car. 419.

But see Ward v. State, 88 Ala. 202, wherein it was held that a person who, when notified to work on the highway, was under contract to perform service for his surety on a confession of judgment for the fine and costs imposed on his conviction for a misdemeanor, was not within the statute.

10. Inhabitants of Towns and Cities may be exempted from road labor outside of their corporate limits. Pleasant v. Kost, 29 Ill. 490; Fletcher v. Oliver, 25 Ark. 289.

An Overseer of a Public road cannot be compelled to work on another road. Dees v. State, (Miss. 1890) 7 So. Rep. 326.

11. Age Limit. — Ex p. Taylor, (Tex. Crim. 1896) 37 S. W. Rep. 422 (persons under age of twenty-one or over age of forty-five exempt).

d. LEVEE DISTRICTS AND TAXES. — The construction and maintenance of levees is, as has already been seen, a proper purpose of taxation,¹ and the power to tax for such purpose may be conferred by the state upon commissioners or other officers elected or appointed for that purpose.² These taxes are usually imposed in the form of special assessments upon the property deriving benefit from the levees.³ They may be required to be levied and collected in the same manner and by the same officers as the ordinary taxes of the state, but when collected, like highway or drainage taxes, they should be set apart as a special fund which can be appropriated for no other purpose than that for which it was raised.⁴

Not a Judicial Body. — A grant of power to the levee inspectors to adjust the assessment and levy of the taxes, and to hear and decide all questions in relation thereto, does not make them a court. In the performance of their duties, they act as ministerial and not as judicial officers. McGehee v. Mathis, 21 Ark. 40.

I. INTRODUCTION. — The principles of law concerning the taxation of natural persons and of property generally, which are applicable to and include corporations and corporate property, have been discussed in a prior title of this work.¹ The scope of this title will be confined to a treatment of the principles of law specially applicable to and governing the taxation of corporations and corporate interests which are taxable under legislation especially making corporations as a class and certain corporate interests subject to taxation. The principles of law governing the general taxation of persons and property will be considered only where such are particularly applicable to corporations.

II. TAXABILITY OF CORPORATIONS — 1. Power of State to Tax — In General. — The state's inherent power of taxation, which is incident to every sovereignty, embraces the authority to tax all subjects over which the sovereign power extends,² and includes the right to tax private corporations and corporate interests within its jurisdiction, which are not instruments of the federal government nor means employed by Congress to carry into effect the powers conferred in the Federal Constitution,³ and which have come into existence by the state's authority or have been introduced into its borders by its permission, unless the state's right to tax them has been expressly relinquished or curtailed, or is barred by constitutional provisions.⁴

2. Taxability of National Bank's Personality. — The permission granted by Congress to the states to tax the real estate of national banks and the shares of the stockholders is held to be exclusive, and the personal assets of a national bank are not taxable by a state.⁵

The State May Impose Taxes upon the Corporation as an entity existing under its laws, as well as upon the capital stock of the corporation or its separate corporate property. Delaware Railroad Tax, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 206.

Corporations May Be Taxed, like natural persons, upon their property and business. Per Mr. Justice Field, in State Tax on Foreign-Held Bonds, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 300.

Since the Taxing Power Is an Incident and an Essential Part of Every Independent Government, extending to every thing and every person, the state may tax all persons, natural or artificial, within her borders, and compel them to contribute such part of their property and income as the legislature may think right, to defray the expenses and meet the engagements of the government. The wealth of men who are associated together is none the less subject to taxation than if it were owned by individuals. State Bank v. Com., 19 Pa. St. 144.

3. Taxability of National Bank's Realty. — The real estate of a national bank may be taxed by a state, the same as real estate owned by other corporations or individuals. Congress has expressly provided that nothing shall be construed in its acts to exempt the real property of such associations from either state, county, or municipal taxes to the same extent, according to its value, as other real property is taxed.¹

4. Taxability of Property of Gas Companies. — Unless exempted, the property of gas companies is subject to taxation, including their lands, gas works and machinery, and their appurtenances; also their pipes used for conveying the gas to consumers.²

III. METHODS OF TAXATION — 1. Under General Taxation Laws. — The method of taxing corporations, unless another method is provided, is the same as that of taxing natural persons, and corporations and corporate property may be taxed under the general laws governing the taxation of persons and property generally, without being expressly mentioned subjects of taxation in the statutes.³ The words "persons" and "inhabitants" in the general tax laws have been held to include corporations.⁴

2. Under Special Legislation — a. CLASSIFICATIONS FOR TAXATION. — In some jurisdictions it is provided that the property of corporations shall be

In New York it has been held that the mains of a gas company under the streets of a city cannot be regarded as real estate for the purpose of taxation under a statute regulating the assessment of taxes, which declares that the term "land" as used in the statute shall be construed to include the land itself, all buildings and other articles erected upon or affixed to the same; and that the terms "real estate" and "real property" wherever they occur in the statute shall be construed as having the same meaning as the term "land" thus defined. People v. Assessors, 39 N. Y. 81.

Under the Laws of Tennessee it has been held that pipes laid by a gas company under the streets of a city for the purpose of conveying gas to consumers, are personal property and liable to taxation as such. Memphis Gas-light Co. v. State, 6 Coldw. (Tenn.) 310, 98 Am. Dec. 452.

In Cherokee Ins., etc., Co. v. Whitfield County, 28 Ga. 121, it was held that although a corporation may be an inhabitant of a county for certain purposes, yet a bank as to its capital stock is not an inhabitant of a particular county for the purposes of taxation.

Corporations Included Within Term "Freeholders." — See Ontario Bank v. Bunnell, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 186.

The Words "Vendor" and "Dealer" in a statute imposing a mercantile tax were held to assessed and taxed the same as that of private persons,¹ but generally separate and different statutory provisions are made for the taxation of natural persons and of corporations, and there is a great diversity of legislation concerning the taxation of corporations in the different jurisdictions. As a rule various kinds of corporations are classified for the purposes of taxation, and various corporate interests are made the subject of specific legislation with particular directions concerning the mode of valuation, measurement, and assessment of the taxes thereon.²

b. POWER OF LEGISLATURE TO MAKE CLASSIFICATIONS — EFFECT OF CONSTITUTIONAL PROVISIONS — FOURTEENTH AMENDMENT. — The legislature of a state has the power to classify corporations and corporate interests for the purposes of taxation, and this may be done notwithstanding that corporations are "persons" within the meaning of the first section of the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States, declaring that no state shall deprive any person within its jurisdiction of the equal protection of the laws.³

The Constitutional Rules as to Uniformity do not prohibit the legislatures from placing certain specified corporations in one class, for which a uniform method of assessment is provided, and placing certain other specified corporations in another class, which latter class may either be exempted from the taxes imposed on the former or be taxed under a different method of assessment,⁴ because diversity of taxation is not inconsistent with perfect uniformity and equality of taxation in the proper sense of those terms, both with respect to the amount imposed and the various species of property selected either for bearing its burdens or for being exempt from them. A system which imposes the same tax on every species of property, irrespective of its nature or condition or class, will be destructive of the principle of uniformity and equality in taxation and of a just adaptation of property to its burdens.⁵ While state constitutions may contain provisions against unequal taxation, it has been held that there is no provision expressed or implied in the Constitution of the United States that taxation must be equal and uniform.⁶

Railroads, Banks, Partnerships, Manufacturing Associations, Telegraph Companies, and each one of the numerous other agencies of business which the inventions of the age are constantly bringing into existence, require different machinery for the purpose of taxation. The object should be to place the burden so that it will bear as nearly as possible equally on all. For this purpose different systems, adjusted with reference to the valuation of different kinds of property, are adopted. The courts permit this. Tappan v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 490.

c. VALUATION AND ASSESSMENT BY DIFFERENT AGENCIES. — Different agencies may be employed by the state in the assessment and equalization of taxes imposed on different classes of corporations. Thus the manner of assessing the property of a railroad company by a different instrumentality from that employed to assess other property is authorized, because, from the peculiar nature of railroad property, its dissimilarity in use and value to the mass of other property, and its continuous extent through different localities, it can with difficulty be as fairly and uniformly valued by the local instrumentalities provided for assessing other property as by a state board created for that purpose.¹

d. WHAT ARE CORPORATIONS WITHIN TAXING STATUTES. — Cases have arisen concerning what may be considered corporations within statutes expressly making such bodies by designation subject to taxation, and the liability for taxes under such statutes has turned on the construction given to the word "corporation." Thus it has been held that a joint-stock company is not a corporation within the meaning of a statute providing that all moneyed or stock corporations shall be liable to taxation on their capital,² and that the collective body known as "Adams Express Company" is not a corporation within the meaning of the same statute,³ but it has been held that an association organized by contract substantially like that of the Adams Express Company was properly taxed under a New York statute subjecting to a franchise tax every corporation, joint-stock company or association whatever, now or hereafter incorporated or organized by or under the laws of any other state or country, and doing business in the state of New York.⁴ In New Jersey it has been held that partnership associations, invested by the laws under Declared Limitation on Power to Make Classifications — Basis of Classification. — The general rule that a state may classify different subjects, including corporations, for the purposes of taxation, notwithstanding the Fourteenth Amendment of the Federal Constitution, has a declared limitation which prohibits an arbitrary, unnatural, and unreasonable classification which is based on no real distinction. It is declared that clear hostile discrimination against particular subjects and classes, especially such as are of an unusual character, unknown to the practice of our government, might be obnoxious to the constitutional prohibition. It is stated, however, that it would be impracticable and unwise to attempt to lay down any general rule or definition on the subject, to include all cases. Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232; American Sugar Refining Co. v. Louisiana, 179 U. S. 80.

In Santa Clara Railway Tax Case, 9 Sawy. (U. S.) 165, 13 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 182, the court said: "Classification should have reference to the different character, situation, and circumstances of the property, making a different form or mode of taxation proper, if not absolutely necessary. It cannot be arbitrarily made, with mere reference to the nationality, color, or character of the owners, whether natural or artificial persons, without any reference to a difference in the character, situation, or circumstances of the property."

In Gregg v. Sanford, (C. C. A.) 65 Fed. Rep. 151, it was held that the Adams Express Company was not included within a statute imposing taxes on every "company incorporated," etc.

In State v. Adams Express Co., 3 Ohio Dec. 326, involving a similar question, the court refused to follow Gregg v. Sanford, above cited, and decided that the Adams Express Company was a corporation within the Ohio statute.

4. New York Statute. — People v. Wemple, 117 N. Y. 136, 20 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 610, [distinguished in People v. Coleman, (Supm. Ct. Gen. T.) 13 N. Y. Supp. 833, affirmed 133

which they came into being with the essential characteristics of corporations, are deemed corporations within the meaning of a corporation tax act, and this is not controlled by the fact that such associations are not deemed corporations within the state of their creation.¹

IV. PLACE OF TAXING CORPORATE INTERESTS — 1. Personal Property in General — a. PRINCIPAL OFFICE OR PLACE OF BUSINESS. — Before stating any general rules or propositions of law concerning the situs or place of taxing personal property belonging to corporations, it should be mentioned that there are a great many conflicting expressions of opinion in the cases as to where the personal property belonging to a corporation, as well as to individuals, should be taxed. Preliminary to all inquiry concerning the proper place to tax personal property belonging to a corporation, it should be borne in mind that the law of taxation is purely statutory and that the place and subjects of taxation are dependent on the statutory provisions of the particular jurisdiction. In taxing personal property belonging to corporations, as well as to individuals, the courts have been guided in some cases by the fiction that personal property follows the domicile of the owner, and these courts have held that at that place such property is taxable.² Other courts have refused in certain cases to apply this old fiction of the law and have not allowed it to control their decisions, but have held, on the ground that personal property receives the protection of the laws where it is situated, that it is taxable there under the statute. Another difficulty which may cause some confusion is the fact that the courts in using the words "domicil" and "residence" have used them indiscriminately as meaning the same thing, failing to make any distinction between the two terms. But this misuse of words does not necessarily cause difficulty if it is apparent in any particular case what the court really means. The foregoing should be taken into consideration in laying down any general rule of law concerning the situs or place of taxing personal property, whether belonging to corporations or to individuals; and the broad propositions that are sometimes found stated in textbooks concerning this subject should be cautiously used with a reference to the statutory provisions and policy of the courts of the particular jurisdiction.³ Since the method of taxing the property of corporations, unless otherwise provided, may be the same as that of taxing natural persons under the general tax

The Old Rule, Expressed in the Maxim Mobilia Sequuntur Personam, by which personal property was regarded as subject to the law of the owner's domicile, grew up in the middle ages, when movable property consisted chiefly of gold and jewels, which could be easily carried by the owner from place to place, or secreted in spots known only to himself. In modern times, since the great increase in amount and variety of personal property, not immediately connected with the person of the owner, that rule has yielded more and more to the lex situs, the law of the place where the property is kept and used. Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18.

laws,¹ the personalty is generally taxable in the town, county, or district of a state where the corporation's residence or principal office or place of business is located, and this is expressly controlled by statute in some jurisdictions.²

b. PRINCIPAL OFFICE OR PLACE OF BUSINESS WHERE LOCATED. — The principal office or place of business of a corporation for the purposes of taxation has been held under a statute to be where the governing power of the corporation is exercised,³ but where it is required that a certificate of incorporation must designate the place where the principal office of the company is to be located, it has been held that this establishes the residence of the corporation for the purposes of taxation.⁴ Where this is not required, however, it has been held that a statement in the articles of association of the place where the corporation's principal office is to be located is not conclusive.⁵

c. TAXABILITY OF PERSONAL PROPERTY IN STATE WHERE LOCATED. — Personal property belonging to a corporation may in certain cases and under certain circumstances be taxed by a state other than that in which the corporation is domiciled.⁶ It is well settled that where a corporation of one state brings into another state a portion of its movable personal property to use and employ therein, it is legitimate for the latter state to tax such property like similar property used in like way by its own citizens, and that such a tax may be properly assessed and collected, in the case of railway cars, where the specific and individual items of property so used and employed are not continuously the same, but are constantly changing according to the exigencies of the business, and that the tax may be fixed by an appraisal and valuation of the average amount of the property habitually used and employed. The fact that such cars are employed as vehicles of transportation in the business of interstate commerce does not render their taxation invalid.¹

2. Intangible Personality — a. IN GENERAL. — The general rule that bills, notes, etc., have their situs at the domicil of the creditor for the purposes of taxation,² is applicable to choses in action belonging to corporations, as well as to those belonging to individuals.³ A recognized exception to the rule that intangible property is taxable at the owner's domicil is when a corporation or person residing in one state has an agent in another, who conducts the business of his principal, and has notes in his hands for collection or renewal, with a view to keeping up a permanent business; in such case the actual situs of the notes will be the place of taxation.⁴

b. CORPORATE BONDS AND SECURITIES. — Concerning the situs of corporate bonds and securities for the purposes of taxation, it has been held in a case involving taxation on the interest on corporate bonds held out of the state, and the place of the property, that such bonds held out of the state could not be reached for the purposes of taxation.⁵

c. SHARES OF STOCK — (i) In General — Taxation at Domicil of Owner. — The principles of law which govern choses in action, fixing their situs for the purposes of taxation at the domicil of the owner, apply in the taxation of shares of stock in corporations. Such shares are personality, and, in the absence of any statute to the contrary, are taxable to the owner, as a general rule, like other personal estate, in the state of his domicil, whether the corporation is foreign or domestic;⁶ and the shares may be so taxed, though the corporation has paid a tax on its property or the capital stock, or both;¹ but some of the states exempt such shares from taxation when they are taxed in the state where the corporation is located.² By the preponderance of authority, also, the fact that the corporation's capital stock and property are exempt from taxation is held not to affect the application of this rule.³ This is true because the capital stock and the shares are distinct properties.⁴

Taxation of Shares Where Corporation Is Located. — The general rule that personal property has no permanent situs of its own, but follows the person of the owner, is said to be one of convenience only, and there is no constitutional prohibition on the legislature to change the rule by providing for the taxing of shares of stock at the place where the corporation is located without regard to the residence of the owner of such shares.⁵

Distinction Between Foreign Shareholders and Bondholders. — "The attitude of a holder of shares of capital stock is quite other than that of a holder of bonds, towards the corporation which issued them. While the bondholders are simply creditors, whose concern with the corporation is limited to the fulfilment of its particular obligation, the shareholders are persons who are interested in the operation of the corporate property and franchises, and their shares actually represent undivided interests in the corporate enterprise." Matter of Bronson, 150 N. Y. 1, 55 Am. St. Rep. 632.

banking association owned by nonresidents of any state shall be taxed in the city or town where the bank is located, and not elsewhere. Consequently shares of stock in a national banking association cannot be taxed by any state except that within which the bank is located.¹

(b) History of Congressional Legislation. — Soon after the passage of the act permitting the states to tax national bank shares, a controversy arose as to the true meaning of the clause of the statute which permitted shares to be taxed under state authority "at the place where the bank is located and not elsewhere." In some of the states it was held that the restriction confined the exercise of the taxing power to the town or district in which the corporation conducted its business, while in others it was decided to apply to the state and not to any of its territorial divisions, and that such tax could be assessed upon a resident stockholder at the place of his residence wherever it might be within the state. The controversy was solved by an amendatory act declaring the word "place" to mean the state wherein the bank is located.²

(c) Operation and Effect of Acts of Congress. — The effect of the Acts of Congress, in the case of nonresidents, is to sever the stock as property from the person of the owner, for the purposes of taxation, and to impart to it a new legal situs, that of the bank itself. Unless the shares of nonresidents are taxed at the place where the corporation is located, they are beyond the reach of the taxing power of the state. By affixing to the property of the non-resident shareholder the situs of the bank itself, his interest is subjected to the exercise of the taxing power.³

(d) Resident Owners. — In regard to residents of a state owning shares in national banks located within its borders, it is held that the shares may be assessed under the Act of Congress, either at the place where such owners reside or at the place where the bank is located, as the legislature of the state may elect.⁴

(e) Nonresident Owners. — The requirement that shares in national banks must be taxed, if at all, in the city or town where the bank is located, restricts a state to the place designated only in regard to nonresident owners.⁵

3. Real Property. — The realty of a corporation is generally taxable where it is situated. Express statutory provisions sometimes provide for this.¹

V. ELEMENTS OF TAXABLE VALUE — 1. Enumeration of. — In corporations many elements of taxable value may be found, among which are franchises, capital stock in the hands of the corporation, shares of capital stock in the hands of the individual stockholders, and corporate property. Each of these may be, under certain circumstances, an appropriate subject of taxation.²

2. Element Taxed Distinguished from Means Adopted to Measure Taxes. — Taxes may be measured by reference to business done, income, indebtedness, dividends, and many other standards. From these standards or means of measuring taxes, the elements taxed are to be distinguished. Thus in questions arising under statutes imposing a tax on corporate franchises, it has been important to distinguish between the mode adopted for measuring the tax and the thing taxed, whether the tax is imposed on the corporate property or on the franchise. If the tax is on the corporate property as distinguished from the franchise, the particular statute imposing it may be subject to certain constitutional provisions, but if the tax is imposed on the franchise and measured by certain standards which may be in themselves property, the statute may not be subject to constitutional provisions relating to property taxation.³

3. Corporation Not Taxable as Owner on Value of Indebtedness. — Debts owing by corporations, like debts owing by individuals, are not the property of the debtors, and it would therefore follow that a corporation cannot be taxed on the value of the debts which it owes, as the owner.⁴ But a corporation may be required to deduct a state tax on corporate bonds from interest paid to its bondholders, if the latter are within the state's jurisdiction.⁵ It may be within the power of a state to impose a tax on a resident debt due a non-resident creditor. It has been declared that power over the person of the debtor confers jurisdiction. Consequently, it has been held that a state may rightfully impose a succession tax on debts owed by its citizens.⁶

S. 664; Bank of Commerce v. Tennessee, 161 U. S. 134; New Orleans v. Houston, 119 U. S. 265; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Wright, 116 Fed. Rep. 669; Tennessee v. Bank of Commerce, 53 Fed. St. 100, a tax at the rate of three cents on each and every ton of twenty-two hundred and forty pounds of coal mined or purchased by coal companies was decided to be a tax, not on the coal mined, but on the franchise or right of the company to mine measured by the amount of its business.

VI. FRANCHISE TAX — 1. Taxability of Franchises — a. GENERALLY. — Unless exempted in terms which amount to a contract, the privileges and franchises of a private corporation are as much a legitimate subject of taxation as other taxable subjects which are within the sovereign power of the state. The authority of the state to tax corporate franchises is independent of the federal government, and is unaffected by the fact that the corporation has or has not made investments in federal securities.¹ But corporate franchises granted by Congress are not taxable by state authority without the consent of Congress.²

b. FRANCHISES OF NATIONAL BANKS. — National banks, being instruments of the federal government, created for carrying into effect national powers granted by the Federal Constitution, are not subject to state taxation on their franchises or business.³

2. Measurement of Franchise Taxes. — ⁴The amount of a franchise tax on a corporation may be graduated or measured by an appraisal of the whole or any portion of its property, or by the amount of its business.⁴ For example, franchise taxes may be measured by dividends;⁵ by the amount of the

"Owing to the Difficulty of Distinguishing Between the Capital and the Property in Which It Is Invested, tests for determining whether a tax is on the property or the franchises may be regarded, generally, uncertain and unsatisfactory; yet its determination is often necessary, for, if a franchise tax, the property in which the capital is invested becomes immaterial. The usual and most certain test is, whether the tax is upon the capital stock, eo nomine, without regard to its value, or at its assessed valuation in whatever it may be invested; if the former, it is a franchise tax; if the latter, a tax upon the property." *State v. entity,¹ this element of taxable value may be taxed to the corporation.² In some of the states certain corporations are relieved from paying a tax on their capital stock either in whole or in part.³ In New York, under a statute subjecting certain corporations deriving an income or profit to taxation on their capital stock, it was held that a corporation was not relieved from taxation by showing that it was not in receipt of any net profits or income. Such corporations are subject to taxation when they are in receipt of any income or profits, without regard to losses.⁴

2. Capital Stock of Corporations Chartered in Different States.—A corporation chartered by two states may be taxable on its capital stock in each,⁵ and where a corporation was formed under the laws of a state by the consolidation of other corporations, which were merged into the new corporation thus formed, and where one of the constituent companies was incorporated under the laws of the state, it was held that the new corporation thus formed was to be considered as one of the companies incorporated under the laws of the state within the revenue laws; and its capital stock located or used in the state is subject to be taxed as such. No distinction in principle was made between the status of such a corporation and that of a corporation operating its business in two adjoining states, having a charter for such purpose from each of such states.⁶ A state may tax such proportion of the whole capital stock of a foreign sleeping-car company as the number of miles over which its cars are operated within the state bears to the whole number of miles over which its cars are operated, though such cars run into, through, and out of the state.⁷ This principle of law and method of assessment have been applied in taxing property or the capital stock of railroad companies,⁸ refrigerator car companies,⁹ express companies,¹⁰ and telegraph companies.¹¹

3. Capital Stock of National Banks. — The capital stock of a national bank is not taxable as such against the bank by state authority, and if the bank gives in its capital for taxation, it is not estopped from refusing to pay taxes on the same.¹ So also a tax assessed on all the shares issued by the association in solido against the association has been held unauthorized.² But a statute requiring a national bank to pay the tax on the shares of the stockholders, as the agent of each of its shareholders, is held not to be in conflict with the laws of the United States as a tax upon the capital of the bank.³

4. Valuation of Capital Stock. — It has been held that an assessment for taxation by a board of equalization of the capital stock of a corporation by first ascertaining the market or fair cash value of the shares of capital stock of the corporation and the market or fair cash value of its debts, exclusive of those for current expenses, and adding these together, and taking from the sum the equalized valuation of all its tangible property, was proper, as showing the balance of the capital stock over and above the assessed value of the tangible property.⁴ The market value of the shares of stock may not alone furnish a proper basis for the valuation of the capital stock,⁵ but such may be considered in certain cases, as may the indebtedness and general condition of the corporation.⁶ In New York certain corporations deriving an income or profit were made liable to taxation on their capital, to be levied on the amount of the capital stock of the corporation paid in, and secured to be paid in, after deducting the amount expended for its real estate, which was taxed separately, and the amount of stock owned by the state and incorporated literary and charitable institutions. No respect was paid either to accumulations or losses of capital in the course of the business of the company; but the amount paid and secured to be paid as capital was taken as the true sum to be inserted in the assessment roll.⁷

VIII. TAXATION OF SHARES OF STOCK — 1. In General. — In nearly all the states shares of stock in corporations are by statute expressly declared to be taxable as personal property.⁸

2. Taxation of Shares through Corporation. — In some states the taxation of shares of stock in corporations is effected by requiring the corporations to pay out of the shareholders' dividends the amount of the tax levied on the shares, instead of making the levy directly against and requiring payment by the shareholders.¹ Unless statutory provision is made for collecting taxes on the shareholders from the corporation, it has been held that such a procedure is unwarranted.² It has also been held that a statute providing for this method of taxing shares of stock does not apply to corporations such as exchanges which issue shares, but pay no dividends and are not organized for money-making purposes.³

3. Method of Taxing Shares through Corporation Applied to Corporate Bonds.

—The method of taxing shares of stock through the corporation has been adopted in taxing corporate bonds held by residents of a state. Such a tax is not a tax on the corporation or its property, but on the individual citizen who holds the bonds. The corporation is chargeable with it only as a collector, and by reason of default in the duty to collect. It has been held that such a tax is not only not on the corporation, but it is not on the bondholders generally. It is only on such as are within the taxing power of the state. This limitation is the result of the lack of jurisdiction of the state to tax property of nonresidents which has no actual situs within the state.⁴

4. Taxation of National Bank Shares—a. IN GENERAL.—Congress has provided that the shares in national banking associations may be included in the valuation of the personal property of the owner or holder of such shares, in assessing taxes imposed by authority of the state within which the association is located; and that the legislature of each state may determine and direct the manner and place of taxing all the shares of national banking associations located within the state, subject only to the two restrictions, that the taxation shall not be at a greater rate than is assessed on other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens of such state, and that the shares of any national banking association owned by nonresidents of any state shall be taxed in the city or town where the bank is located, and not elsewhere.⁵

The Original Provision was that state taxation of national bank shares should not exceed the rate imposed on shares in state banks; but in 1868 the present form of the restriction was adopted, that is, that the taxation should not be

The intent of the Statute is to prevent an unjust discrimination against moneyed capital invested in shares of national banks.¹

The Term "Moneyed Capital" does not include capital which does not come into competition with the business of national banks. It must be satisfactorily made to appear by the proof that the moneyed capital claimed to be given an unjust advantage is of the character above stated.² Therefore exemptions from taxation, however large, such as deposits in savings banks or moneys belonging to charitable institutions, which are exempted for reasons of public policy and not as an unfriendly discrimination as against investments in national bank shares, cannot be regarded as forbidden by the federal statute.³ Money invested by corporations or individuals in railroads, mines, manufacturing, insurance, or other kindred enterprises is not within the meaning of the act.⁴

b. EXTENT OF STATE'S AUTHORITY TO TAX SHARES. — The section of the Revised Statutes of the United States which permits the states to tax national bank shares is the measure of the power of a state to tax national banks, their property or franchises. By its unambiguous provisions the power is confined to a taxation of the shares of stock in the names of shareholders and to an assessment of the real estate of the bank. A state tax therefore which is in excess of and not in conformity to these requirements is void.⁵

c. VALUATION. — It has been held to be competent for a state to value, for taxation, shares of stock in a national bank at their actual value, even if in excess of their par value, provided they were not taxed at a greater rate than was assessed on other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens of the state.⁶

at a greater rate than is assessed on "other moneyed capital" in the hands of individual citizens of the state. Van Allen v. Assessors, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 573. See also Mercantile Bank v. New York, 121 U. S. 138; McHenry v. Downer, 116 Cal. 20.

In Lionberger v. Rouse, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 468, it was held that the proviso originally contained in the Act of 1864, and omitted from the Act of 1868, expressly referring to state banks, was limited to state banks of issue.

The Act of Congress Was Not Intended to Curtail the States' Power on the Subject of Taxation. — It simply requires that capital invested in national banks should not be taxed at a greater rate than like property similarly invested. It was not intended to cut off the power to exempt particular kinds of property if the legislature chose to do so. The plain intention of the statute is to protect the corporations formed under its authority from unfriendly discrimination by the states in the exercise of their taxing power. Adams v. Nashville, 95 U. S. 19.

Deduction of Debts. — The prohibition against the taxation of national bank shares at a greater rate than that imposed upon other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens cannot be evaded by the assessment of equal rates of taxation on unequal valuations, and consequently where a state authorized individuals to deduct the amount of debts owing by them from the assessed value of their personal property and moneyed capital subject to taxation, the owners of shares of national banks were entitled to the same deduction. People v. Weaver, 100 U. S. 539. See also Albany County v. Stan- d. TAXATION OF SHARES THROUGH BANK. — The shares of stock in a national bank may be taxed through the bank as the agent of the stockholders, the bank paying the tax and charging the same to the individual owner of the shares. State legislation authorizing this procedure is constitutional. Such is not a tax on the bank, but a tax on the individual shareholders.¹

IX. INCOME TAX — NET INCOME — GROSS RECEIPTS — 1. General Principles. — In discussing the principles of law concerning the taxation of corporate franchises, it was seen that a corporation may be taxed in proportion to its income or gross receipts.² The corporations created by a state may undoubtedly be taxed on their income, as well as on their corporate franchises, property, and business, but in imposing such taxes care should be taken not to interfere with or hamper interstate or foreign commerce, or any other matter exclusively within the jurisdiction of the federal government.³ A tax imposed upon the earnings, income, or gross receipts of a corporation is in many cases not a property tax, but a tax on the corporate privilege or franchise measured by the earnings, income, or gross receipts.⁴

2. Net Income. — Taxes on corporations may be proportioned to their net income, and this method has been adopted in some of the states as a means of measuring the amount of taxes on corporate franchises.⁵

But where the constitution or laws of a state distinguish between stock and credits and authorize only a deduction of debts from credits, it has been held that shares of national bank stock are not credits, and consequently the owners thereof are not entitled to deduct bona fide indebtedness from the value of their shares of stock. St. 48, a tax was imposed upon the annual net earnings or income of certain corporations, and it was decided to be a tax not on the money and receipts of such companies, but on their franchises, the amount of the net earnings or income being used simply as a measure of the amount of the tax.

In Com. v. New York, etc., R. Co., 150 Pa. St. 234, it was decided that a tax on the net earnings or income of trust companies was a tax not on the property but on the franchises of the companies.

Under the Laws of Pennsylvania it was held that the net income of the corporation included the amount of its gross earnings less the current expenses only, and that the net income could not be reduced by deducting the sum expended in enlarging the corporation's works. The Surplus Profits of a Gas Company are taxable, although certificates representing such surplus have been distributed among the stockholders. People v. Assessors, 76 N. Y. 202.

3. Gross Receipts. — Gross receipts furnish a much more generally adopted basis for the assessment of taxes against corporations and one which has frequently been approved.¹ It is well settled that a franchise tax on the gross receipts of a corporation is not an invalid exercise of the taxing power of the state; it being a tax imposed on the corporation because of the value of its franchise, as distinguished from its ownership of property.²

4. Gross Receipts from Interstate Commerce. — The imposition of a tax on gross receipts derived from the transportation of persons or property between the different states has been held unconstitutional, because it is a regulation of interstate commerce, which the states are prohibited from making.³ The authority of the states to tax corporations and corporate interests, as limited by the powers vested in the federal government over interstate commerce, has been fully discussed in a prior title of this work.⁴

X. DIVIDEND TAX. — A tax on dividends is not an uncommon method of taxing corporations.⁵ A tax on the franchise of a corporation is sometimes measured by the dividends as a basis for computing the tax. A tax on dividends has been held quite generally to be a tax on the franchise of the corporation, computed on the basis of dividends.⁶ Consequently such a tax is not void if a portion of the dividends is derived from the capital invested in non-taxable securities. From the very nature of the tax it cannot be affected in any way by the character of the property in which the corporation's capital stock is invested.¹ Like a tax on the franchise, a tax on capital stock may be graduated by dividends.² It has been held that in assessing the tax no difference can be made between dividends actually paid to the stockholders, and stock dividends, which are profits added to the stock of each corporator.³ Dividends declared and credited to stockholders become obligations of the company to the stockholders and are their property. They are not the property of the corporation. Where, however, a corporation merely formally declares dividends without any intention to pay them over to the stockholders and without any change in the status of the funds of the corporation, such dividends are taxable as capital and assets of the company.⁴ Because a corporation or its capital stock is exempt from taxation, it does not necessarily follow that the dividends or profits of the individual stockholders are exempt.⁵

XI. TAXATION OF FOREIGN CORPORATIONS — 1. General Principles — a. TAXES ON PROPERTY. — Many of the principles of law concerning the taxation of foreign corporations, especially those in regard to the taxation of the personal property, both tangible and intangible, belonging to such associations, also concerning the taxation of shares of stock in foreign corporations, have already been discussed under the subject pertaining to the place of taxing corporate interests.⁶

b. PRIVILEGE TAX ON FOREIGN CORPORATIONS. — As a condition of exercising corporate functions or doing business within a state by a foreign corporation, such state may impose a privilege or license tax on the corporation. Such a tax against foreign corporations is not unconstitutional because of lacking equality or uniformity under state constitutions, or because of a denial of privileges and immunities of citizens of the several states, nor is it a denial of the equal protection of the laws; and it is settled that, subject to certain limitations respecting interstate and foreign commerce, a state may impose such conditions upon permitting a foreign corporation to do business within its limits as it may judge expedient, and that it may make the grant or privilege dependent upon the payment of a specific license tax, or sum proportioned to the amount of its capital used within the state.⁷ It has been held competent for the legislature of a state to impose as a condition upon

In New Jersey an annual franchise tax was imposed on certain corporations calculated upon two factors, viz., "(1) gross receipts within a specified period, and (2) 'dividends earned or declared' during the same period." Under this statute it was held that earnings fairly used for the betterment of the plant were not "dividends earned or declared." State v. Comptroller, 54 N. J. L. 135.

In New York a tax upon a foreign corporation based on the dividends of the corporation was upheld, even where the dividends were earned in business transacted out of the state. People v. Roberts, (Ct. App.) 5 N. Y. Annot. Cas. 201.

foreign corporations doing business in the state that they shall assess and collect a tax upon that portion of their loans in the hands of individual residents within the state.¹ In New York foreign corporations doing business within the state are taxable on the amount of capital employed in the business in the state.² The jurisdiction of the state to tax foreign corporations under the statute depends on the existence of two concurring conditions, namely, that the corporation sought to be taxed shall be "doing business" in the state, and, second, that its capital or some portion thereof shall have been "employed within the state."³

c. MODE OF FIXING AMOUNT OF PRIVILEGE TAX. — The tax may be in the nature of a specific sum required to be paid each year, or the state may apportion the amount exacted according to the value of the business permitted, as disclosed by the gains or receipts of the corporation. The character of the tax or its validity is not determined by the mode adopted in fixing its amount.⁴

2. Taxation of Foreign Corporations as Included within Certain Legislation. — A statute which provides that all persons and associations doing business in the state and not residents of the state shall be assessed and taxed on all sums invested in such business, the same as if they were residents, is held to include foreign corporations.⁵ However, a foreign corporation has been held not to be an inhabitant within a statute of a state in which it carried on business.⁶

3. Taxation of Foreign Corporations in Relation to Interstate Commerce. — A limitation on the power of the state to tax a foreign corporation arises where the corporation is in the employ of the federal government, or where its business is strictly commerce, interstate or foreign. A state cannot exclude from its limits a corporation engaged in interstate or foreign commerce.⁷

Although no state can compel a corporation to pay for the privilege of engaging in interstate commerce, this immunity does not prevent a state from imposing ordinary property taxes on property having a situs within its territory and employed in interstate commerce.¹

4. Definition of "Doing Business." — Occasional and isolated transactions do not render concerns liable to taxes laid on foreign corporations "doing business" within the state. This subject has been fully treated in a prior title of this work.²

5. Retaliatory Legislation. — In some of the states statutes have been enacted imposing on foreign corporations seeking to do business therein, similar taxes, license fees, and conditions exacted by the home state of such corporations from the corporations of the former seeking to do business in the latter. The constitutionality of this legislation has been attacked on various grounds, but in the main it has been upheld. This subject has been fully treated under other titles in this work, to which reference is made.³

XII. TAXATION OF RAILROADS — 1. Power of State to Tax — General Principles. — The general principles of law governing the power of the state to tax corporations generally, apply to the taxation of railroad corporations, the interests therein and their properties.⁴ However, since railroads are generally not confined to a particular locality within a state, and ordinarily extend through and out of many of the states of the Union, the state's power of taxing such corporations and certain of their interests may be limited under certain circumstances, especially by the exclusive authority of the federal government over interstate commerce.⁵

2. General Methods of Assessing — a. ASSESSMENT BY LOCAL AUTHORITIES. — One of the methods of assessing railroads is by assessing so much of the road by local authorities, as is situated within the jurisdiction, the same as other property is assessed which is located within the limits of the county or town.⁶

b. ASSESSMENT BY STATE BOARD AS ENTIRETY. — From the peculiar nature of railroad property, its dissimilarity in use and value to the mass of other property, and its continuous extent through different localities, it is commonly regarded by the states that it cannot, in justice to the owners, be as fairly and uniformly valued by the numerous local instrumentalities provided for assessing other property, as by a state board created for the purpose.⁷ It has been held to be neither in conflict with the constitution of a state nor inequitable, that taxable property of a railroad company should be ascertained by a state board of equalization, and that the state, county, and city taxes should be collected within each municipality on the assessment, in the proportion which the length of the road within such municipality bore to the whole length of the road within the state. Methods similar to the one thus approved have been very generally adopted by statute in many of the states, and this method of assessing and taxing railroads is upheld.¹

c. PROPERTY ESSENTIAL TO OPERATION OF ROAD — REALTY — RIGHT OF WAY — RAILROAD TRACK. — The property included in the foregoing terms, belonging to a railroad company, exclusive of that unnecessary to the operation of the road, is assessed for taxation, in many of the states, after the method given in the next preceding section. The statutes in some of the states declare what properties shall be assessed by the state board and what shall be assessed by local authorities.² In order to secure a just valuation for taxation of this class of property, all of it that is used for the convenient and proper operation of the railway may be assessed as a unit, and the valuation thus ascertained may be apportioned to the various taxing districts on a mileage basis.³ In Illinois it is held, that land held and used as right of way by a railroad company, including the superstructures thereon, is railroad track, and not subject to assessment by the local assessor; and that land so held by a railroad company as right of way is required by law to be assessed for taxation by the state board of equalization; and that an assessment of such property by the local assessor is void.¹ In California it has been held that the franchises, rails, and rolling stock of a street railroad operated in more than one county are not assessable by the state board of equalization, but are assessable by the assessors of the several counties through which the railroad passes.²

d. UNESSENTIAL PROPERTY. — So much of a railroad company's realty as is unessential to the operation of the railroad is generally assessed for taxation in the same manner as the realty of natural persons. Statutes, in some jurisdictions, expressly stipulate what property is locally assessable.³

3. Rolling Stock — a. GENERALLY. — A railroad company's rolling stock may be taxable as personality.⁴ But the legislature may provide that the rolling stock shall be considered real estate and assessed with the road as a whole,⁵ or that it shall be distributed for taxation among the counties, cities,

In Illinois it was provided by statute that "the rolling stock of railroad companies shall and towns through which the road runs, proportionally to the length of the road.¹

b. ROLLING STOCK USED IN INTERSTATE COMMERCE. — Rolling stock engaged in interstate commerce may be taxed by the states in which it is found. This subject has been fully treated elsewhere in this work.²

c. SLEEPING CARS. — Under the usual contract between railroad companies and sleeping-car companies, the possession, control, and community of interest which the former have and exercise, give to the sleeping cars hired by them from foreign corporations having no place of business in the taxing state, the same situs as ordinary cars operated by the same railroad companies.³ It has been held that the community of interest in the sleeping cars is such that they are to be deemed as belonging to the railroad companies for the purposes of taxation.⁴

4. Railroads Taxable as Units. — Under the generally adopted method of taxing railroads, it is held that each, from one end to the other, is an entirety, and as a whole only may be subject to taxation or coercive sale.⁵

As to Railroad and Sleeping-car Companies Engaged in Interstate Commerce, it has often been held that their property, in the several states through which their lines or business extended, might be valued as a unit for the purposes of taxation, taking into consideration the uses to which it was put and all the elements making up aggregate value, and that a proportion of the whole fairly and properly ascertained might be taxed by the particular state without violating any federal restriction.⁶

5. Residence of Railroads for Taxation. — For the purposes of taxation, the corporation may be deemed a resident of each town and county through which its road passes; and for the purpose of distributing for taxation the unlocated personalty of the corporation among the several counties through which the railway runs, so as to subject this personalty to county taxation in proper proportions, the corporation may be treated as residing sub modo in all the counties along its line of road, and therefore in one as much as in

be listed and taxed in the several counties, towns, and cities pro rata, in proportion as the length of the main track in each county, town, or city bears to the whole length of the road." Under such a statute, it was held that a company was not taxable in a county wherein it ran its cars over a leased track. Cook County v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 35 Ill. 460.

Rolling Stock Which Is Declared by Statute to Be Real Estate may be nevertheless personal property for the purpose of sale to collect delinquent taxes. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Ft. Howard, 21 Wis. 44, 91 Am. Dec. 458.

another; and also it is equally proper to treat the corporation, in so far as its track and roadbed are located within the limits of incorporated cities and towns, as residing sub modo in them.¹ It has been held that the lands of a railroad are not assessable as nonresident lands.²

6. Valuation of Railroads. — In the absence of prescribed methods of valuation, any may be adopted which tend to the ascertainment of the value of the property for the purposes for which it is used. Personal inspection, inquiry of experts, testimony of witnesses, consideration of income, competition, earning capacity, situation with reference to markets, in short, all the elements which constitute railroad value, may be looked to as proper methods of arriving at a valuation for assessment. In many of the states there are express statutory directions concerning the methods to be pursued in estimating the value of railroads for the purpose of taxation.³ It has been decided that a proper mode of ascertaining the assessable value of so much of the whole property as is situated in a particular state is, in the case of a railroad, to take that part of the value of the entire road which is measured by the proportion of its length therein to the length of the whole,⁴ or to take as the basis of assessment such proportion of the capital stock of a sleeping-car company as the number of miles of railroad over which its cars are run in a particular state bears to the whole number of miles traversed by them in that and other states.⁵

7. Taxation of Lands Granted in Aid of Railroads. — a. IN GENERAL. — It has been held that the lands granted by Congress to aid the construction of a railroad cannot be taxed by the state until the company, having complied with the conditions of the grant, is entitled to a patent. Such lands are taxable when the railroad company has complete title to the same.⁶

b. SURVEYED BUT UNPATENTED LANDS. — As to surveyed but unpated lands, on which the costs of survey have not been paid, it has been held that, although lands sold by the United States may be taxed before the government has parted with the legal title by issuing the patent, this principle was to be understood as applicable only to cases where the right to the patent was complete, and the equitable title fully vested, without anything more to be paid, or any act done going to the foundation of the right; and hence, where there had been a large grant to a railroad company, if prepayment by the grantee of the cost of surveying the lands granted was required by the statute making the grant, before any of the lands should be conveyed, no title vested in the grantee, and the state could not levy taxes on the land, and under such levy sell and make a title which might defeat the lien of the United States.¹

c. CONGRESSIONAL LEGISLATION. — Congress, in 1886, passed an act to provide for the taxation of railroad grant lands, which provided that no lands granted to any railroad corporation by any act of Congress shall be exempt from taxation by states, territories, and municipal corporations on account of the lien of the United States upon such lands for costs of surveying, selecting, and conveying the same, or because no patent has been issued therefor; but this shall not apply to lands unsurveyed; provided, that any such land sold for taxes shall be taken by the purchaser subject to the lien for costs of surveying, selecting, and conveying, to be paid in such manner by the purchaser as the secretary of the interior may by rule provide, and subject to all liens, mortgages, and rights of the United States in respect to such lands. The act was made applicable only to lands situated opposite to and coterminous with completed portions of said roads, and in organized counties; and it was provided that at any sale of lands under the provisions of the act, the United States may become a preferred purchaser, and in such case the lands sold shall be restored to the public domain and disposed of as provided by the laws relating thereto.²

8. Taxation of Interstate Roads. — The usual method of valuing for taxation the portion within a given state of an interstate road, is by a consideration of the proportion between mileage within and mileage without the state and of the value of the whole.³

9. Taxation of Consolidated Roads. — In Illinois it has been held that where a railroad corporation is formed under the laws of that state by the consolidation of other railroad corporations, which are merged into the new corporation thus formed, and where one of the constituent companies was incorporated under the laws of that state, the new corporation thus formed is to be considered as one of the companies incorporated under the laws of Illinois, within the terms and meaning of the revenue law, and the capital stock (located or used in the state) of such corporation is subject to be assessed and taxed.⁴ Where several railroad companies have consolidated, questions concerning the operation of certain exemptions from taxation have frequently been made the subject of judicial determination. This subject is fully discussed in a prior title in this work, to which reference is made.⁵

New York, etc., R. Co.*, 129 N. Y. 474, reversing 61 Hun (N. Y.) 66; Ohio, etc., R. Co. v. Weber, 96 Ill. 443. See also Quincy R. Bridge Co. v. Adams County, 88 Ill. 615.

10. Taxation of Leased Roads. — It has been held that a state statute is not unconstitutional as impairing the obligation of a contract which is prohibited by the Federal Constitution, because the statute requires the lessee of a railroad to pay taxes assessed against the road and to deduct the same from the stipulated rent. The state has the power thus to make a lessee of a railroad a collector of taxes assessed against the lessor, the same as banks and other corporations may be constituted the means for collecting a tax assessed against shares of stock belonging to the individual stockholders.¹ Because a railroad company has leased its road, and the lessee has agreed to pay all taxes thereon, the company is not relieved from taxation.²

11. Taxation of Union Depots. — A union depot company which is an independent corporation may be taxed according to its track mileage or in such other way as may be provided by law.³ But if such company is only a nominal corporation created merely for the convenience of the railroad companies in holding and managing the depot property, all the depot stock being owned by such railroad companies, a tax on the gross earnings of the railroad companies constitutes a tax on the depot stock, and it is not separately taxable as an independent corporation.⁴

12. County Aid. — Where a county subscribed stock to a railroad and imposed an ad valorem tax on all taxable property in the county for the purpose of raising the amount so subscribed, it was held that even if a part of the road were subject to taxation for local purposes, it could not, to any extent, be liable for the county subscription to itself for the purpose of completing its construction.⁵

XIII. DOUBLE TAXATION — 1. Power of State to Impose. — While the double taxation of corporations and corporate interests may unjustly work a hardship, nevertheless the power of the state to subject corporations and corporate interests to double taxation under certain circumstances is ample, unless restricted by constitutional provisions.⁶

2. Construction of Statutes. — Statutes will be so construed as to prevent double taxation, if possible. Double taxation is never to be presumed. Justice requires that the burdens of government shall, as far as is practicable, be laid equally on all, and if property is taxed once in one way it would ordinarily be wrong to tax it again in another way, when the burden of both taxes falls on the same person. Sometimes tax laws have that effect, but if they do it is because the legislature has unmistakably so enacted. All presumptions are against such an imposition.⁷

3. Separate Taxation of Shares and Capital Stock or Property. — Since the shares of stock in a corporation constitute a distinct property from the capital stock and property belonging to the corporation, it is very generally held that the taxation of the shares and also the capital stock or property of the corporation does not constitute double taxation prohibited by law.¹ But this rule has not been followed without exception, as it has been held otherwise under the laws of some jurisdictions which perhaps pursue a more equitable and just policy.²

4. Shares Held in Foreign Corporations. — It is established that a tax may be lawfully levied on the shares in the capital stock of a foreign corporation held and owned by residents of a state which imposes the tax, though the corporation has paid taxes on its capital stock or property under the laws of the state under which the corporation was created.³

5. Simultaneous Tax on Franchise, Capital Stock, Property, and Shares. — It has been held that it is within the legislative power, in respect to corporations, to levy any two or more of the following taxes simultaneously: on the franchise (including dividends); on the capital stock; on the tangible property of the corporation; and on the shares of the capital stock in the hands of the stockholders.⁴ In discussing the principles of law relating to the taxation of

The Franchise of a Corporation "is capable of a valuation apart from the property which the corporation may happen to own, and a valuation of the franchise does not necessarily corporate franchises, it was pointed out that if a tax is levied on the franchise of a corporation as distinguished from a tax on property, no complaint can be made that the corporation is already taxed on its property.¹ Thus it has been held that a franchise tax on the net earnings or income of certain corporations, and a tax on bonds owned by them, is not prohibited double taxation, as the income tax is on the franchise measured by the net earnings or income.²

6. Statutory Provisions to Avoid Double Taxation. — Some of the states have provided against double taxation by enacting statutes exempting certain corporate interests where other interests are taxed, and exempting shares of stock from taxation when the corporation itself is taxed on its property or capital stock.³ It has been held that an assessment, by a board of equalization, of the capital stock of a corporation for taxation by first ascertaining the market or fair cash value of the shares of the capital stock and the market or fair cash value of its debts, exclusive of those for current expenses, and adding them together, and taking from the sum the equalized valuation of all its tangible property, was proper, as showing the balance of the capital stock over and above the assessed value of the tangible property. The assessed valuation of the personal property is deducted to avoid double taxation.⁴

XIV. CORPORATION REQUIRED TO FURNISH LIST OF TAXABLE PROPERTIES. — In many of the states corporations, like other taxable subjects, are required by statute to make and furnish to the proper authorities a list of their taxable properties, and in some states certain penalties are imposed for a failure or refusal of a corporation to comply with the statutory requirements.⁵ Thus corporations in some jurisdictions are required to furnish a list of their stockholders,⁶ the number and market value of their shares of stock,⁷ the capital stock and property,⁸ a report of the amount of their business,⁹ and their indebtedness.¹⁰ Under the generally adopted system of taxing railroads, it is usually required that certain officers of railroad companies shall make out and return to the proper authorities a list of the railroad properties subject to taxation.¹¹

Under the Laws of Texas it has been held that to tax the franchise of a corporation after all its property has been taxed at its full value is prohibited double taxation. Southwestern Tel., etc., Co. v. Meerscheidt, (Tex. Civ. App. 1901) 65 S. W. Rep. 381.

I. DEFINITION. — A tax title is the title by which one holds land purchased at a tax sale.¹

II. WHO MAY ACQUIRE TITLE — 1. Persons under Duty to Pay Taxes —

a. GENERAL RULE. — A purchase at a tax sale by one upon whom rests the duty of paying the taxes operates merely as a payment of such taxes, leaving the title to stand as if the payment had been made before sale.² But one who is under no duty, legal or moral, to pay the taxes for which property is sold may purchase at the sale and acquire title under such purchase,³ even though he was in possession at the time of the assessment.⁴

Thus, an Owner cannot acquire a different title by neglecting to pay the taxes and purchasing at the tax sale;⁵ and the same rule applies to a purchase

But where, in an action for the recovery of a lot, the defendant relies upon the tax title, acquired during the pendency of the suit, under a tax sale from which the plaintiff had sought to redeem prior to the expiration of the time of redemption from the person who then held the certificate of sale, the plaintiff in the suit is entitled to redeem. Butterfield v. Walsh, 36 Iowa 534.

of lands of another sold jointly with land belonging to the purchaser upon which the taxes are delinquent.¹

A Vendee under an Executory Contract who is in possession and under the duty to pay the taxes cannot acquire title by purchasing at a tax sale² though the title bond is silent as to such duty;³ and the assignee of such vendee is under the same disability.⁴

One Who Receives the Rents and Profits and whose duty it is to pay the taxes is likewise debarred from acquiring title at a tax sale.⁵

One in Possession, Claiming Title, when the assessment is made is subject to the same rule.⁶

A Purchaser in Possession under a Prior Sale may purchase at a subsequent sale before title

A Tenant in Common or His Grantee cannot generally obtain title by purchase at a sale for taxes.¹ It is otherwise, however, where the interests of the tenants were not acquired by the same instrument or at the same time and no relation of trust existed between them,² or where the tax title is not founded upon any default of the cotenant acquiring it, for example, where the taxes were levied, the land was sold, and the time of redemption had expired before such tenant had acquired any interest in the land,³ or after the cotenant's interest had ceased or the tenancy had been destroyed.⁴

If the holder of a third mortgage buys a tax-sale certificate on the property mortgaged, then, on the foreclosure of the second mortgage, buys the legal title to the lands subject to the lien of the first mortgage, all tax liens merge in his superior title, and he acquires by payment of taxes no lien superior to the title under such sale. Gibson v. Mather, 20 Wis. 576.

A Mortgagor in Possession and those claiming under him,¹ or one who purchases for the mortgagor,² cannot take title at a tax sale; and even after sale under the mortgage and purchase by the mortgage debtor, where the taxes accrued during the mortgagor's ownership, the title is held to remain undisturbed.³

One Whose Title Has Been Extinguished may, however, purchase at a tax sale, and the purchase of such title will not amount to a mere payment of the taxes, since the purchaser owes to the person holding adversely no duty in respect of the payment of the taxes for which the land was sold.⁴

Adverse Possession. — So one who, though owing the duty to pay taxes, acquires an outstanding tax title and goes into possession may hold the land adversely under such title until it ripens under the statute of limitations.⁵

b. AGENT. — Tax deeds taken by one as agent or on behalf of another to protect the latter operate as a mere redemption,⁶ and one whose agency relates to the property cannot buy for himself and acquire the title,⁷ where there has been no explicit renunciation or revocation of the agency.⁸ But a purchase by an agent is voidable, and not void.⁹

c. ATTORNEY. — Where an attorney whose relation to his client's property imposes the duty to pay taxes purchases a tax title, the purchase amounts to a redemption only;¹⁰ and an attorney is forbidden to purchase for himself where he has a duty to perform which is inconsistent with the character of the purchase.¹¹

So Where the Attorney Justifiably Severs His Relation with his client he may then act for the protection of his own interest and thereafter may become a purchaser. Eckrote v. Myers, 41 Iowa 324.

f. HUSBAND OR WIFE. — A husband cannot obtain a tax title upon the estate of his wife,³ but the same rule has not been applied uniformly as against the wife's acquisition of title to the husband's land.⁴

2. Tax Officers. — An officer conducting or connected with a tax sale cannot purchase the property himself or through an agent.⁵ A statute which prevents such purchase has been held to preclude the officer from taking a certificate which was issued before he came into office,⁶ but an officer of a county out of which a new county is carved may purchase the certificates of the old county which have been assigned to the new,⁷ and a clerk or mere ministerial officer having no control or influence over the sale may purchase.⁸

3. State, County, and Municipality — In General. — Under the various statutes, if a sale must fail for want of bidders or because the bids made are not sufficient to cover the taxes due, etc., the property may be bid in for the state, county, or municipality; the contingency contemplated by the particular statute must arise, and the conditions of the statute must be complied with.⁹

III. DEED — 1. Right to Deed and Authority to Execute — a. RIGHT TO DEED — (1) In General. — The statutes often prescribe a period within which a deed may be procured, or before the expiration of which the right to a deed does not mature. Such provisions must be strictly observed,² and the deed must be demanded or issued or an action begun to foreclose the tax certificate within the period prescribed.³

Deed. — In Colorado county bidding in land at a tax sale is entitled to a deed substantially in the form of a deed to a cash purchaser. Dyke v. Whyte, 17 Colo. 296.

In other jurisdictions, where lands are struck off to the state for want of bidders, a deed is not necessary. Neal v. Andrews, 53 Ark. 445; Doyle v. Martin, 55 Ark. 37; Baldwin v. Ely, 66 Wis. 171; Lombard v. White, 76 Wis. 445.

In Kansas it was held under a statute providing that where lands were bid off by the county treasurer for the county, a certificate of sale to the county should be issued and that such certificate should be assignable and subject to purchase, that a deed could not be taken by the county so as to preclude an assignment of the certificate of sale by the treasurer. State v. Magill, 4 Kan. 415; Guittard Tp. v. Marshall County, 4 Kan. 389.

Execution Sales. — In Illinois it has been held that a statute authorizing suit to be brought in the name of the county was broad enough to authorize the county to purchase under the judgment. Douthett v. Kettle, 104 Ill. 357.

And in Jefferson v. Curry, 71 Mo. 85, a city was held to have authority under its charter to purchase under an execution.

In Kentucky it was held that under a municipal charter authorizing the purchase of property for governmental purposes, the municipality might purchase at a sale for its taxes, whether under a levy by its collecting officer or under a decretal sale for a like purpose. Keller v. Wilson, 90 Ky. 350.

In Wisconsin it was held that under an act permitting counties to purchase and hold land for public use, etc., a county treasurer might take an assignment of a tax certificate for the use of the county even if the county could not sell. Parish v. Eager, 15 Wis. 532.

2. Time for Issuance of Deed Prescribed by Statute. — Williams v. Hedrick, (C. C. A.) 101 Fed. Rep. 876, (C. C. A.) 96 Fed. Rep. 657; Bowman v. Wettig, 39 Ill. 416; Farrar v. Wetherby, 88 Wis. 324; Safford v. Conan, 88 Wis. 354.

Right to Redeem Preserved. — In some cases, however, the deed may be executed before the expiration of the period of redemption, leaving unaffected the right to redeem. Ives v. Lynn, 7 Conn. 505; Baker v. Kelley, 11 Minn. 480.

3. Limitations. — Wheeler v. Jackson, 137 U. S. 245; Tuttle v. Block, 104 Cal. 443; Fuller v. Shedd, 161 Ill. 462, 52 Am. St. Rep. 380; Doud v. Blood, 89 Iowa 237; *Innes v. Application of Statute to State or County. — Such a statute of limitations does not apply to or bind the state unless it is made to do so by express words or necessary implication. Russ v. Crichton, 117 Cal. 695.

As Against an Assignee of a certificate held by the county, the statute runs from the date of the assignment. Hiles v. Cate, 75 Wis. 91.

Limitation of Action to Foreclose. — In Wisconsin the action to foreclose the tax certificate must be commenced while the owner of the certificate has a right to demand a deed. Goffe v. Bond, 69 Wis. 366.

Where Laches or Abandonment Is Relied On to bar the issuance of a deed, evidence thereof must be clear and decisive, aside from any presumption of payment or redemption that might arise from the lapse of twenty years or from long-continued adverse possession.¹

(2) When Right Matures.—After the statutory period for redemption has expired a purchaser is entitled to a deed upon complying with all the conditions imposed by law.² But a deed cannot issue until after performance of the statutory conditions, such as payment of the legal fees,³ the filing of an affidavit of nonoccupancy prior to the application for the deed,⁴ notice of purchase,⁵ notice of expiration of the time to redeem or of application for a deed and the filing of an affidavit of such notice,⁶ presentment and surrender of the certificate of purchase to the proper officer,⁷ payment of all taxes in arrears or which were a lien at the time of the completion of the purchase,⁸ and procuring a report by the county surveyor specifying the metes and bounds of the land sold.⁹

(3) Mandamus to Enforce Right.—Where the right to a deed is perfected its execution may be enforced by mandamus.¹⁰ So the officer¹¹ or his successor in office¹² may be thus required to execute a second and corrected deed when the first is imperfect. Mandamus will not issue, however, unless all the

In Nebraska the right of action accrues when the period of redemption expires. Parker v. Matheson, 21 Neb. 546. See also Helphrey v. Redick, 21 Neb. 80; D'Gette v. Sheldon, 27 Neb. 829.

Before redemption.—Where the statute makes provision for redemption at any time before the deed is executed, the deed must of course be executed before redemption, and thereafter the officer is justified in refusing it. State v. Cranney, 30 Wash. 594.

1. Laches or Abandonment.—Holton v. Wetherby, 88 Wis. 324.

But in Oskendon v. Barnes, 43 Iowa 615, it was held that even in the absence of a statutory limitation upon the right to demand a deed, there is a presumption of abandonment in favor of a bona fide grantee of the tax debtor when the purchaser delays for more than eleven years to apply for a deed. Compare Eaton v. North, 32 Wis. 303.

2. When Right Matures.—State v. Jordan, 36 Fla. 1; Forqueran v. Donnolly, 7 W. Va. 114.

That the Property Is in the Hands of a Receiver is no ground for refusing to issue the deed. Whitehead v. Farmers' L. & T. Co., 98 Fed. Rep. 10, 39 C. C. A. 34; Rice v. Jerome, 97 Fed. Rep. 719, 38 C. C. A. 388.

Owner under Disability.—The right to a deed may be perfect though the owner was under disability and may redeem after the execution of the deed. Wright v. Wing, 18 Wis. 45. So also, it seems, as to the right to foreclose the lien of a tax certificate. Leavitt v. Bell, 55 Neb. 57.

Second Sale—Postponement of Right to Deed.—In Illinois, where a purchaser permits lands to be again sold for taxes or forfeited within two years, the purchaser is not entitled to a deed until the expiration of a like term from the date of the sale or forfeiture. Denike v. Rourke, 3 Biss. (U. S.) 39; Ely v. Brown, 183 Ill. 575; Netterstrom v. Kemeys, 187 Ill. 617.

3. Payment of Legal Fees.—State v. Strahl, 17 Wis. 146.

Improper Fee.—A county treasurer cannot require as a condition to the execution of a deed the payment of a fee allowed to the register of deeds for recording, as the recording of such deed is within the discretion of the purchaser. Burnham v. Farmers' L. & T. Co., 44 Neb. 438.

4. Affidavit of Nonoccupancy.—Howe v. Genin, 57 Wis. 268, holding that the number of days prescribed in the statute meant consecutive days and that the affidavit need not be made by the owner or holder of the certificate. conditions exist which entitle the applicant to a deed.¹

b. AUTHORITY TO EXECUTE—(1) In General.—The authority to issue a tax deed must be found in the statute, and a deed executed without such authority conveys no title.² The power to sell, it has been held, does not by implication embrace the power to convey.³

(2) Particular Officer—(a) In General.—No other officer than the one designated in the particular statute may execute the authority to convey land sold for taxes.⁴

(b) Deputy.—A regular deputy of the principal officer authorized to execute a tax deed may himself execute such conveyance⁵ for and in the name of his principal.⁶

Officer Not Authorized to Appoint Deputy.—Where, however, sheriffs as tax collectors are not authorized to appoint deputies in the capacity of tax collectors, a deed cannot be executed by any under-sheriff.⁷

Deputy's Authority Not Derived from Principal.—Where the deputy is clothed with the powers of the principal and derives his authority from the law rather than from the principal, under particular circumstances, it seems that he may execute the deed in the name of the principal by the deputy or in his own name as deputy.⁸

(c) After Expiration of Official Term.—Since the power to convey exists by virtue of official status alone, the deed should be executed by the incumbent of the office at the time of conveyance, and not by the officer who made the sale if he is no longer the incumbent.⁹

Wade*, 39 W. Va. 281. See also Farrar v. Eastman, 5 Me. 345, and the cases cited in the last two preceding notes.

Office Not in Existence.—A deed executed by one as the incumbent of an office which is not in existence is void. Felch v. Travis, 92 Fed. Rep. 210.

Officer Ex Officio Tax Collector.—Where after a sale and issuance of a certificate by a city treasurer in his ex officio capacity as collector the municipal charter provision was changed so that it became the duty of the treasurer as such, without any official designation as the collector, to execute tax deeds, a deed executed to the purchaser by the officer as treasurer was held to be valid. Chrisman v. Hough, 146 Mo. 102. Compare Callahan v. Davis, 125 Mo. 27, holding that where a county treasurer was ex officio county collector a deed executed by him as collector only was not sufficient. But where the sheriff is also the tax collector a deed by him describing himself as both sheriff and tax collector is not for that reason bad. Bell v. Gordon, 55 Miss. 45.

Continuance of Authority.—Where a county board under lawful authority directs the proper officer of the county to issue tax deeds, the authority of the officer continues until it is withdrawn. Mead v. Nelson, 52 Wis. 402.

5. Deputy May Execute Conveyance.—Whitford v. Lynch, 10 Kan. 180; Chapman v. Bennett, 2 Leigh (Va.) 329; Gilkey v. Cook, 60 Wis. 133; Scheiber v. Kaehler, 49 Wis. 291; Huey v. Van Wie, 23 Wis. 613. Compare Wilson v. Doe, 7 Leigh (Va.) 22, holding that the officer who makes the sale should execute the conveyance, and that where the sale was made by the sheriff himself a deed by a deputy conveyed no title.

Deputy de Facto.—McRee v. Swalm, 81 Miss. 679.

(3) Corrected Deed. — The officer may execute a second deed in order to incorporate a sufficient description of the property,¹ or to conform the recitals to the facts or cure mere irregularities.² But the authority cannot be exercised to overthrow by false recitals in a deed the records upon which it is based,³ and where a good and valid deed is once executed the power of the officer is exhausted, and he cannot divest the title by the execution of another deed.⁴

c. EXECUTION — (1) In General. — The formalities with which the power of executing the deed is circumscribed must be strictly observed.⁵

(2) Signature. — A tax deed should be signed officially with the proper designation of the title of the officer authorized by law to execute it,⁶ but the signature is sufficient even though not technically correct in the official designation if substantial certainty as to the identity of the officer is preserved.⁷

(3) Attestation. — Statutory requirements as to attestation by witnesses must be complied with,⁸ but in the absence of statute attesting witnesses are not necessary.⁹

(4) Seal. — Under statutes requiring conveyances of estates in land to be under seal,¹⁰ as well as under statutes specifically governing tax proceedings¹¹ and under the common law,¹² a tax deed to be valid as a deed must be under seal, though the legislature has power to prescribe a form of deed dispensing with a seal.¹³

Omission Not Curable. — The omission of the seal is not a mere irregularity or curable defect, but is fatal to the deed.¹⁴

Powell*, 7 Ill. 119, holding that either the officer making the sale or his successor may make the sale; Graves v. Hayden, 2 Litt. (Ky.) 61; *Taylor v. After Cancellation of Certificate. — In Nebraska, where a certificate is surrendered, upon the execution of the first deed, and is canceled and filed in the county clerk's office by the treasurer, as required by statute, the treasurer has no authority to issue a second deed. Baldwin v. Merriam, 16 Neb. 199; Reed v. Merriam, 15 Neb. 323; Thompson v. Merriam, 15 Neb. 498.

But in Colorado it is held that where the certificate is still in the hands of the treasurer, he may make a second deed. Duggan v. McCullough, 27 Colo. 43.

13. Legislature May Dispense with Seal. — Patterson v. Galliher, 122 N. Car. 511.

A Statutory Form Without Seal dispenses with the necessity of a seal. Bowers v. Chambers, 53 Miss. 259. Compare Day v. Day, 59 Miss. 318, holding that a conveyance by an officer not embraced in the statutory exception must be under his official seal.

14. Omission Not Curable. — Altes v. Hinckley, 36 Ill. 265, 85 Am. Dec. 406, holding that a court of chancery will not correct the error. Reed v. Morse, 51 Kan. 141; Patterson v. Galliher, 122 N. Car. 511. See also the title SEALS, vol. 25, p. 80.

Official Seal. — When the official seal is required by statute the deed must be so authenticated¹ even though private seals are abolished,² and it has been held that if no provision has been made for an official seal of the particular officer he cannot execute a valid deed.³ But the private seal of the officer executing the deed, and not the public seal of the county, is the proper seal under a statute requiring a particular officer to execute the deed under his seal.⁴

(5) Acknowledgment — (a) In General. — As in the case of other deeds,⁵ a tax deed must be acknowledged in compliance with the statute⁶ before recording, unless the deed is again recorded after acknowledgment.⁷ In some states an acknowledgment is not necessary.⁸

(b) Sufficiency of Acknowledgment and Certificate Thereof. — The acknowledgment should, of course, be taken by the officer lawfully authorized to act in that regard.⁹

- The Certificate of acknowledgment must be in the statutory form.¹⁰

Where the Deed Is Executed by a Deputy, a certificate of acknowledgment that the deputy, by name, personally came, etc.,¹¹ or that the principal, naming him,

1. Official Seal. — Reed v. Morse, 51 Kan. 141; King v. Hyatt, 51 Kan. 504, 37 Am. St. Rep. 304; Day v. Day, 59 Miss. 318; Sutton v. Stone, 4 Neb. 319; Knox v. Huidekoper, 21 Wis. 527.

Sufficient Sealing. — See Brown v. Cohn, 85 Wis. 1, holding that the particular seal used sufficiently appeared to be the official seal of the county.

In Daniel v. Taylor, 33 Fla. 636, it was held that the use of the seal of the Circuit Court by mistake for that of the County Court was immaterial where the same person was clerk of both courts and the instrument referred to the seal as that of the County Court.

Where a Board Has No Common Seal, a conveyance purporting to be under its common seal is void. McCoy v. Dickenson College, 5 S. & R. (Pa.) 254; Watt v. Gilgore, 2 Yeates (Pa.) 330.

Acknowledgment Is for the Purpose of Registration, and a statute requiring that a deed be filed in the office of the clerk of the probate court and remain there for two years unless sooner redeemed does not require that the deed be acknowledged before being so deposited in the office of said clerk. Edmondson v. Granberry, 73 Miss. 723.

8. Acknowledgment Unnecessary. — Ellis v. Clark, 39 Fla. 714; Thompson v. Schuyler, 7 Ill. 271; Graves v. Bruen, 6 Ill. 167.

As Against a Previously Acquired Title an acknowledgment of a collector's deed is not necessary. Langley v. Batchelder, 69 N. H. 566.

Formal Inaccuracies Disregarded. — Ward v. Walters, 63 Wis. 39; Yorty v. Paine, 62 Wis. 154.

Acknowledgment as in Other Cases. — Hogins v. Brashears, 13 Ark. 242.

11. Certificate that Deputy Appeared, Etc. — Osterman v. Baldwin, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 116; appeared by his deputy, naming him, and showing that the acknowledgment was by the deputy who executed the deed,¹ is sufficient.

(6) Revenue Stamp. — Since Congress possesses no power to tax the means or instruments devised by the states for the purpose of collecting their own revenues,² it cannot require that stamps be affixed to tax deeds issued under the state authority.³

(7) Delivery and Acceptance. — Where the tax title depends upon a deed, delivery is necessary in order to perfect the conveyance, and the delivery and the acceptance must be mutual and concurrent acts.⁴ Delivery is not always necessary, however, under statutory provisions, as where the land is bid in for the county⁵ or upon the purchase from the state of lands which had been previously bid in by the state.⁶

2. Recording — Not Essential to Execution. — In the absence of statute the recording of a tax deed is not essential to the vesting of the title, though, as in the case of other deeds, important advantages may result from its registration or disadvantages from a failure to record,⁷ as, for example, where the question of constructive notice to subsequent purchasers is involved.⁸ So recording sometimes becomes important where under the statute the period of limitation against informalities and irregularities,⁹ or against redemption,¹⁰ begins to run from a valid recording of the deed; and an unrecorded tax deed does not carry constructive possession of the land.¹¹

Essential to Validity of Deed. — Under other statutes recording is essential to the validity of the deed or to the vesting of the legal title in the grantee.¹²

Deed Must Be Witnessed or Acknowledged. — As in the case of other deeds, unless a tax deed is properly witnessed or acknowledged it is not entitled to registration in most jurisdictions, and if recorded the recording will not have its ordinary effect.¹

7. Purchase of Tax Lands from State. — Youngs v. Povey, 127 Mich. 297; Eldridge v. Richmond, 120 Mich. 586, in which cases it was held that the application for the deed and payment of the amount complete the purchase, the execution of the deed being merely ministerial and necessary only to evidence the title.

3. Parties — a. GRANTOR. — As a general rule, a tax deed should be in the name of the grantor for whose taxes the land is sold — the state or the particular municipal division thereof.²

b. GRANTEE — Purchaser or His Assignee. — The deed should be executed to the purchaser at the sale or to his assignee,³ since the assignee under a proper assignment succeeds to all the rights of the purchaser;⁴ but the assignment must be made in the manner required by the statute⁵ and must be recited in the deed.⁶

1. Deed Must Be Witnessed or Acknowledged. — Hill v. Gordon, 45 Fed. Rep. 276; Keech v. Enriquez, 28 Fla. 597; Stierlin v. Daley, 37 Mo. 483; Dunlap v. Henry, 76 Mo. 106; Leftwich v. Richmond, 100 Va. 164. See also supra, this section, Right to Deed and Authority to Execute — Execution — Acknowledgment, and see the title RECORDING ACTS, vol. 24, p. 101.

2. Grantor — Body for Whose Taxes Land Was Sold. — Stieff v. Hartwell, 35 Fla. 606; Florida Sav. Bank v. Brittain, 20 Fla. 507; Sams v. King, 18 Fla. 557; Treat v. Smith, 68 Me. 394; Woodman v. Clapp, 21 Wis. 355.

Both State and County. — In Wisconsin a tax deed to a county is invalid if it fails to name both the state and the county as grantors. Woodman v. Clapp, 21 Wis. 355; Wilson v. Henry, 40 Wis. 594; Easley v. Whipple, 57 Wis. 485; Haseltine v. Hewitt, 61 Wis. 121. See also Wine v. Woods, 158 Ind. 388.

Execution May Be Sufficient though not technically in the name of state or county as required, when the deed appears to be executed in pursuance of the proper authority. McNamara v. Estes, 22 Iowa 246; Leggett v. Rogers, 9 Barb. (N. Y.) 406; Utica Bank v. Mersereau, 3 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 528, 48 Am. Dec. 189; Wilson v. Henry, 40 Wis. 594.

In Name of Officer — Warranty. — Where the deed is in the name of the officer, as under some early statutes, covenants of warranty therein are not personal, but official. Stephenson v. Weeks, 22 N. H. 257; Wilson v. Cochran, 14 N. H. 397; Gibson v. Mussey, 11 Vt. 212.

Several Collectors Cannot Join in one deed for lands sold by them severally. Humphry v. Boge, 2 Root (Conn.) 437.

3. Grantee — Purchaser or Assignee. — Ogden v. Bemis, 125 Ill. 105; Swan v. Whaley, 75 Iowa 623; Keene v. Houghton, 19 Me. 368; Walton v. Hale, 9 Gratt. (Va.) 194.

Sufficient Designation. — See Garwood v. Hastings, 38 Cal. 216; Sherry v. Gilmore, 58 Wis. 324.

Several Purchasers. — Where the deed includes several parcels of land, some purchased by one and some by another person, naming the two purchasers with words indicating the circumstances of the sale, but not with sufficient particularity to show who purchased each particular tract, is sufficient under the Wisconsin statute. Hunt v. Stinson, 101 Wis. 556.

A Deed Running to a Grantee Not in Existence is a nullity. Paine v. Boynton, 124 Mich. 194.

Assignee of County or Town. — In North Carolina, under the Act of 1895, the interest of a county purchasing at a tax sale is that of a mortgagee, and the assignee of the county acquires no right but that of foreclosure. Huss v. Craig, 124 N. Car. 743; Collins v. Bryan, 124 N. Car. 738; Wilcox v. Leach, 123 N. Car. 74. But if the assignee takes a deed it will be valid as a mortgage. Kerner v. Boston Cottage Co., 126 N. Car. 356.

So in Wisconsin a tax deed to the purchaser of a certificate from a town is void, the town having no authority to receive or make an assignment of a certificate of sale. Irvin v. Smith, 60 Wis. 175; Jackson v. Jacksonport, 56 Wis. 310; Dreutzer v. Smith, 56 Wis. 292; Eaton v. Manitowoc County, 44 Wis. 488. See also, under the statute then controlling in Kansas, where the assignment of a certificate by a county was invalid, Entreken v. Howard, 16 Kan. 553; Sapp v. Morrill, 8 Kan. 677; Judd v. Driver, 1 Kan. 455.

4. See generally the title ASSIGNMENTS, vol. 2, p. 1007. See also the title TAXATION, ante, p. 846.

Quitclaim Deed Sufficient. — Clippinger v. Tuller, 10 Kan. 377; Lain v. Shepardson, 23 Wis. 224; State v. Winn, 19 Wis. 304, 88 Am. Dec. 689.

Recording Not Essential. — Swan v. Whaley, 75 Iowa 623.

Authority of Officer Limited by Statute. — The authority of the officer in this regard as in others is strictly limited by the particular statutory provisions prevailing.¹

The Equitable Owner of the Tax Certificate may foreclose it by action.²

4. Requisites and Sufficiency of Deed — a. IN GENERAL — In the absence of a Special Statutory Form, the deed should be adjusted to the facts of the case, and must purport to convey the title in such manner as to operate as a valid common-law conveyance.³

Statutes fixing the Form of the deed are mandatory,⁴ and according to some cases must be strictly followed,⁵ though it is generally held that while a material deviation from the statute will vitiate,⁶ a substantial compliance is sufficient.⁷

A fortiori, a deed which follows the statutory form will be sufficient if there is no necessity to deviate therefrom in order to make the instrument speak the truth.⁸

Statutory Form Inapplicable. — The statutory form, however, will not control a case to which it does not apply,⁹ and need not be followed to the extent of making recitals inapplicable to a particular case,¹⁰ or which are not true and show an illegal sale.¹¹

Deed Void on Its Face. — A deed showing on its face a failure to comply with the law is void.¹²

1. Authority of Officer Limited. — Alexander v. Savage, 90 Ala. 383, holding that a conveyance to administrators "for the use of the heirs" of the original purchaser is void for want of authority to execute it.

2. Equitable Owner of Certificate. — Leavitt v. Bell, 55 Neb. 57.

3. In Absence of Statutory Form. — State v. Mantz, 62 Mo. 258; Einstein v. Gay, 45 Mo. 62; Guffey v. O'Reiley, 88 Mo. 418, 57 Am. Rep. 424.

A Quitclaim by the State is sufficient to convey lands which had been bid in by the state. Mann v. Carson, 120 Mich. 631; Dawson v. Peter, 119 Mich. 274.

Special Authority. — It is not necessary that the deed should show on its face that it was executed under the special statutory power.¹

b. RECITALS — In General. — A tax deed should show by its recitals a compliance with the provisions of the law,² and it is invalid if it recites facts which show a failure to comply with the law³ or if it omits or misrecites facts which the statute requires to be recited to show a valid sale.⁴ It has frequently been held, however, that it is not necessary for the deed to show affirmatively and in detail that every prerequisite step in the tax proceeding has been taken,⁵ nor need it state other matters than those which the statute requires it to recite,⁶ but in any event it must recite so much of the previous

Thus, it has been held that the fact that several tracts are embraced in one deed will not raise the inference that the parcels were not separately sold. Bennett v. Darling, 15 S. proceedings as will show authority to sell the land and make the deed.¹ Where the truth or falsity of the fact recited does not vitiate the sale,² the deed will not be invalidated by the misrecital of facts not necessary to be recited.³

Particular Recitals. — The particular recitals which are necessary depend upon the statutes themselves which prescribe the conditions of a valid sale and the requisite recitals in that regard.⁴ Thus, under various statutes, the deed must show that the parcels of land were sold separately,⁵ that the statutory notice was given by advertisement or otherwise,⁶ that the assessment was for a particular year,⁷ that authority to make the sale existed by reason of delinquency, etc.,⁸ that the certificate was assigned, if such be the case, and that the assignment was valid.⁹ So the time and place of sale and the¹⁰

But see as to a deed of forfeited state lands Walker v. Taylor, 43 Ark. 543.

2. Hickman v. Kempner, 35 Ark. 505, holding that a false recital that the land was assessed in the name of unknown owners was immaterial.

3. Misrecital of Immaterial Facts. — Harper v. Rowe, 55 Cal. 132.

4. Particular Recitals. — See generally the local statutes.

5. Separate Sale of Lands. — Howard v. Hulbert, 10 Kan. App. 314; Allen v. Buckley, 94 Mo. 158.

A deed reciting that the several pieces were separately disposed of at a public sale, and that the purchaser separately offered to pay the sum due on each, etc., is sufficient though it does not recite that the parcels were stricken off separately to the purchaser. Barnett v. Jaynes, 26 Colo. 279. But see Hotson v. Wetherby, 88 Wis. 324.

6. Notice or Advertisement. — Skowhegan Sav. Bank v. Parsons, 86 Me. 514; Ladd v. Dickey, 84 Me. 190; Wiggin v. Temple, 73 Me. 382; Moore v. Harris, 91 Mo. 616; *Abbott v. Wisconsin. — Call v. Dearborn, 21 Wis. 504.

9. Assignment of Certificate. — See supra, this section, Parties — Grantee.

Klotsch*, 28 Wis. 312, holding a recital of sale at the county-seat to be sufficient; Hoge v. Magnes, (C. C. A.) 85 Fed. Rep. 355.

More Misrecital of the Actual Date of Sale has been held not to invalidate the deed. Callanan v. Hurley, 93 U. S. 387; Hurlburt v. Dyer, 36 Iowa 474; Harris v. Curran, 32 Kan. 580; Brigins v. Chandler, 60 Miss. 862; Shell v. Duncan, 31 S. Car. 547.

Adjourned or Deferred Sales. — The statute not requiring a recital of adjournment from day to day, the recital of the particular day on which the land was offered for sale is sufficient. Hill v. Atterbury, 88 Mo. 114.

And where sales were continued over several days, a recital in the deed of a sale on the first day will not render the deed invalid though the sale was actually made on a later day. Callanan v. Hurley, 93 U. S. 387; Phelps v. Meade, 41 Iowa 470.

So where the statute permits a sale on a subsequent date when it cannot be made on the first date provided, the recital of a sale on the subsequent date without showing the contingent consideration paid¹ should be stated, and in California the provisions of the certificate must be recited in the deed.²

c. AS TO LAND CONVEYED—(1) In General—Several Parcels.—In the absence of statutory inhibition, there is no reason why more than one parcel of land may not be conveyed in one and the same deed to a purchaser at a tax sale.³

(2) Description—(a) Rights Attach Only to Property Described.—Rights under a tax deed can be asserted to that property alone which is described in such deed.⁴

(b) Sufficiency—aa. REASONABLE CERTAINTY.—A tax deed must describe the land conveyed with such reasonable certainty as to identify it without the aid of extrinsic facts.⁵

Conformity with Description in Antecedent Proceedings.—The description in the deed

cies excusing sale on the first date does not show an unauthorized sale. Easton v. Savery, 44 Iowa 654; Love v. Welch, 33 Iowa 192; Sully v. Kuehl, 30 Iowa 275; Eldridge v. Kuehl, 27 Iowa 160; Stafford v. Lauver, 49 Kan. 690; Hobson v. Dutton, 9 Kan. 477.

But where the statute permits adjournments only for two weeks at a time, a deed which discloses on its face that the sale was made at an adjourned day three months after the regular sale commenced is void without recitals affirmatively showing that the adjournments did not exceed two weeks. Gregg v. Jesberg, 113 Mo. 34.

1. Consideration Paid.—Simmons v. McCarthy, 118 Cal. 622; Hubbell v. Campbell, 56 Cal. 527; Clark v. Holton, 94 Ga. 542.

An Erroneous Statement of the Consideration will not invalidate the deed and is not prejudicial where the giving of the deed ended the right of redemption. Langley v. Batchelder, 69 N. H. 566.

2. Provisions of Certificate.—Simmons v. McCarthy, 118 Cal. 622; Russ v. Crichton, 117 Cal. 695; De Frieze v. Quint, 94 Cal. 653, 28 Am. St. Rep. 151; Hughes v. Cannedy, 92 Cal. 382; Anderson v. Hancock, 64 Cal. 455; Grimm v. O'Connell, 54 Cal. 522.

Variance as to the Amount of Taxes and Costs as recited in the two instruments has been held not to be sufficient to invalidate the deed. Doland v. Mooney, 79 Cal. 137.

3. More than One Parcel.—Barnett v. Jaynes, 26 Colo. 279; Waddingham v. Dickson, 17 Colo. 223; Stieff v. Hartwell, 35 Fla. 606; State v. Jordan, 36 Fla. 1. See also Watkins v. Inge, 24 Kan. 612 (under statute); Bennett v. Darling, 15 S. Dak. 1; Hotson v. Wetherby, 88 Wis. 324.

Omission of County in Which Land Is Situated.—The failure to state the county in which the land is situated does not invalidate the deed where in another part of the deed the land is properly and accurately described. Roth v. Gabbert, 123 Mo. 21; Haynes v. Heller, 12 Kan. 381. And the omission of the county is immaterial where the section, township, and range are given. Keeper v. Force, 86 Ind. 81.

must correspond substantially with that employed in the antecedent proceedings, as in the assessment, advertisement, decree, order of sale, etc.,¹ and if the description in the antecedent proceedings is insufficient the deed is bad though the description therein is sufficient.²

Sufficiently Certain to Permit Location. — The description must be sufficiently certain to permit a location of the land by a surveyor.³

Error as to One of Two Lots. — An error in the description of one tract of land cannot be held to invalidate the deed as to another tract properly described.⁴

Where No Boundaries Are Given, or merely the amount of land is specified, without more to fix its limits, the description is not sufficient.⁵

bb. DESIGNATION AS PART OF LARGER TRACT. — A description designating the land merely as a part of a larger tract, without any greater certainty as to the identity of the particular part conveyed, is not sufficient.⁶

An Undivided Interest in land is sufficiently designated as the undivided interest in the particular tract specifically described.⁷

cc. COMMON NAME OR ABBREVIATIONS. — The property may be described by the name by which it is commonly known, identifying it generally, as by its location without giving metes and bounds,⁸ or by the use of familiar abbreviations.⁹

Alder of Description. — In Mississippi a description of land as a specified number of acres of the north, east, or west part of a particular legal subdivision is good, and where the assessment roll furnishes a clue which, when followed by the aid of other testimony, conducts certainly to the land intended, such testimony is admissible. See Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Le Blanc, 74 Miss. 650; Herring v. Moses, 71 Miss. 620; Dodds v. Marx, 63 Miss. 443; Bowers v. Chambers, 53 Miss. 359; McCready v. Lansdale, 58 Miss. 877; Enochs v. Miller, 60 Miss. 19; Tierney v. Brown, 65 Miss. 563, 7 Am. St. Rep. 679. See also Taylor v. Wright, 121 Ill. 455.

Location by the Purchaser has been permitted in Pennsylvania where the treasurer's deed found the quantity, but not the location, of a part of the tract. Coxe v. Blanden, 1 Watts (Pa.) 533, 26 Am. Dec. 83; McCord v. Bergautz, 7 Watts (Pa.) 490.

7. Undivided Interest. — Anderson v. Hancock, 61 Cal. 88.

dd. PAROL EVIDENCE. — Parol evidence is not admissible to make good a fatally defective description.¹

Latent Ambiguities. — On the other hand, it is held that latent ambiguities may be corrected by evidence.² But the principle, it has been said, should be confined to parties to the instrument and those claiming in privity.³

Description Inherently Insufficient. — And even where evidence of extrinsic facts is admissible to identify the premises, a description which is inherently insufficient cannot be made sufficient by proof of facts to show what was intended to be conveyed.⁴

5. What Law Governs. — Tax deeds and the validity thereof must be governed by the law in force at the time of the sale.⁵

6. Effect — a. AS COLOR OF TITLE — (1) In General. — A tax deed is color of title, and will support a claim by adverse possession under the various statutes of limitations, even though the tax proceedings themselves are defective;⁶ but in such case it is only color of title, and will not support certain abbreviations were considered to be sufficient under the statute and others insufficient.

Parol Evidence Admissible to Explain. — Barton v. Anderson, 104 Ind. 578.

1. Parol Evidence Inadmissible. — People v. Mahoney, 55 Cal. 286; Keane v. Cannovan, 21 Cal. 302, 82 Am. Dec. 738; Roberts v. Deeds, 57 Iowa 320; Orono v. Veazie, 61 Me. 431; Bowers v. Andrews, 52 Miss. 596; McGuire v. Stevens, 42 Miss. 724, 2 Am. Rep. 649; Curtis v. Brown County, 22 Wis. 167.

The Admissibility of the Description in the Assessment Roll to identify the property does not authorize parol testimony to fix an uncertain description upon a parcel of land not described in the assessment roll or otherwise indicated by any fact or circumstance which may lead to its identification. Hughes v. Thomas, (Miss. 1900) 29 So. Rep. 74.

Statute Making Recital Conclusive. — Roberts v. Fargo First Nat. Bank, 8 N. Dak. 504.

2. Latent Ambiguities Corrected by Evidence. — Stewart v. Colter, 31 Minn. 385; Selden v. Coffee, 55 Miss. 41; Brown v. Walker, 11 Mo. App. 226; Marsh v. Nelson, 101 Pa. St. 51; Jenkins v. Sharpf, 27 Wis. 472; Macklem v. Blake, 19 Wis. 397. See also Roberts v. Deeds, 57 Iowa 323.

Deeds Between Individuals Have Been Distinguished from tax deeds in that in the case of a sale for taxes no question of intention on the part of the owner can arise. Hence a more accurate description is required in conveyances under sales for taxes, which cannot be aided by intentment. Tallman v. White, 2 N. Y. 66. See also Dike v. Lewis, 4 Den. (N. Y.) 237; Griffin v. Creppin, 60 Me 270; Greene v. Lunt, 58 Me. 519; Nelson v. Brodhack, 44 Mo. 596, 100 Am. Dec. 328; Harber v. Dyches, (Tex. 1890) 14 S. W. Rep. 580. But see Bosworth v. Danzien, 25 Cal. 296; Thompson v. Ela, 60 N. H. 562.

In other cases, however, the distinction is disregarded to the extent that a description which can be made to identify the land by proper extrinsic evidence is alike admissible in either case. See Cornelius v. Dunn, 17 Pa. Co. Ct. 566; Lochte v. Austin, 69 Miss. 271; Murphy v. Williams, (Tex. Civ. App. 1900) 56 S. W. Rep. 695.

And under statute in Wisconsin the question of uncertainty in the description is to be determined by the same rules as are applicable to ordinary conveyances between grantor and grantee. Mendota Club v. Anderson, 101 Wis. 479; Mecklem v. Blake, 19 Wis. 397. And evidence aliunde is admissible. Meade v. Gilfoyle, 64 Wis. 18.

ejectment even against a trespasser where the action is not one merely to try the right of possession.¹

Time from Which Operative. — The deed operates as color of title only from its date or actual execution, and not from the date of the sale.²

A Mere Sale of land for nonpayment of taxes has been held not to constitute color of title.³

A Tax Certificate does not constitute color of title, since to have that effect the instrument must purport on its face to convey title.⁴

A Quitclaim Deed from the grantee in a tax deed⁵ or tax lease,⁶ or from a purchaser at a sale under a judgment for taxes,⁷ is color of title.

(2) Void Deed. — According to the weight of authority a tax deed may constitute color of title though void on its face,⁸ though upon this point the authorities are not uniform and in some jurisdictions it is held otherwise.⁹

(3) Under Curative Statutes.—Some statutes limiting the period within which a tax conveyance may be assailed on account of irregularities in the proceedings are in the nature of statutes of limitation, and not merely curative.¹ But on the other hand it is held that where the special statute is invoked against an attack upon a tax title the possession must be under such a deed and proceedings as the special statute contemplates, and that a void deed will not operate as color of title so as to make the statute available.²

(4) Good Faith.—One claiming under a tax deed as color of title must have acquired his title in good faith,³ which means only that the property should not have been acquired mala fide.⁴ But good faith may be evidenced by the payment of taxes for the statutory period,⁵ and will be presumed in the absence of evidence to the contrary; and such presumption is not overcome by the mere fact that the title was originally bad by reason of some defect in the proceedings.⁶

b. AS EVIDENCE—(1) In General.—In the absence of statute a tax deed is not evidence, even prima facie, of a compliance with the law in respect of the antecedent steps necessary to be taken in the tax proceedings, and one claiming under such a deed has the burden of showing by evidence the legality of the sale and the regularity of the proceedings.⁷ So the recitals of a tax deed are not conclusive evidence of the facts therein stated, as, for example, that the sale was in fact made at the time and place appointed,¹ and the deed itself is not admissible in evidence when not accompanied with evidence of the essentials of its validity or when not shown to have been made in pursuance of lawful authority.² Thus, notice, judgment, and precept must be shown,³ and the judgment recited in the deed must correspond to that read in evidence.⁴

Jurisdictional Defects may be shown by the owner,³ even under statutes making the deed conclusive evidence in other respects.⁴

Unconstitutional Statute Declaring Deed to Be Conclusive Evidence. — If a statute declaring a deed to be conclusive evidence in certain particulars is unconstitutional and void the deed is not even prima facie evidence, and those things as to which the statute attempted to make the deed conclusive evidence must then be proved.⁵

After a Long Lapse of Time, and especially where the owner has acquiesced during such period, the courts will indulge a presumption in favor of the validity of the tax proceedings.⁶

Statutes Constitutional. — Statutes making the tax deed prima facie evidence have been uniformly upheld as constitutional.²

Quitclaim Deed from Grantee in Tax Deed. — The tax deed being prima facie evidence of a good title, a quitclaim deed from the grantee therein vests the same kind of a title.³

66. EFFECT OVERCOME BY EVIDENCE. — It is, of course, entirely competent to introduce evidence to rebut the prima facie character of the deed, and when evidence, sufficient for this purpose, is introduced the burden is thrown upon the party claiming under it to sustain it by proof as at common law.⁴

(b) Conclusive Evidence — as. IN GENERAL. — Some of the statutes go even further than those making the tax deeds prima facie evidence, and provide that such a deed shall be conclusive evidence of its recitals⁵ or of the regularity of the sale and certain of the proceedings leading thereto.⁶

Deed Vesting Perfect Title. — And so though the statute provide that the tax deed shall vest a perfect or unassailable title, it is held that defects which are jurisdictional and vital may be shown.³

(bb) Curative or Limitation Statutes. — Such statutes are also sustained where the conclusive effect is given to the deed after the expiration of a certain period for redemption, whether the statute be considered as a statute of limitations or in the nature of a rule of property.⁴ And in this connection it is held that the legislature is competent to declare what part of the tax pro-

When Whole Statute Falls. — Where a clause providing a means of testing the validity of the title prior to the time when the deed should become conclusive was unconstitutional and void, it was held that the whole statute must

ceedings shall or shall not be essential to the validity of the sale or deed, and therefore may provide that after the execution of the deed it shall not be invalidated for any defect or irregularities in such proceedings in case the land was subject to the taxes levied upon it and they were not paid.¹

(cc) As Against Purchaser. — As against the purchaser it is competent for the legislature to make the deed conclusive proof of the facts therein stated; and independently of such a statute the purchaser would be concluded by such recitals by way of estoppel.²

Deed Void on Its Face. — So where the statute makes a tax deed conclusive as to its recitals, if the deed shows a sale not authorized by law, it is void on its face, and the party claiming under it is concluded and can acquire no rights thereunder.³

(e) Construction and Application of Statutes — aa. STRICT CONSTRUCTION. — Statutes making tax deeds evidence of title or of particular facts or recitals are strictly construed,⁴ and the evidential character will not attach to deeds for taxes or assessments under special laws or under municipal charters without proof of authority to sell or of the validity of the proceedings.⁵

Statutes Characterizing Estate. — A statute providing that a tax deed shall vest a title in fee simple merely characterizes the estate, and does not make the deed evidence of the validity of the sale.⁶

bb. CONFINED TO PARTICULAR PROCEEDINGS AND RECITALS. — Proof of Other Facts Necessary. — A statute designating those things as to which a tax deed shall be taken as evidence, either prima facie or conclusive, cannot be extended so as to obviate the necessity of proving other and essential facts.⁷

Recitals Not Made Evidence. — The recital of facts of which the deed is not made evidence by the statute will not make the deed evidence of such facts.⁸

Proceedings Antecedent to Sale. — In some states the statutory prima facie validity of tax deeds relates to the conduct of the sale itself, and not to the antecedent proceedings.⁹

Proceedings Subsequent to Sale. — The statutory force of a tax deed as prima facie evidence of the regularity of a sale does not extend to the steps required to be taken subsequently to complete the title,¹ as the giving of notice by the purchaser of the expiration of the period of redemption, etc.;² and a later statute requiring such acts does not come within the purview of an earlier statute which made the deed evidence of the regularity of the tax proceedings.³

CC. OMISSION OF RECITAL AND MISRECITAL — PAROL EVIDENCE. — Void Deed. — A statute which gives to a tax deed some character as evidence does not obviate the necessity of following the requirements of the law, and if recitals to show authority are omitted or for any other cause the deed is void on its face it is not admissible as evidence;⁴ and parol evidence will not be admitted to give life to it.⁵

Deed Not Absolutely Void. — On the other hand, if the defect renders the deed voidable merely, and not absolutely void, it is not for that reason inadmissible.⁶

Proof of Omitted Recital. — If a tax deed does not contain the proper recitals of the necessary facts it is not prima facie evidence without supplemental evidence of the facts omitted,⁷ and if there are sufficient recitals to admit the deed in evidence an omission of other recitals may be supplied.¹

dd. DEED FROM STATE. — Under the Mississippi statute making an auditor's deed prima facie evidence of paramount title, the deed is made such evidence only in aid of a particular title made by the state, and one claiming under such deed must point out the title which the state claimed to own and to transfer to him,² and must show a sale for taxes to the state.³ And in Florida it is held that such a statute does not apply to a sale to the state and a deed thereafter by the state to a purchaser from it.⁴

ee. APPLICATION OF STATUTE TO DEED EXECUTED. — A statute changing the effect of a deed as evidence is held to be a rule of evidence, and therefore to apply to a deed made before its passage.⁵

IV. NATURE OF TITLE ACQUIRED — 1. In General — Until Execution of Deed. — The general rule is that until the expiration of the time for redemption and the execution and delivery of a deed the title to land sold for taxes remains with the original owner, and the purchaser acquires only a lien for the amount of his bid, with interest, penalties, etc.;⁶ and if the sale is void the purchaser thereat, or one who procures an assignment from the state, takes a certificate of purchase or assignment subject to the right of the state under the statute to proceed again, upon refundment, to enforce the collection of a prior tax.⁷

2. After Execution of Deed or Perfection of Title—a. IN GENERAL.—Since the tax deed is generally held to attach to the land itself, and it devolves upon all persons in any way interested to see that the taxes are paid, the grantee is vested, under the statutes in most jurisdictions, with an interest in fee to the exclusion of all prior interests and incumbrances.⁴

purchaser is inceptive only, the title of the owner not being fully divested until the expiration of a statutory period after the sale, notwithstanding the execution of a deed, the title in the purchaser is not retroactive.¹

b. EFFECT AS TO PRIOR TAXES. — If the state sells for the taxes of a particular year it cannot proceed for the taxes of a previous year after the title is perfected under the first sale.²

c. INTEREST OF OWNER AT TIME OF ASSESSMENT OR SALE. — Under some statutory provisions the purchaser takes merely such interest in the land as was vested in the delinquent at the time of the sale,³ or at the commencement or at any time during the year for which the taxes were assessed.⁴ But it has been held that such a provision refers to the character of the title merely, as whether it be a fee simple or a lesser estate, and not to liens, and does not mean that the land is purchased subject to liens thereon at the time of the assessment.⁵

d. SEPARATE INTERESTS TAXED SEPARATELY. — Where different interests or estates are made separate and distinct subjects of taxation, the collection or mode of collecting a tax assessed upon the one has no effect upon the other, and the owner of one interest is not divested thereof by the sale of the other interest for the nonpayment of taxes thereon.⁶

e. SUBJECT TO REDEMPTION. — In some jurisdictions, in the case of infancy of the owner or other disability, the estate of the purchaser is subject to be defeated by redemption notwithstanding the execution of a deed.⁷

f. DEEDS TO DIFFERENT PERSONS FOR TAXES OF DIFFERENT YEARS. — Where deeds to the same land are executed to different persons for the taxes of different years, the deed last executed for the taxes of the latest year tax-title claimant must enforce the rights under his purchase by proceeding to recover the land ¹ or by foreclosing his tax lien.²

When Statute Begins to Run. — These statutes begin to run variously from the execution of the deed or from the time when the claimant is entitled to a deed,³ from the sale,⁴ from the time when the deed is recorded,⁵ or from the time when the claimant takes possession, as by providing a period of adverse possession.⁶

b. WHEN STATUTE DOES NOT OPERATE — (1) In General. — The special limitation which the statute makes to cover particular sales will apply to none other.⁷

(2) Suits to Quiet Title. — Provisions limiting the time for bringing actions to recover the land have been held to be inapplicable to equitable suits to quiet title.⁸ Thus, prescription of a particular time to sue for the land will not preclude the tax-title claimant from suing to quiet his title and thus cutting off the owner's right to sue for the land before the statute has run;¹ and the tax-title claimant in possession may sue to quiet his title after the expiration of the statutory period has barred the original owner, in which suit the owner is precluded by the statutory bar as effectually as if he were plaintiff in an action to recover the land.²

(3) Void or Vitally Defective Proceedings—(a) In General.—As a rule, these statutes reach only those defects which do not go to the absence of authority to sell or convey. They do not operate to cure jurisdictional defects or to validate titles which are void for want of power to sell the property, as where there was no assessment, levy, or sale, where the land was not subject to taxation, or where the taxes had been paid before the sale;³ and defects which go to the fraud of the parties are not within their operation.⁴ In a few jurisdictions, however, the statutes cure even fundamental objections⁵ and seem to stop short of nothing less than the entire want of authority ab initio of the taxing officers to put the taxing power into motion.⁶

(b) Deed Void on Its Face. — In many jurisdictions the statute will not run in favor of the grantee though he is in the actual possession of the premises, if the deed is void on its face.¹

(c) Purchase by One Not Authorized to Purchase. — The statutes do not run against the original owner in favor of one who by reason of his relation to the owner was precluded from acquiring the tax title,² at least until the discovery of the fraud in the purchase.³

c. STATUTES OPERATING AGAINST EITHER PARTY OUT OF POSSESSION — (1) In General. — The limitation provided often operates upon the remedy of both parties, as well to cut off that of the grantee in the tax deed as that of the original owner, it devolving on the party out of possession to bring his action within the time prescribed by the statute.⁴

(2) Sufficient Occupancy — (a) In General. — The occupancy which will set the statute in motion and keep it running in favor of the party in possession need not be a continued possession by the same person.⁵

(b) Constructive Possession. — Where the premises are not in actual possession of either party a valid tax deed gives to the grantee constructive possession and starts the statute to run against the owner,¹ or prevents it from running against an action by the tax-title claimant.²

Where the Deed Is Void on Its Face and the grantee is not in actual possession the deed will not give to him constructive possession, and the statute of limitations runs against him and not against the original owner.³

d. RETROSPECTIVE STATUTES.—A statute of the character under discussion may be retrospective and operate upon sales prior to its passage,⁴ but as to existing causes of action a reasonable time must be allowed for instituting suit,⁵ and if the whole time allowed by the statute had expired before its passage the statute does not apply until the time allowed by it has run.⁶ On the other hand, where an absolute title becomes vested in the tax purchaser by reason of the expiration of the statutory period of limitation, such right cannot be subsequently impaired.⁷

such a clause will not protect the grantee of such person¹ or extend the time within which the tax-title claimant must act;² and where the tax law makes no exception of persons under disability such a person is not saved from the operation of the statute limiting the time within which to bring an action for land sold for taxes, and a general statute permitting a person under disability to sue within a certain time after the disability is removed does not apply.³

VI. RIGHTS OF PURCHASERS OF DEFECTIVE TITLES — 1. Avoiding Liability for Future Taxes. — One who fails to acquire title under a tax deed may deny his ownership of the land as a defense to an action to recover taxes from him; he is not estopped by his previous acceptance and recording of the deed.⁴

b. UNDER STATUTORY AUTHORITY — (i) Purchase Price, Subsequent Taxes, Etc. — (a) In General. — In many jurisdictions a purchaser of an invalid tax title is protected by statutes providing for repayment to him of the amount of the purchase money, or of the purchase money and all subsequent taxes, with interest, etc., and making such charges a lien or subrogating the purchaser to the lien of the taxing power.⁶ The right of an individual to recover and the extent of his recovery will, of course, depend upon the par-

Thus, under the various enactments, reimbursement for taxes paid subsequent to the tax sale is restricted to bona fide occupants;¹ the rate of interest recoverable is provided;² the liability is confined to one under duty to pay at the time of the sale;³ and the purchaser must show his purchase⁴ and what taxes are properly chargeable.⁵

As to Personal Liability the statutory provisions vary; but where the purchaser is subrogated to the lien of the taxing power the reimbursement is enforced by foreclosing the lien, and the legal owner is not personally liable.⁶

Removal of Cloud. — So when the legal owner sues to set aside the tax deed and remove from his title the cloud created by it, he will be required to reimburse the purchaser for the purchase price, subsequent taxes paid, etc., as a condition to relief.³ As to the sufficiency of tender without payment into court the cases are not in accord.⁴ But there is no obligation to refund or tender taxes or assessments which were void ab initio,⁵ or taxes paid prior to those for which the land was sold.⁶

chaser is in possession under color of title.¹ Under the Kansas statutes it has been held that there may be a recovery even though the tax deed is void on its face.² In other jurisdictions, however, a deed which is void on its face carries no right to recover for improvements.³

Time of Improvements. — The right is usually confined to the recovery of such improvements as were made after the party acquired his color of title or after accrual of title or execution of a deed,⁴ and, it has been held, before suit brought.⁵

Possession Required. — The purchaser must have had full and actual possession at the time when the improvements were made; he may not enter upon land in possession of another and make improvements and claim compensation therefor;⁶ and his entry must have been attended with the formalities prescribed by the statute.⁷

Liability for Rents and Profits. — The tax-title claimant is chargeable with rents and profits⁸ accruing pending his action to quiet his title,⁹ but not with such as accrue after a judgment awarding the repayment of taxes to him and giving possession to him until such payment is made.¹⁰ to the same vehicle for drawing."¹ But the courts give the word a broader and more extensive meaning than that given in the dictionaries.²

TEAM WORK. See note 5.

TECHNICAL. See note 6.

TEG. See note 7.

1. Team. — Webst. Dict., followed in Inman v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 60 Iowa 462.

2. Finnin v. Malloy, 33 N. Y. Super. Ct. 382, quoted in the title EXEMPTIONS (FROM EXECUTION), vol. 12, p. 129.

Unharnessed and Loose. — In a statute allowing damages for injury happening, by reason of an insufficient highway, to any person, team, or carriage, the term team has been held to include a horse driven with other horses unharnessed and loose along the road. Elliott v. Lisbon, 57 N. H. 27.

And construing the same statute it was said in Conway v. Jefferson, 46 N. H. 523: "We have no doubt that the legislature intended to include in the term team, in the first section, the animal or animals that drew or carried the load, whether one or many, or that were driven over the highway, whether in harness or otherwise."

Conveyance for Carriage of Goods or of Persons. — A Connecticut statute provided that when "any vehicle of the above description [that is, any vehicle for the conveyance of persons] shall meet or overtake a team in the public highway and shall have occasion to pass the same, the teamster shall," etc. It was contended for the plaintiff that the term team, as used in the statute, included and described a vehicle driven by the plaintiff and not designed for nor carrying any load. The court, while admitting that ordinarily a team would include such a vehicle, held that in the statute in question the term meant a vehicle, with the animals drawing it, used for carrying loads, as distinguished from one used for carrying persons. Hotchkiss v. Hoy, 41 Conn. 568.

In Rowell v. Crothers, 75 Conn. 126, it was said: "The substituted complaint describes the vehicle driven by the defendant, and that in which the plaintiff was driving, as 'a wagon.' They are also referred to in the complaint as teams. Since either of these words may as properly be used to designate a vehicle for the carriage of goods as one for the conveyance of persons, neither of them nor both of them constitute a sufficiently specific description of the vehicle named in the statute to entitle the plaintiff to a judgment for treble damages." The statute under construction in that case was one enacting the law of the road for vehicles for conveyance of persons.

Driver No Part of Team. — Dexter v. Canton Toll-Bridge Co., 79 Me. 563, citing Webst. Dict. That case was upon a statute providing that a person should not be entitled to recover damages for the injuries sustained by the breaking down of a tollbridge if the weight he was transporting "exceeded forty-five hundred pounds, exclusive of the team and carriage." It was held that the driver formed no part of the team.

Exemption of "Team" from Execution. — See the title EXEMPTIONS (FROM EXECUTION), vol. 12, pp. 128, 129.

Machinery. — In an action for negligence under an allegation that defective machinery was used, the plaintiff attempted to show that a team used by the defendant was unable to perform the work for which it was used. The court said: "The respondent's counsel contended that if this team was unable to lift the bent by hauling at the rope, the allegation of the use of defective machinery was made out. We are unable to concur in this view. A team is in no sense machinery, any more than a man would be hauling at the same rope."

McPherson v. Pacific Bridge Co., 20 Oregon 490.

Team Embraces Idea of Live Stock. — In Inman v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 60 Iowa 461, the court said: "Whilst it may be admitted that the term 'stock' does not embrace the idea of a team, it cannot, nevertheless, be denied that the term team embraces the idea of live stock. The word team means two or more horses, oxen, or other beasts, harnessed together to the same vehicle for driving. A team, therefore, is composed of live stock, and cannot exist without it. It would be exceedingly technical to hold that two horses, when harnessed and hitched together to a wagon, cease to fall under the designation of live stock."

Livery-stable Keeper. — A livery-stable keeper has been held not to be a teamster. Edgcomb v. His Creditors, 19 Nev. 156.

5. Team Work. — A lessee's covenant in an agricultural lease to provide team work extends to other than agricultural work — e. g., hauling coals; but it does not oblige him to find a cart, plough, or other machine that may be necessary for performance of the work. Marlborough v. Osborn, 5 B. & S. 67, 117 E. C. L. 67.

I. DEFINITIONS. — A Telegraph is an apparatus or machine used to transmit intelligence to a distant point by means of electricity.¹ The word, as now

1. Telegraph Defined. — Chesapeake, etc., Cas. 213. See also Atty.-Gen. v. Edison Telephone Co. v. Baltimore, etc., Tel. Co., 66 Md. 399, 59 Am. Rep. 167, 16 Am. & Eng. Corp. "An instrument or apparatus which by generally understood, refers to the entire system of appliances used for transmitting messages by electric ticking machines.¹

A Telegram is a message or dispatch transmitted by the telegraph,² but the term may, under some circumstances, embrace a telephone message.³

The Term Telephone, in a general sense, applies to any instrument or apparatus which transmits sound beyond the limits of ordinary audibility. Technically it is restricted to an instrument or device which transmits the voice of the speaker by means of electric appliances.⁴

"Telegraph" Includes "Telephone." — As a rule, statutes or ordinances concerning telegraphs will be construed as embracing telephones as well, unless there is something in the context to indicate a contrary legislative intent.⁵ This may be true even though the telephone was not known when the statute in question was passed.⁶ The rule has been applied to statutes forbidding discrimination,⁷ to statutes fixing the locality of suits against telegraph means of iron wires, conducting the electric fluid, conveys intelligence to any given distance with the velocity of lightning." Webster's Dict.

Telegraph Line or System, as used in ordinary statutes, will not embrace a distinct telegraph system. See Toledo v. Western Union Tel. Co., (C. C. A.) 107 Fed. Rep. 10.

1. Term Includes System of Appliances. — The system consists of: "1st, a battery or other source of electric power; 2d, a line wire or conductor for conveying the electric current from one station to another; 3d, the apparatus for transmitting, interrupting, and, if necessary, reversing, the electric current at pleasure; and 4th, the indicator or signalling instrument. See Imperial Dict." Hockett v. State, 105 Ind. 250, 55 Am. Rep. 210, 11 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 577.

2. Cent. Dict.

3. Telephone Message Considered a "Telegram." — Atty.-Gen. v. Edison Telephone Co., 6 Q. B. D. 244, 29 Moak 602.

4. Telephone Defined. — Hockett v. State, 105 Ind. 250, 55 Am. Rep. 210, 11 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 577.

What the Term Includes. — In Western Union Tel. Co. v. American Bell Telephone Co., 105 Fed. Rep. 696, it was said that, according to the course of business, the term "telephone" refers only to the instrument itself "apart from wires, batteries, call bells, switch boards, and other apparatus and appliances with which it is connected in its practical and commercial use."

But as used in a statute limiting the rate which may be charged for a telephone, the term was held to include not merely the single instrument technically known as a "telephone," but also the organized apparatus, or combination, of instruments, usually in use in transmitting, as well as in receiving, telephonic messages. Hockett v. State, 105 Ind. 250, 55 Am. Rep. 210, 11 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 577; Central Union Telephone Co. v. Bradbury, 106 Ind. 1; Central Union Telephone Co. v. State, 118 Ind. 206, 10 Am. St. Rep. 114. But compare Chesapeake, etc., Telephone Co. v. Manning, 186 U. S. 218.

companies,¹ to statutes relating to taxation,² and to those providing for the incorporation of such companies.³ A different rule obtains, however, when, from the circumstances or character of the legislation, it is clear that the intention was otherwise, as in the case of the Act of Congress giving telegraph companies a right to occupy post roads; that act does not embrace telephone companies.⁴

II. LEGAL STATUS — 1. As Public Use. — The telegraph is such a public use as to justify the exercise of the right of eminent domain in its behalf; the same is true of the telephone, where it is not wholly a private affair, the use of which is denied to the public.⁵

The Business Is One Affected with a "Public Interest" within the meaning of the rule authorizing the regulation, by the state, of the conduct of the business.⁶

An Individual May Own and Operate a telephone line; statutes conferring the right upon corporations are not exclusive.⁷

2. As Common Carriers. — Various theories have been propounded as to the extent to which telegraph and telephone companies are analogous to common carriers. Like common carriers, they are bound to serve the public without discrimination⁸ and cannot evade liability for the consequences of their negligence by any contract.⁹ But the analogy goes no further. They are not, like common carriers, insurers.¹⁰

3. Franchise Is Public and May Not Be Transferred. — Any agreement by such a company to alienate or transfer the privileges granted it by the government is ultra vires and void.¹¹

Are Like Carriers of Passengers. — "Although there may be no analogy between the business of telegraph companies and that of public carriers of passengers for hire, yet we regard their legal status as practically the same. Both are engaged in a business of a public nature. Both must serve all who come. Neither are insurers nor liable as such, but both are liable for negligence." Gillis v. Western Union Tel. Co., 61 Vt. 465, 15 Am. St. Rep. 917, 25 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 568. See also Fowler v. Western Union Tel. Co., 80 Me. 381, 6 Am. St. Rep. 211.

Mechanics' Liens. — A telegraph company is an important public agency and an instrument of commerce, and is within the rule of the United States courts giving a lien, superior to the mortgage lien, to those who furnish labor or materials to operate a railroad or similar public utility. Keelyn v. Carolina Mut. Telephone, etc., Co., 90 Fed. Rep. 29. See generally the title MECHANICS' LIENS, vol. 20, p. 255.

11. Franchise Not Transferable. — U. S. v. Western Union Tel. Co., 50 Fed. Rep. 28; U. S. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 160 U. S. 1; U. S. v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 120 Fed. Rep. 546. See the titles CORPORATIONS, vol. 7, p. 750; ELECTRIC-LIGHT COMPANIES, vol. 10, p. 868. Compare Hatch v. American Union Tel. Co., (Supm. Ct. Spec. T.) 9 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 223; Reiff v. Western Union Tel. Co., 49 N. Y. Super. Ct. 441. See also Benedict v. Western Union Tel. Co., (Supm. Ct. Spec. T.) 9 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 214, holding that an agreement entered into by a telegraph company with a similar company to divide earnings and expenses is neither ultra vires nor against public policy.

U. S. Rev. Stat., § 5266, Prohibits the Transfer of any of the privileges granted by the federal statute authorizing the occupation of post roads by telegraph companies.

4. Character of Telegraph Property. — Telegraph property is usually regarded as real estate,¹ but the wires and instruments may retain their character as personality, although made a part of the company's plant, as between mortgagor and mortgagee where there is a contractual provision to that effect.²

III. RIGHT OF WAY 1. Federal Grants of Right of Way — a. ACT OF 1866. — By an early Act of Congress, and supplementary legislation, a right of way over the public lands and all military and post roads of the United States was granted to all telegraph companies complying with the conditions therein prescribed.³ Similar statutes define what shall be post roads, and within the term are included all railroads over which mails are carried,⁴ and all letter-carrier or free-delivery routes.⁵ This legislation was enacted under the congressional power to establish post offices and post roads and to regulate interstate commerce, and no doubts have ever been entertained as to its constitutionality. Within the scope embraced by its provisions it supersedes all state legislation on the same subject.⁶

Conditions Must Be Complied With. — No company acquires any rights under the statute until it has filed with the postmaster-general its written acceptance of all the conditions therein imposed.⁷

Lease of Franchise. — The rule of the text prevents such companies from leasing their franchises, though it has been held that the company may lease its lines and equipments for a reasonable length of time. See Philadelphia v. Western Union Tel. Co., 11 Phila. (Pa.) 327, 33 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 129. See also Western Tel. Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 69 Md. 211.

Sale and Transfer of Franchise Held Valid. — See Michigan Telephone Co. v. St. Joseph, 121 Mich. 502, 80 Am. St. Rep. 520, wherein the court pointed out that if the right to sell a transfer does not exist, mortgages and bonds executed by the company are valueless; Badger Telephone Co. v. Wolf River Telephone Co., (Wis. 1904) 97 N. W. Rep. 907 (under statute).

Transferee Takes Property Subject to All Duties of Vendor. — An ordinance granting to a telephone company the right to occupy the city streets stipulated that in the event of a sale by the company of its properties, its vendee should be bound by all the obligations imposed on the original company. Such a sale took place afterwards, and for some time after the sale the purchasing company gave the subscribers of the purchased company connections with its own subscribers. It was held that the purchasing company, having bought with notice, was bound to assume and carry out all the obligations of the old company; and that its action in furnishing the old company's subscribers with connections to its own lines operated as an acknowledgment by it of the character of its assumed obligations and that it could not thereafter discontinue such connections. Mahan v. Michigan Telephone Co., (Mich. 1903) 93 N. W. Rep. 629.

1. Regarded as Real Estate. — See Keating Implement, etc., Co. v. Marshall Electric Light, etc., Co., 74 Tex. 605. Compare St. Paul, etc., R. Co. v. Western Union Tel. Co., (C. C. A.) 118 Fed. Rep. 497.

"Lines of Telegraph." — Receiver's certificates issued by the receiver of a telegraph company by an order of the court, and made a lien upon all the company's "lines of telegraph," are a lien upon wires strung by a workman but grounded by him so as not to be usable as telegraph lines, and such lien is superior to that of the workman. Postal Tel. Cable Co. v. Vane, (C. C. A.) 80 Fed. Rep. 961.

In Indian Territory. — The Act of March 3, 1901, c. 832, providing for grants to telegraph companies of franchises in the Indian Territory necessarily annulled all previous conflicting grants made by any of the Indian nations. Muskogee Nat. Telephone Co. v. Hall, (C. C. A.) 118 Fed. Rep. 382, disapproving Muskogee Nat. Telephone Co. v. Hall, (Indian Ter. 1901) 64 S. W. Rep. 600.

By Act of Congress of March 3, 1901 (31 U. S. Stat. L. 1084) the secretary of the interior is given full authority to grant rights of way to telegraph lines in the territory, and no lines may be constructed there without authority from him. *Muskogee Nat. b. SCOPE AND EFFECT OF ACT. — The statute is permissive only.¹ While it may operate to prevent the state or any of its municipalities from an arbitrary or absolute exclusion of a telegraph company which had complied with its provisions from any post road,² it does not affect the right of the state or its agencies to regulate the use of streets and highways by such companies.³

Does Not Interfere with the Right to Compensation. — The right of an owner of abutting property to compensation for the occupation of the highway in front of his premises by a telegraph company, either because the telegraph line is an additional burden upon the fee or because it materially interferes with his easement of access or his enjoyment of the highway, is not affected in any way by the Act of Congress.⁴ Nor does the act affect the right of a railroad company to compensation where part of its right of-way is taken for a telegraph line; the act is permissive merely, and leaves the question of compensation in such cases to be determined by the law of the state where the property taken lies.⁵ Where, however, the railroad company's right of way is one acquired by congressional grants subsequent to the act, the grants must be considered as made and accepted subject to the provisions of the act giving telegraph companies the right to occupy and use such right of way without compensation, and this right on the part of the telegraph company may be enforced in equity.⁶

The Act Does Not Undertake to Provide for Compulsory Proceedings to secure a right of way for telegraph companies over private property either of individuals or of railroad companies, and resort must be had entirely to the laws of the state where the property lies for such proceedings.⁷ Nor can a federal court of equity, under that statute and its general equity powers, use its injunction process so as to effect an equitable condemnation of an easement of right of way over a railroad along which it had constructed its line under a contract with a prior owner of the railroad whose ownership had been terminated by the foreclosure of a mortgage existing prior to the contract.⁸

The Act Does Not Affect the Liability of the Telegraph Company for Damages resulting from its negligence in the transmission or delivery of messages.⁹

The Act Embraces Telegraph Companies Only and not telephone companies,¹⁰ nor does it extend to the installation, by a regularly organized telegraph company, of a district telegraph system for the collection and distribution of telegraph messages and for the operation of call boxes, watchman and police signals, and the like.¹

c. TO SUBSIDIZED RAILROADS OPERATING TELEGRAPH LINES. — By early Acts of Congress, supplemented by later legislation, the various subsidized railroad companies, known generally as the Pacific railroads, were granted rights of way over the public domain² and were required to construct and operate telegraph lines along their various routes under special provisions with regard to the telegraphic service to be furnished to the government and the public.³

2. State Grants. — By statute, in most of the states, telegraph and telephone companies are given the right to construct their lines over the public highways,⁴ and in a number of states provision is made for their using the right of way of railroad companies. Statutes of the latter class, while they are subordinate to the Act of Congress⁵ on the same subject, may nevertheless be resorted to for the condemnation of a right of way along railroads when necessary.⁶

The Term "Highways" Embraces City Streets, within the meaning of statutes conferring upon telegraph or telephone companies the right to occupy the public highways of the state unless a different intent is clearly indicated.⁷ The term will also embrace a turnpike,⁸ but not a railroad or its right of way.⁹

3. Municipal Grants — a. IN GENERAL. — The extent of a municipality's power to grant or to refuse to a telegraph or telephone company the right to occupy the streets and highways within its limits must depend upon the provisions of its charter and of the legislation in force in the state. As a general rule, such companies are given by statute the right to occupy all streets and highways, but it is made the right and duty of each municipality to fix the terms and conditions upon which its own streets may be used.¹⁰ Where this is true, the municipality cannot, either by refusing to name the conditions or by imposing unreasonable restrictions or conditions, defeat the grant of the right given by statute.¹ If the statutory grant is unconditional, the municipality is without power to impose any conditions, and its officers cannot interfere with the company in its proper exercise of the privilege granted.² But even though the municipality may be without power to impose conditions, having merely the power to consent to or refuse consent, if it annexes conditions to its assent and these are acquiesced in by the company and the streets are occupied by it under that arrangement, it cannot afterwards repudiate the conditions.³

A Provision that the Consent of the Municipality Shall Be First Obtained is mandatory, and a company can acquire no right to occupy the streets until such consent has been obtained.⁴ And the same rule obtains when the city grants the right of occupancy upon condition that a permit be first obtained from the commissioner of public works.⁵

b. RIGHT OF MUNICIPALITY TO EXACT COMPENSATION. — When the charter of the municipality or the laws of the state vest the entire control over streets in the municipality where they lie,⁶ the municipal authorities may compel a telegraph or telephone company to pay a reasonable compensation, in the nature of rent, for the use of the streets.⁷ While the passage of an ordinance fixing the charge per annum for each pole at a specified amount creates a presumption that such an amount is a reasonable charge, it is not conclusive, and the company may show that the amount is unreasonable when compared with the average rentals of adjoining property.¹

Termination of Franchise to Occupy Streets. — There is no power in a municipality, by indirection or otherwise, arbitrarily to declare a forfeiture of the company's right to occupy its streets,² nor, upon the expiration of the right by lapse of the stipulated period, to remove the company's lines arbitrarily and without notice.³ But it may enjoin the company from replacing its lines in the streets after the expiration of the franchise to occupy them,⁴ or it may revoke, for just cause, a franchise not expired.⁵ And it has been held that where the company's right to occupy streets is, as a matter of law, unsettled, the company cannot have a preliminary injunction to restrain the removal of the poles by the city.⁶

4. In Streets and Highways — a. IN GENERAL. — The right to construct a telegraph or telephone line along and upon a street or highway must be derived from an express grant of authority. It cannot exist by implication merely.⁷ The power to grant such authority rests in Congress as to such highways as are post roads;⁸ as to all other highways, including city streets, the power rests ultimately in the legislature of the state by virtue of its inherent right of control over all streets and highways.⁹ The power of the legislature, however, may be and frequently is delegated to municipalities as to streets within their territorial limits.¹⁰

The Necessity of the Abutting Owner's Consent to such a use of the street, when not regulated by statute, depends generally upon the nature of the municipality's title to the street, and the view of the jurisdiction as to whether this use amounts to an additional servitude.¹¹

b. AS ADDITIONAL SERVITUDE. — A telegraph or telephone line consisting of wires strung upon poles, constructed along and over a street or highway, constitutes a new use thereof and an additional servitude, entitling the owner of the fee to compensation.¹² If such a line materially interferes with an abutting owner's easement of access to his property or of passage over the street, he is entitled to damages therefor without regard to the ownership of the fee.¹ Statutes granting such companies a right of way over streets and highways are not to be construed as authorizing an occupation of the streets by the telegraph company without compensation to the owners of abutting property.² They operate merely to protect the company from indictment for maintaining a public nuisance.³

The Ownership of the Fee Is Material, and an abutting owner cannot complain when the fee is in the public unless he can show some specific material injury to his easement of access and passage.⁴

The Measure of Damages recoverable by an abutting owner who retains the fee is the extent to which the rental and salable value of his property has been diminished, or the difference in the value of the property before and after the construction of the line.⁵

Remedy of Abutting Owner. — When the occupation of the highway by a telegraph or telephone company is by authority of law, the line is not a nuisance,¹ and the remedy of an abutting owner who retains the fee of the highway is in an action to recover compensation for the added servitude, or, when his easement of access is interfered with, in an action for damages. In the former case he may maintain ejectment,² but, as in case of other quasi-public utilities, the company will be allowed an opportunity to perfect its right of occupancy by instituting condemnation proceedings. In the latter case he may have an injunction against the continued impairment of his easement where it is due to the improper construction of the line and is unnecessary to its proper operation.³

c. UNAUTHORIZED USE OF STREETS MAY BE ENJOINED. — Where the use of the streets of a city by a telegraph or telephone company is without authority, either because of the particular mode of use adopted by the company or because of an utter lack of authority to occupy the streets, injunction will lie to restrain such further use. The injunction may issue at the suit of the city⁴ or of the owner of abutting property who is affected by the unauthorized use,⁵ but not at the suit of a rival company.⁶ The rule prevails whether the occupation of the streets was never authorized or has ceased to be lawful because of the valid withdrawal of an original authority.⁷

5. Over Private Lands — a. BY AGREEMENT WITH OWNER. — The right of way over private property may be acquired by agreement of the owner. If an agreement with the landowner cannot be obtained, resort must be had to the local statutes authorizing the right of condemnation.⁸

b. BY CONDEMNATION. — In practically all of the states statutes exist providing for the acquisition by the power of eminent domain of private property for public uses, and these statutes embrace, either expressly or by implication, the purposes of telegraph and telephone companies.¹ The general rules applicable in this connection with respect to the conditions precedent to the right to condemn, the nature of the right and the procedure to be adopted, are those governing condemnations generally, subject only to the modifications which the inherent character of the structures under consideration demand.²

The Interest Acquired in such cases is a mere easement of right of way, and the original owner of the land is not deprived of the use of it except in so far as such use is inconsistent with the rights of the company.³

6. On Railroad Right of Way—a. BY CONTRACT WITH RAILROAD COMPANY. — A telegraph company may acquire, by contract with a railroad company, a right to occupy part of the latter's right of way, though it cannot acquire any exclusive rights.⁴ The principal questions arising in this connection are as to the construction and effect of such agreements in particular cases.⁵

Contract for Joint Operation — Effect — Termination. — A contract between a railroad and a telegraph company for the joint construction of a telegraph line along the railroad right of way, the line to be used by the railroad in its business and by the telegraph company for public service, makes the telegraph company a joint owner of the personalty merely,⁶ and the agreement may be terminated at any time by either party on reasonable notice.⁷

Telegraph Line an Additional Servitude. — A telegraph or telephone line upon the right of way of a railroad company is, generally, an additional burden, for which the original owner of the land, if he retains the fee, is entitled to compensation;¹ but where the line is constructed by the railroad company, in good faith, for its own use, and is reasonably necessary for its operation,² there is no additional servitude, but merely a legitimate development of the easement originally acquired.³ A telegraph line is also regarded as subjecting the easement of a railroad company to an additional servitude, and the company is entitled to compensation therefor under the constitutional provisions against the taking of private property without compensation.⁴

6. BY CONDEMNATION. — The rule has long been recognized that property already devoted to a public use may be condemned for another and different public use under authority from the state.⁵ And this rule is applied to condemnation, for the purposes of a telegraph line, of a railroad's right of way, either under general eminent domain statutes (it being considered that the construction and use of a telegraph line do not interfere materially with use of a right of way for railroad purposes) or under special acts providing for such condemnation.⁶ Such a condemnation cannot be defeated by showing that a right of way for the telegraph line may be secured over a public highway near or adjacent to the railroad or over other property in other ways.¹

A Foreign Corporation cannot, in general, exercise the right of eminent domain;² but a local corporation may do so, although it is a branch of a company incorporated in another state, and is subordinate and auxiliary thereto.³

What Portion of Right of Way May Be Taken. — Where the right to condemn is conferred upon the telegraph company, the power to select so much of the right of way as may be necessary for its telephone lines is conferred by implication, subject to the limitation that its selection must not essentially interfere with the operation of the railroad.⁴

The Measure of Damages allowed in such cases is merely the decrease in the value of the right of way for railroad purposes, and this, in the absence of special circumstances, is so slight as to justify the allowance of nothing more than practically nominal damages.⁵

7. Exclusive Rights. — The Act of Congress giving telegraph companies the right to occupy all post roads⁶ prevents the acquisition by any such company of an exclusive right on any such road, either by contract with a railroad company⁷

In Louisiana, the amount allowed the railroad company has been fixed at the sum which it originally cost to clear eight feet (that being the width of the cross-arms on the telegraph line) of the right of way, plus the sum which would yield an annual interest sufficient to keep that portion of the right of way clear. or by state legislation.¹ This is true whether the post road is over a part of the public domain or over private property acquired by condemnation.²

When Not Prohibited by Statute such an agreement for exclusive privileges has been held not contrary to public policy nor to be in restraint of trade, and it may be enforced.³

Even in the United States a contract by a railroad company with a telegraph company for exclusive rights is not void, in so far as it merely excludes competitors from the line of poles erected and used by the telegraph company.⁴

In Constraining Municipal Grants to one telephone or telegraph company, the courts lean to that construction which will tend to prevent the exclusion of new companies.⁵

Contests Between Rival Companies. — The courts will not readily interfere, at the instigation of one company occupying streets, to prevent their use by another company.⁶ A company which itself occupies the streets of a city under a void ordinance or without right cannot enjoin a rival company from erecting its line within the city.⁷

8. Vested Rights. — When an ordinance of a city which it had power to enact has designated the streets which a telegraph or telephone company may use, and fixed the conditions of such use, the company's acceptance of its terms and conditions by acting upon them and expending money in the construction of its lines in conformity with them constitutes a contract the obligation of which the city cannot impair by adding new conditions unless the right to do so was expressly reserved.⁸ But a municipality may, under its

IV. LIABILITY FOR INJURIES CAUSED BY IMPROPER LOCATION OR CONSTRUCTION — 1. Injuries to Persons Using Highway. — A telegraph or telephone company must exercise reasonable care not only in the original location and construction of its lines, but in their maintenance and in its general use of the highway, to prevent injuries to persons using the highway, and it is responsible for all injuries which result from a breach of this duty.⁴

Negligence on the Part of the Company Is the Basis of Such Actions, and there can be no recovery in the absence of proof of it.¹ But the fact that one of the company's wires crossing a highway was allowed to swing so low as to obstruct ordinary travel is sufficient evidence of negligence, if unexplained, to warrant a recovery by a traveler who is injured through coming in contact with it.²

The Contributory Negligence of the Plaintiff is, as in other cases of negligence, a defense.³

Improper Location Authorized by Municipality. — The fact that the company's poles were located in the highway under the supervision of the municipal authorities does not relieve it from liability to one who, while using the highway, is injured in consequence of a pole being so located as to be dangerous to such persons.⁴

3. Interference of Other Electrical Appliances. — The general subject of the interference of electric light and street railway systems with the telephone through conduction and induction is considered elsewhere.²

4. Injuries Caused by Wire Conducting Electricity into Building. — In placing wires for conducting electricity into a house, a telephone company owes the persons living there the exercise of reasonable care, proportioned to the known dangers of the conditions, to prevent the wires acting as conductors of lightning into the building, and it is liable for damage resulting from neglect to provide against this danger; especially is it liable where damage from lightning occurs through its failure to remove its wires when the person living in the house has ceased to subscribe for a telephone.³

5. Injuries to Trees of Abutting Owner. — The liability of a telegraph or telephone company for injury to the trees of an abutting owner is discussed elsewhere.⁴

V. STATUTORY PROTECTION OF TELEGRAPH AND TELEPHONE LINES. — Injury to the poles and wires of telegraph and telephone lines has been made the subject of penal legislation in a number of the states.⁶ Independently of these statutes, any person or corporation wilfully interfering with or destroying such lines may be held liable for trespass, as in other cases of destruction of private property.⁷

VI. REGULATION AND CONTROL — 1. By Federal Government — a. IN GENERAL. — The fact that a telegraph company whose lines extend into several states is an instrument of interstate commerce, subjects it to regulation by

b. TELEGRAPH LINES OVER SUBSIDIZED RAILROADS. — By virtue of the express provisions in the various statutes of the United States granting rights of way and subsidies to the Pacific railroads, and especially the reservation in such statutes of the right to "repeal, alter, or amend," Congress has power to regulate the exercise by such companies of the telegraph franchises granted them; and since those franchises are expressly declared to be "inalienable" by the grantees, this power of regulation extends to any telegraph company exercising those franchises under an agreement with the railroad company.²

The Railroad Company Cannot Evade the Requirements of the Statutes by any arrangement with a telegraph company.³

The Government May Compel the Railroads so to operate their respective lines as to afford equal facilities to all, without discrimination in favor of any person or corporation, and to receive and exchange business with connecting lines.⁴

2. By State — a. EXTENT OF POWER. — Under its inherent police power a state may, for public safety and convenience, regulate the management of the property of a telegraph or telephone company and provide for the proper conduct of the company's business.⁵

Instances of Its Exercise. — The state may regulate the manner in which the company's lines shall be constructed and maintained over highways,⁶ and, where reasonably necessary, require them to be placed underground;⁷ it may provide that an office once established shall not be discontinued without the consent of the state, and in such a case the fact that the office has ceased to become a paying one and can be kept open only at a loss will be no defense to the company for a violation of the statute;⁸ it may prescribe the rate to be charged for all messages sent from one point in the state to another, provided the rate fixed is not so low as to amount to a taking of the company's property;¹ may provide against discrimination;² and may exercise such other general control and supervision as the public interests may require.³ A telegraph company is no exception to the rule that the state may require all foreign corporations to comply with certain conditions with respect to the filing of charters or providing an agent upon whom process may be served, as a condition precedent to their doing business in the state.⁴

The State May Restrict the Company's Power to Limit Its Liability by declaring invalid stipulations in the contract of sending in so far as such stipulations operate to relieve the company from liability for negligence.⁵

b. DELEGATION OF POWER. — The State May Delegate to Municipalities the general power to regulate the construction and maintenance of telegraph or telephone lines within their corporate limits, and this power is embraced in the delegation of a general power of police control over streets.⁶

Power of Regulation Delegated to Board of Commissioners. — It is within the power of the state to create a board of commissioners which shall be vested with the right to exercise for the state its power of regulation, and such an arrangement exists in a number of the states.⁷

c. REGULATION OF CHARGES. — Both telegraph and telephone companies are engaged in a "business affected with a public interest" within the meaning of the rule laid down in a leading case,⁸ and the state, in the exercise of its police power, may therefore regulate the charges of such companies and provide a maximum rate which their charges shall not exceed.⁹

A Violation of Rates Lawfully Established is not excused by showing that the message was sent partly over the line of another company, a part of the defendant's line being occupied with work for a railroad company; for the telegraph company cannot prefer one customer

The Fact that Telephone Lines Are Operated under Patents granted by the general government in no way affects the power of the state in this regard.¹

The Company Cannot, by Indirection, Evade the statute fixing or regulating its charges.²

As to Interstate Messages, the state is without power to regulate charges. Such messages are interstate commerce, and the charges therefor are subject to regulation by Congress alone.³

The Rate Fixed by Law Must Not Be Unreasonable. — If it appears that the maximum rate allowed 's less than the actual cost of service, the regulation is unconstitutional as denying to the company the equal protection of the law.⁴

3. Municipal Regulation. — When the municipality has been vested with authority to regulate and control the use of its streets by telegraph or telephone companies, it may make and enforce all such reasonable regulations as will tend to protect the public in the free enjoyment of the streets.⁵ It may prescribe the exact location of the poles,⁶ may require that they shall be of such size and character as not to endanger persons using the streets, and that they shall not be unsightly.⁷ Where conditions are such as reasonably to warrant their removal entirely, the city may compel the company to dispense with their use and to place its wires underground.⁸ But power to regulate the ' mode of use ' of streets by such companies does not empower a municipality to regulate the rentals or charges to the company's patrons;⁹ nor does it authorize the municipal authorities to impose unreasonable restrictions or conditions as to the manner in which streets shall be used.¹⁰

The Municipality Cannot Regulate the Charges of telegraph or telephone companies in the absence of express legislative authority. Such a power is not embraced within the general police powers of a city.¹¹

11. Regulation of Charges Not Within General

The Municipality May Provide for an Inspection of the company's lines within its limits and require it to pay, annually, a sum reasonably sufficient to cover the cost of such inspection by a municipal officer.¹

VII. DUTY TO FURNISH EQUAL FACILITIES TO ALL — 1. Telegraph Companies.

— Such companies are so far common carriers that they are under a legal obligation to serve with impartiality all who apply to them offering compliance with their reasonable regulations.² They must, except when the circumstances justify a different practice, transmit messages in the order in which they are received.³ In a number of states, this latter duty is declared by statute.⁴

Discrimination as to Char. vs. — It is a violation of its duty as a public service corporation for a telegraph company to discriminate unjustly in the matter of charges, and in the absence of national legislation on the subject the principles of the common law or the general jurisprudence of the state are applicable and may be asserted and enforced even as to charges for interstate business.⁵ In this class of cases, as in those involving charges by railroads and similar corporations,⁶ it is not all discrimination that is unjust or unlawful, and the question as to whether a telegraph company has violated its duty by granting a lower rate to one patron than that exacted of another is to be determined from the facts and the general nature of the service involved.⁷

2. Telephone Companies. — a. IN GENERAL. — Telephone companies, whether corporations or not, are affected with a public interest,⁸ and are bound to serve impartially and without unjust discrimination all who apply for their service and offer compliance with their reasonable regulations.⁹ In many of the states statutes exist which provide for the recognition and enforcement of these obligations, but it seems that these are merely declaratory of the common law on the subject.¹

The Company May Refuse to Furnish Facilities, however, to one who does not offer to pay its proper charges;² but the fact that an applicant had violated a former contract with the company is no ground for its refusing his application, the company's remedy for that being an action for the breach of contract.³ The company may also refuse its facilities to one who violates its reasonable regulations with regard to the use of its instruments.⁴

An Injunction is the remedy where the complainant is already supplied with facilities and the company is threatening to deprive him of them.²

Action for Damages for Wrongful Discontinuance of Service. — If the service is wrongfully discontinued, the subscriber is entitled to recover such damages as were the direct result of the wrong.³ The measure of damages in such a case, where there is no wilful wrong and the discontinuance is due to an honest mistake on the company's part, and no special damages are shown, is the price of the service during the time it was discontinued, calculated on the basis of the regular monthly charge.⁴ Special damages are also recoverable when proven.⁵

VIII. TRANSMISSION AND DELIVERY OF MESSAGES — 1. General Nature of Liability — a. TELEGRAPH COMPANIES. — Telegraph companies have been held to be common carriers in all respects, and therefore to be insurers of the correctness of messages offered for transmission.⁶ This view, however, is now universally abandoned, and it is established that telegraph companies are not insurers of the correctness of messages transmitted nor of their safe and correct delivery; their liability is limited to losses caused by their negligence or wilful default.⁷

Are Not Ordinary Bailees for Hire. — The proposition has been advanced that telegraph companies are ordinary bailees for hire, and therefore governed by the rules which control the duties and liabilities of such bailees. But the public nature of such companies, whose duties and liabilities do not arise wholly out of the contract of employment, renders the proposition untenable.¹

b. TELEPHONE COMPANIES. — A telephone company does not ordinarily undertake to deliver messages; but where the agents of the company have apparent authority to receive messages for delivery, and they undertake delivery, the company is liable in damages for their negligence in performing the undertaking, and in determining whether they have apparent authority, their general practice, as well as the nature of the service, is to be considered.²

Messenger for Person Wanted at Telephone. — By the construction of an Indiana statute, it has been held to be the duty of telephone companies in that state to notify a person living within a reasonable distance of the receiving station that he is wanted at the telephone.³

Furnishing Connections. — A long-distance telephone company holding itself out as furnishing connections with a distant point is liable for damages resulting from a failure to secure connection by reason of the negligence of its agent at an intermediate point at which its own line ends.⁴

2. Telegraph Company's Duty — a. FROM WHAT SOURCE IT ARISES. — The duty and obligations of a telegraph company do not arise entirely out of the contract of sending. The company is a quasi-public institution enjoying unusual grants and privileges from the state and federal governments, and cannot claim that the standard of its duty and liability is the same as that of a private individual. The contract of sending gives force and effect to the duties which the law imposes upon such companies, but it does not, alone, fix the measure of the company's duty.⁵

b. TO ACCEPT FOR TRANSMISSION. — The duty of the company is to accept for transmission all proper messages tendered by persons who comply or offer to comply with its reasonable rules and regulations.¹

If the Company's Lines Are Down, or for any other reason it cannot transmit the message, it may decline to accept it, but if it accepts the message, knowing the condition of its lines and without informing the sender, it is responsible for a failure to transmit, even though the transmission was impossible.²

Delivery to the Company for Transmission. — No duty or liability on the part of the company with respect to a message arises until it has been properly tendered at the company's office for transmission. It must be in writing and in conformity with the reasonable rules and regulations of the company.³ Merely to tell the operator to send a certain message, without more, is no such tender.⁴ But the fact that the message was not on one of the company's regular blanks, nor in writing at all, but was merely telephoned to the operator, will not affect the company's liability where the negligence complained of is a failure to deliver after transmission.⁵

Delivery of a Message to the Company's Messenger Boy under an express stipulation that in so receiving messages he shall be deemed the sender's agent is no delivery to the company unless the message is subsequently delivered by the messenger at the company's office.⁶

c. TO TRANSMIT WITHOUT DELAY. — Upon the receipt of a message tendered for transmission, it is the duty of the company to transmit it without delay, and a negligent failure to do so renders it liable in damages to the party thereby injured.⁷ This does not mean, however, that there must be an immediate transmission. If causes beyond the company's control, or the arrangement of its system of offices, prevent a direct transmission, the company is not guilty of a neglect of duty in adopting a circuitous route for the message;⁸ and if it is necessary that the message pass through a repeating office, a reasonable allowance must be made in the company's favor for the delay caused by other business at that office.¹

At Small Stations the company is not bound to keep more than one operator, and if a slight delay occurs owing to the absence of the operator at his meals, the company cannot be held guilty of a negligent delay if the message is forwarded immediately on his return to the office.² But this is true only as to offices where the business is not large enough to justify the employment of more than one operator; if the business of the station is so large as to make it clear that one operator cannot properly attend to it, the company will not be allowed to set up the inadequacy of its means of transmission as an excuse for delay.³

Duty to Inform Sender When Delay Is Unavoidable. — Where, from any cause, it is impossible to transmit the message, or where considerable delay will be necessary, and the operator is aware of the fact when the message is offered him, it is his duty to inform the sender, particularly when the message shows on its face the necessity or importance of its being speedily transmitted.⁴

Delay as Creating Presumption of Negligence. — A delay of ten or twelve hours in transmission, if unexplained, will create a presumption of negligence on the part of the company.⁵

d. TO TRANSMIT CORRECTLY. — A telegraph company, not being an insurer, is responsible for errors in transmission only when they are a result of its want of care.⁶ But the mere fact of an error creates a presumption of negligence.⁷

e. TO DELIVER TO ADDRESSEE — (1) In General. — Subject to reasonable regulations as to delivery limits, the company is bound to make delivery of all messages sufficiently addressed, when this can be done by the exercise of reasonable diligence. It cannot escape this duty by showing that the business of its office at the receiving station is not sufficient to justify the employment of an additional agent to make delivery.⁸

Duty to Notify Sender of Nondelivery. — When the company ascertains that a delivery cannot be made, it is not, as a matter of law, bound to notify the sender of that fact; whether it was under a duty to do so depends upon whether ordinary care under all circumstances would have required such a notification.⁹

(2) To Whom Delivery Must Be Made. — The message must be delivered to the addressee or to his authorized agent.¹ Under ordinary circumstances a delivery to the wife of the addressee is sufficient when he himself cannot be reached.² The clerk of a hotel, it has been held, has an implied authority to receive and receipt for messages addressed to the guests of the hotel, and a delivery to him of such a message will discharge the company of further responsibility in the absence of circumstances which clearly call for a different course.³

Delivery to One Having Same Name as Addressee. — Whether or not a delivery to a person of the same name as the addressee is sufficient to discharge the company must depend upon the accompanying circumstances, and is usually, therefore, a question for the jury. It cannot be said that such a delivery, without proof of facts justifying it, is good as a matter of law.⁴

Message Directed to Addressee "Care of" Third Party. — The better rule is that in the case of a message so directed a delivery to the person in whose care it is sent is sufficient,⁵ and will discharge the company from further responsibility even though such person declines to receive it.⁶ When, however, the person in whose care the message is addressed cannot be found, it is the duty of the company to make an effort to find the addressee, and it will be liable for a 6. When Person in Whose Care Addressed Refuses to Receive Message. — Western Union Tel. Co. v. Thompson, (Tex. Civ. App. 1895) 31 S. W. Rep. 318. But in Hinson v. Postal Tel. Cable Co., 132 N. Car. 460, it is held that where the message is sent "care of" the addressee's employer, and the latter declines to receive it, it is the duty of the company to use reasonable diligence to find the addressee himself, and, failing in that, to wire back for a better address.

failure to deliver when it appears that he was within the delivery limits and his residence is a matter of common knowledge in the locality.¹

Special Arrangements Between the Operator and the Third Party under which delivery to certain persons, or in a peculiar way, is sufficient as to messages addressed to such third party are not operative as to messages sent to one in "care of" the latter, and the company's duty must be determined without regard to such arrangements.² But such special arrangements are binding upon both the addressee and the sender if made with either, with respect to messages between them.³

(3) Manner of Delivery. — The addressee is entitled to a written copy of the message and the company does not fully discharge its duty by communicating the contents of the message over the telephone.⁴ The addressee may, however, waive this duty and accept such method of delivery,⁵ but his waiver will apply only to messages addressed to him and not to those sent to another in his care.⁶

(4) Duty to Forward Messages. — The company is under no obligations to forward messages when the addressee has removed his residence to another locality, but it may assume this duty by contracting to forward all messages received by it for him. Such an agreement is binding on the company for a reasonable time only.⁷ What is a reasonable time in such cases is ordinarily a question for the jury.⁸

A Mere Verbal instruction to the Company's Messenger Boy, by the addressee, to deliver messages received during certain hours, at a particular place, will not bind the company and renders the messenger the addressee's agent; to bind the company an instruction to this effect must be in writing and addressed to it.⁹

(5) Time of Delivery — Delay — In General. — The delivery must be made as

In Western Union Tel. Co. v. Hendricks, 26 Tex. Civ. App. 366, it is held that when the company has been paid the extra charge for delivery beyond the free limits and payment of any additional charges has been guaranteed, the operator at the receiving station, knowing that the message is important and that the addressee is temporarily in another city (where the company had an office), is under a duty to send it to him there, and for his failure to attempt to send it there the company is liable.

8. But the company is not liable for failing to forward a message to an absent addressee where it exercises due diligence to make personal delivery and the operator is not aware of his temporary address, although the messenger boy in charge of the message might easily have learned where the addressee was if he had inquired at any of the places where he attempted to make delivery. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Redinger, (Tex. Civ. App. 1901) 63 S. W. Rep. 156.

soon after transmission as is reasonably practicable;¹ the duty of early delivery is as imperative as that of prompt transmission.² A peculiar duty with respect to the time of delivery arises when there are two messages, both relating to the same subject, sent at different times not far apart, and a delivery of the later one first will mislead the addressee.³

(6) Free Delivery Limits.—The company may, by regulation, fix for each station limits beyond which it shall not be bound to make free delivery of messages.⁴ The reasonableness of any particular limit must depend upon circumstances, the size of the town or city being the chief element to be considered.⁵ In some jurisdictions the limits are fixed by statute.⁶ The company may also require that for a delivery beyond the free delivery limits a special charge must be paid, and that, in the absence of such payment, it will be under no obligation to make the delivery.⁷ Of the existence of such a rule it should promptly inform the sender, when the addressee lives beyond such limits, and its failure to do so is evidence of negligence.⁸

When the Addressee Resides Several Miles from the Receiving Office the company is under no duty to deliver to him there in the absence of a special contract to do so and the payment of the necessary charges.⁹ But the mere fact that the addressee's home is far from the office does not excuse the company from its duty to exercise reasonable diligence to deliver to him within the free delivery limits.¹⁰

10. Rosser v. Western Union Tel. Co., 130 N. Car. 251; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Davis, 30 Tex. Civ. App. 590.

When the agent at the receiving station notifies the addressee by mail and also asks the extra charges to be guaranteed by the sender,

The Company May Waive Its Requirement of an Extra Charge for delivery beyond the free limits, and when it appears that, without demanding the charge, it specially undertook to deliver, it will be liable for a nondelivery even though the addressee lived beyond the free delivery limits.¹ A waiver of the rule as to nondelivery beyond such limits will, it seems, be presumed from a long continued failure to enforce it.²

A Custom or Regulation of the Company under which the operator at the destination must notify the sending office of any necessary special charges in order that the sender may pay or guarantee them, may be shown in evidence as a part of the contract of sending.³ So also, when prepayment of the extra charge for delivery beyond the free limits is not required, but the custom is to collect such charge from the addressee, the failure to prepay such charges will constitute no defense to the company.⁴

The Regulation Requiring Prepayment of Special Charges will be strictly construed against the company.⁵

No Delivery Limits Fixed. — In the absence of proof as to free delivery limits it will be assumed that the company undertook to make free delivery to all persons living within a reasonable distance of such office; what is a reasonable distance, in such a case, is ordinarily a question for the jury under all the circumstances proven.⁶

(7) What Constitutes Due Diligence. — What constitutes due diligence in the effort to make prompt delivery of messages is a question to be determined from all the facts and circumstances in each case, and is usually for the jury.⁷

f. MESSAGE TO PASSENGER "CARE OF" CARRIER. — A common carrier, as such, owes no duty to a passenger to receive and deliver telegrams directed to him, and in the absence of evidence showing an undertaking or custom on its part to that effect, or that it knew or permitted its agents or servants to do so, it is not liable for a failure on the part of one of its agents to deliver to a passenger a telegram directed to the passenger in the care of the carrier and accepted by the agent for delivery.⁸

3. Negligence of Company — a. IN GENERAL. — Any failure on the part of the company to exercise ordinary care to effect a prompt and correct transmission and a prompt delivery to the proper party constitutes negligence. What is ordinary care is to be determined from the character of the company's duty in the premises,⁹ and from all the facts and circumstances in evidence.

the agent is not liable for refusing to give the message to a neighbor who offers to deliver it without charge. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Swearing, 95 Tex. 420, reversing (Tex. Civ. App. 1901) 65 S. W. Rep. 1080.

In Western Union Tel. Co. v. Womack, 9 Tex. Civ. App. 607, it appeared that the agent had for years been in the habit of sending messages to persons beyond the free limits by volunteers, without charge, and undertook to do so in plaintiff's case. It was held that the company was liable for a failure to deliver, notwithstanding the stipulation exempting it from liability in such a case.

9. See infra, this title, Transmission and Delivery of Messages.

A distinction is made between "gross" negligence and "ordinary" negligence in the law governing the liability of telegraph companies in determining the extent to which stipulations in the contract of sending will relieve the company from liability.¹

6. PRESUMPTION OF NEGLIGENCE — BURDEN OF PROOF. — Here, as elsewhere, the plaintiff must make out a prima facie case of negligence,² and this duty is discharged when facts are shown which raise a presumption of negligence.³ That certain facts raise a presumption of negligence as against telegraph companies, in apparent exception to the general rule that the fact of injury merely is no evidence of negligence,⁴ has been placed on the ground that such companies are engaged in a public employment which requires a high degree of technical skill and the causes of mistakes and errors are peculiarly within their knowledge.⁵

Proof of an Unreasonable Delay in Delivery or of a failure to deliver creates a presumption of negligence on the part of the company and casts upon it the burden of showing exculpatory facts or circumstances.⁶

Proof of an Error in Transmission that is material likewise creates a presumption that it was due to the company's negligence and will justify a recovery in the absence of proof by the company excusing the error.⁷

When Gross Negligence, Misconduct, or Fraud is necessary in order to render the company liable, owing to the stipulations in the contract of sending, it has been held that mere proof of an error in transmission or of a delay in delivery is not enough to shift the burden upon the company.¹

The Presumption Thus Arising Is Not Conclusive, and where the evidence, when considered in a light most favorable to the company, would warrant a finding in its favor, it is error to take the question from the jury and to declare the company guilty of negligence as a matter of law.²

Payment of Charges. — The plaintiff is not bound to prove a payment or tender of the charges; if there is a showing that he engaged the company's services and that it undertook to transmit the message, the duty of the company is sufficiently shown, and if the nonpayment of charges affords it a defense it must prove the nonpayment.³

The Failure to Comply with a Regulation or Stipulation is a matter of defense and the burden of proving it is on the company.⁴

4. Contributory Negligence — a. IN GENERAL. — The general principles of the law of contributory negligence apply in the class of cases under consideration here.⁵ It is not necessary for the defendant to show that the plaintiff's contributory negligence was the direct or sole cause of the loss; if it "proximately contributed" to cause the loss, it will bar recovery.⁶

b. FORM OR ADDRESS OF MESSAGE NEGLIGENTLY WRITTEN. — The message as offered to the company for transmission must be written legibly; the company cannot be held liable when the mistake in transmission was due to the indistinct or uncertain writing of the sender.⁷ The address of the per-

An Error in Name of Addressee or Sender, made in the course of transmission, creates a presumption of negligence. See Western Union Tel. Co. v. Ragland, (Tex. Civ. App. 1901) 61 S. W. Rep. 421; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Boots, 10 Tex. Civ. App. 540; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Norris, 25 Tex. Civ. App. 43; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Reeves, 8 Tex. Civ. App. 37. Connecting Lines. — In La Grange v. Southwestern Tel. Co., 25 La. Ann. 383, the defendant company contended that it was not the first carrier and that plaintiff had failed to prove that the error had occurred on its line, and showed an express provision in its printed blanks that it would not be liable for errors occurring on connecting lines. It was held that the burden of proof was nevertheless on it to show that the error did not occur on its line, since such proof was easily within its power to make.

See also Western Union Tel. Co. v. Scircle, 103 Ind. 227, 10 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 611. Compare Smith v. Western Union Tel. Co., 57 Mo. App. 259.

son to whom the message is sent must be definitely given; the company cannot be required to make extended searches in large cities in order to find the addressee.¹ But such negligence on the part of the addressee will not relieve the company of its duty to exercise what is ordinary care under the circumstances, and it will be liable if it appears that the addressee might have been easily found despite the insufficient address.²

Where There Are Two Towns of the Same Name in the state, and the operator is informed, at the time the message is offered for transmission, which one of the two is meant, the company cannot excuse its failure to deliver by averring an insufficient address.³

Where the Operator Writes Out the Message for the sender, at the latter's request, he acts, in so doing, as the sender's agent and not as agent of the company, and if a mistake is occasioned through his writing it incorrectly it is chargeable to the sender as contributory negligence and not to the company.⁴

c. SENDER'S FAILURE TO STAMP MESSAGE. — When the Revenue Act of Congress required all messages to be stamped, it was the duty of the sender and not of the company to stamp the message, and the company could not be made liable either for damages or for the statutory penalty for refusing to accept for transmission an unstamped message.⁵

d. SENDER'S DELAY IN STARTING MESSAGE. — The company cannot excuse a negligent delay on its part by contending that the sender should have started the message earlier instead of waiting until the last minute.⁶ But this fact may be considered in determining whether the company's negligence was the proximate cause of the loss, and the plaintiff may fail to recover even though a case of neglect is made out against the company.⁷

e. PLAINTIFF'S DUTY TO AVOID OR TO MINIMIZE DAMAGES. — The party who is affected by the negligence of the company must exercise reasonable diligence to avert or to minimize the harmful consequences of the company's neglect, and damages which might have been prevented by the exercise of ordinary care form no ground of recovery.⁸

Where Two Messages Are Sent in Succession, One Revoking the Other, the fact that the messages do not on their face show which was latest does not excuse the company in an action for damages resulting from the delivery of the second message first. Hocker v. Western Union Tel. Co., (Fla. 1903) 34 So. Rep. 901.

Sender's Error in Message Harmless. — Where the message notified plaintiff that his brother was sick at S. when he was at C., the error, though made by the sender, is no defense if the addressee knew his brother was at C. and would have gone there. *Western Union Tel. 8. Consequences Which Might Have Been Avoided. — See generally the titles CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, vol. 7, p. 387; DAMAGES, vol. 8, pp. 605, 690; and the following cases:

The sender is entitled to assume that the company will do or has done its duty, and is not bound to anticipate negligence on its part¹ nor to inquire of it whether his message was correctly transmitted and delivered.² Nor is he under any duty, upon discovering that an error in transmission has occurred, to notify the company thereof immediately.³

If there are other means of communication available to the plaintiff after he becomes aware that his efforts through the defendant company are fruitless, and he knowingly neglects to avail himself of them, he cannot recover for damages which might have been prevented by the use of such other means of communication.⁴

Reasonable care is the measure of plaintiff's duty, and even though it appears that it was possible for him so to have acted as to prevent or to lessen the damages resulting from the company's negligence, he may account for his failure to do so by showing peculiar circumstances which induced his failure.⁵

Where plaintiff could only have lessened the damage and could not have prevented it entirely, his negligence will not bar his recovery, but will merely prevent his recovery for so much of the damage as he might reasonably have prevented.⁶

J. ADDRESSEE MISINTERPRETING MESSAGE. — If the message as delivered to the addressee is intelligible and not doubtful in its terms, he cannot be considered negligent in acting according to its requirements.¹ But if there is anything in the message itself or in the circumstances connected with it which would lead a man of ordinary care to suspect that an error had occurred, he is guilty of negligence if he acts upon it without first seeking further information if the opportunity is afforded.² And if the message is ambiguous, he assumes all responsibility in guessing at its intended meaning, and acting accordingly; he cannot charge the loss to the company if it turns out that his guess was wrong.³

If the Addressee Fails to Read the Message Carefully, and in consequence fails to take steps to prevent loss as he might have done, the company is not responsible for such loss as a careful reading of the message would have enabled him to prevent.⁴

If the Message, Though Correctly Transmitted, Is Vague and its meaning uncertain, the addressee must bear the loss resulting from that fact; he cannot recover damages if he fails to exert himself properly to ascertain its meaning, or if, upon ascertaining it, he does not take steps to prevent the loss complained of.⁵

5. Proximate and Remote Cause. — As in other cases where the defendant's negligence is the basis of the claim for damages,⁶ the plaintiff must show that the negligence of the defendant or some one for whose conduct it was responsible was the proximate cause of the loss complained of.⁷ Similarly, where the defense of contributory negligence of the plaintiff is relied on, it must appear that such negligence contributed proximately to cause the injury.⁸ If it appears that the injury would have been sustained even if the company had exercised due care, there can be no recovery, no matter how negligent the defendant may have been.⁹

Question for Jury. — Whether the negligence of the company was the proximate cause of the loss complained of is a question for the jury except when the facts are undisputed or but one inference is deducible from them.¹⁰

1. Acting on Unambiguous Word. — Western Union Tel. Co. v. Beals, 56 Neb. 415, 71 Am. St. Rep. 682; Tobin v. Western Union Tel. Co., 146 Pa. St. 375, 28 Am. St. Rep. 802, 39 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 565. See also Hasbrouck v. Western Union Tel. Co., 107 Iowa 160, 70 Am. St. Rep. 181.

2. Where Face of Message Should Create Doubt. — Western Union Tel. Co. v. Adair, 115 Ala. 441; Manly Mfg. Co. v. Western Union Tel. Co., 105 Ga. 235; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Neill, 57 Tex. 283, 44 Am. Rep. 589.

Where the addressee suspects that there is an error and requests the operator to wire back to the relay office to have the message verified, and this is done, he has discharged his duty and cannot be said to be guilty of contributory negligence in not having gone beyond the relay office for information. Efird v. Western Union Tel. Co., 132 N. Car. 267.

3. Hart v. Direct U. S. Cable Co., 86 N. Y. 633; De Rutte v. New York, etc., Electric Magnetic Tel. Co., 1 Daly (N. Y.) 547; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Neill, 57 Tex. 292, 44 Am. Rep. 589.

The Question in Such Cases Is Often for the Jury. — Manly Mfg. Co. v. Western Union Tel. Co., 105 Ga. 235; Hasbrouck v. Western Union Tel. Co., 107 Iowa 160, 70 Am. St. Rep. 181.

5. Davis v. Western Union Tel. Co., 46 W. Va. 48.

7. Proximate Cause. — Hendershot v. Western Union Tel. Co., 106 Iowa 529, 68 Am. St. Rep. 313; McPeck v. Western Union Tel. Co., 107 Iowa 356, 70 Am. St. Rep. 205; *Western Union Tel. Co. v. 9. See infra, this title, Measure of Damages for Negligence — Mental Anguish — Limitations of Rule.

Warning Message. — Where a warning message, directed to a man who was being pursued, was not delivered, and the addressee was killed by his pursuers, it was held that there could be no recovery, since it did not appear that the prompt delivery of the message would have saved the life. Roes v. Western Union Tel. Co., (C. C. A.) 81 Fed. Rep. 676.

10. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Morris, (C. C. A.) 83 Fed. Rep. 992; Wallingford v. Western Union Tel. Co., 60 S. Car. 201. See also the title NEGLIGENCE, vol. 21, p. 508.

6. Evidence — Wealth or Poverty of Either Party. — Evidence of the wealth of the defendant company is admissible only when there has been a wilful injury and exemplary damages are to be allowed.¹ Nor is evidence of the embarrassed financial condition of the sender of the message admissible as bearing on the question of damages for the loss of a valuable bargain in consequence of the company's negligence.²

Statements or Declarations of the Company's Agent who handled the message are inadmissible either to prove negligence or the absence of negligence, except when they are shown to be part of the res gestæ.³

Evidence that a Deduction Had Been Made from the Pay of the Operator, by one of his superior officers, is not competent for the purpose of showing negligence on the part of such operator, even though it is claimed that the deduction was made because of his negligence.⁴

Evidence as to Other Messages — As accentuating the negligence of the agent at the destination in failing to deliver a message, the plaintiff may show that he sent a message to that agent asking him to deliver the first one.⁵ The plaintiff has also been allowed to show, in an action for failure to transmit and deliver a message, that he sent another message to the same place, but to a different person, and that it was duly delivered and a reply promptly received.⁶

When the Plaintiff's Good Faith in making certain purchases in reliance upon the erroneous message is in question, he may show his understanding of the message and that he acted on the basis of that understanding.⁷

Other Cases. — Evidence of the proximity of the place of business and the residence of the plaintiff to the office to which the message was transmitted and that it could have been forwarded to him from either place in time to prevent the loss is competent.⁸ And when the company seeks to excuse a failure to deliver on the ground that the addressee was an obscure person whom the messenger could not find, he may introduce specimens of printed cards and letter heads which he had used in his business as grocer, particularly after he has testified, without objection, that he so used them.⁹ When the message was addressed to a physician and requested his professional attendance, evidence on behalf of the company that his charges had not been paid and that he did not usually make such visits without payment in advance is not admissible.¹⁰ The reported cases afford other particular instances.¹¹

IX. COMPANY'S DUTY AND LIABILITY AS AFFECTED BY REGULATIONS—

1. Right to Make and Enforce Regulations.—Like other corporations or individuals engaged in a public business, a telegraph company has the right to provide rules and regulations with which all persons desiring to engage its services must comply.¹ This right, however, is subject to the limitation that the regulations must be reasonable and may not operate to relieve the company of any obligation imposed by law or by public policy;² and they must be reasonably applied under the special circumstances of any particular case.³

2. Particular Regulations—a. AS TO OFFICE HOURS.—The company has the right to provide reasonable regulations as to the hours during which its offices shall be open for the transmission and delivery of messages.⁴ The reasonableness of the regulation with respect to any particular office must depend largely upon the character of the locality of that office, and is therefore a mixed question of law and fact.⁵ It is not necessary that all offices shall have the same hours; the practical effect of a contrary rule would be to destroy the right of regulation.⁶

for the plaintiff ordered by letter and telegram have been held to be inadmissible in an action for failure to deliver the telegram. U. S. Telegraph Co. v. Wenger, 55 Pa. St. 262, 93 Am. Dec. 751. See also Western Union Tel. Co. v. Stevenson, 128 Pa. St. 442, 15 Am. St. Rep. 687.

Evidence that a Child Was Stillborn has been held to be admissible in an action for failure to deliver a message summoning a physician to the mother, as tending to show delay and consequent increase of suffering. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Cooper, 71 Tex. 507, 10 Am. St. Rep. 772.

Questions of Law and Fact.—The reasonableness of a particular regulation is a question of law when the facts are clear and undisputed. Shepard v. Gold, etc., Tel. Co., 38 Hun (N. Y.) 338; Smith v. Gold, etc., Tel. Co., 42 Hun (N. Y.) 454. But where the facts are disputed it is a question for the jury. Heimann v. Western Union Tel. Co., 57 Wis. 562. Ten Hours a Day has been held to be a reasonable time during which to keep the office open in a town of only a few thousand people. See Western Union Tel. Co. v. Gibson, (Tex. Civ. App. 1899) 53 S. W. Rep. 712.

Postponing Delivery.—A regulation that telegrams received after seven o'clock in the evening will not be delivered until the next morning is reasonable in a town where the business is not sufficiently large to justify the employment of a special messenger. Davis v. Western Union Tel. Co., 66 S. W. Rep. 17, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 1758; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Steenbergen, 107 Ky. 469; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Crider, 107 Ky. 600.

6. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Harding, 103 Ind. 505, 10 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 617.

The Employees at One Office Are Not Bound to Know the Office Hours of All Other Offices in the country,¹ though there is authority for the view that when the company's operator accepts a message for transmission, the fact that the office at the destination had closed for the day will be no defense to an action for damages arising out of delay in transmission thereby occasioned.²

When No Definite Hours Have Been Fixed, it is a question for the jury as to what the office hours were, and evidence is admissible as to what hours had usually been observed at the office in question.³

Waiver of Regulation. — The company may not keep its office open, after its established hours, for the transaction of business for the public and then use its regulation as to office hours as a defense to an action for negligence. It is within the apparent scope of the agent's authority to extend the hours fixed for his office, particularly where notice of the established hours is not brought home to the patron.⁴

Office Hours as Affecting Company's Duty — Duty of Prompt Transmission. — If the hours established for an office are reasonable, the company is under no duty to transmit messages except during such hours, and a message offered for transmission after the close of such hours at the office of destination may be transmitted within a reasonable time after the office is open next morning.⁵

Duty of Prompt Delivery. — Similarly, where a message is transmitted to the receiving office after its regular hours, the company is not guilty of negligence, in the absence of a special undertaking, in deferring delivery until the next morning.⁶

That the Operator Has Habitually Kept the Office Open after the established hours will not deprive the company of the benefit of its regulations duly established in that office. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Georgia Cotton Co., 94 Ga. 444.

Where Message Appears on Its Face to Be Urgent, the fact that it is offered for transmission after office hours will be no defense to the company if the agent accepts it without reserve. Brown v. Western Union Tel. Co., 6 Utah 219. See also McPeck v. Western Union Tel. Co., 107 Iowa 356, 70 Am. St. Rep. 205; Bryant v. American Tel. Co., 1 Daly (N. Y.) 575; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Broesche, 72 Tex. 654, 13 Am. St. Rep. 843 [distinguished in Western Union Tel. Co. v. Neel, 86 Tex. 368, 40 Am. St. Rep. 847]; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Bruner, (Tex. 1892) 19 S. W. Rep. 149. 3. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Bryson, 25 Tex. Civ. App. 74.

4. Regulations May Be Waived. — Dowdy v. Western Union Tel. Co., 124 N. Car. 522; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Bryson, 25 Tex. Civ. App. 74; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Pierce, (Tex. Civ. App. 1902) 70 S. W. Rep. 361.

It is within the apparent scope of the agent's authority to undertake the delivery of a message after office hours, and if he does so he is bound to exercise due diligence to effect a delivery then. McPeck v. Western Union Tel. Co., 107 Iowa 356, 70 Am. St. Rep. 205.

The Failure of the Agent to Observe the Office Hours, when habitual, may be shown in evidence as indicating that no rule on the subject prevailed or was enforced; but proof merely of an occasional transmission or delivery after office hours will not be sufficient to establish a waiver of the regulations. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Crider, 107 Ky. 600; Western Union Tel. Co. v. McConnico, 27 Tex. Civ. App. 610.

There Is No Waiver of the Regulation where the operator, in accepting a message, expressly informs the sender that he does not know the office hours of the destination office, but will make an effort to effect the transmission; such an acceptance does not amount to a special undertaking to transmit without reference to office hours prevailing at the destination. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Gibson, (Tex. Civ. App. 1899) 53 S. W. Rep. 712; Western Union Tel. Co. v. McConnico, 27 Tex. Civ. App. 610. Compare Western Union Tel. Co. v. Hill, (Tex. Civ. App. 1894) 26 S. W. Rep. 252.

So a mere agreement of the agent to use his best efforts to effect immediate transmission will not render the company liable where the receiving office is closed pursuant to established office hours. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Rawls, (Tex. Civ. App. 1901) 62 S. W. Rep. 136; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Wingate, 6 Tex. Civ. App. 101.

6. Sweet v. Postal Tel., etc., Co., 22 R. I. 344, applying the rule where the receiving office was open at night for the special purpose of re-

Knowledge of Sender as to Office Hours. — The rule upheld by the weight of authority is that the sender of a message is bound by a reasonable rule fixing office hours, without regard to his knowledge of it;¹ but the contrary has been held.²

b. AS TO FORM AND SUBSTANCE OF MESSAGE. — The company may require that all messages offered for transmission shall be fully and clearly written out, without the use of numerals and in the language prevailing at the place of contract, and may refuse to accept for transmission an oral message.³ It may require that the message shall not be immoral in character or indecent in language⁴ and that it shall not be libelous.⁵

Messages Relating to Gambling Transactions. — The company may make and enforce a regulation under which it will not accept for transmission any message relating to a gambling transaction. But in refusing to transmit a message on such ground, the company acts at its peril; if it is mistaken, it is responsible for all damages resulting from its refusal.⁶

c. AS TO PREPAYMENT OF CHARGES. — The company may require that the price of every message shall be prepaid,⁷ and that a deposit to pay extra charges of delivery shall be made when the addressee lives beyond the regular free delivery limits of the office to which the message is directed.⁸

When the Message Requests an Answer, the company may require the sender to deposit an amount sufficient to pay for the answer.⁹

8. See supra, this title, Transmission and Delivery of Messages — Telegraph Company's Duty — Free Delivery Limits.

9. Hewlett v. Western Union Tel. Co., 28

A Failure to Prepay the Charges is no defense, however, to the company in an action for negligence in delivery of a message where it is not shown that the sender was informed of the rule requiring it or where the operator accepted the message without requiring the charges to be prepaid.¹ Nor will the rule requiring prepayment of charges affect the company's liability for negligence with respect to a message sent without charge on behalf of a person in the company's employ.²

d. AS TO SIGNATURE OF SENDER. — It has been held that the company cannot enforce a regulation that every message shall bear the autograph signature of the sender unless a power of attorney from him is produced.³

e. INFORMATION AS TO MEANING OF MESSAGE. — The company cannot require its patrons to inform its agents of the true import and meaning of every message offered for transmission nor forbid the use of ciphers in messages.⁴ But the failure of the sender to disclose the meaning or nature of his message will affect the damage recoverable by him in case of an error in transmission or a failure to transmit or deliver.⁵

f. REGULATIONS TO ENFORCE PAYMENT OF TOLLS. — A telephone company may make such regulations as will compel the payment of tolls due from subscribers within a reasonable time, and may enforce them by depriving the subscriber of his connections until he complies with them.⁶ That the subscriber claims that the company is indebted to him will not affect the company's right to enforce the regulation.⁷

3. Waiver of Regulations. — Any rule of the company designed for its own protection may be waived, expressly or by implication.⁸ Thus, when the operator accepts and transmits an oral message, the company cannot excuse its failure to deliver or a delay in delivery on the ground that the message was not tendered in writing.⁹ Likewise, the fact that the sender did not prepay the charges for transmission is no defense to the company when the agent accepted the message and undertook to transmit it without insisting upon prepayment.¹⁰ The agent of the company acts within the scope of his employment in accepting for transmission any message even though the rules of the company forbid his doing so, and his violation of the company's instructions cannot be available to the company as against its patrons.¹¹

Messages Received by Telephone. — Where the local officers make a practice of receiving for transmission messages telephoned to the office, and it does not appear that the company had forbidden the practice, it seems that the operator, in writing out the message, must be deemed the company's agent so as to render it liable for an error by him in transcribing. *Western Union Tel. telegraphic messages written on blanks furnished by the company and containing stipulations qualifying the company's liability for errors, failures, and delays.¹ Thus, the company may, by special contract, or by regulations brought to the sender's notice, fix reasonable limitations upon its liability, but in nearly all jurisdictions it cannot stipulate for immunity from liability for the consequences of its own negligence or that of its servants or agents.² This rule applies as well to its liability for statutory penalties as to that at common law.³ In some jurisdictions, however, the rule has been adopted that the company may, by a stipulation reasonable in other respects, exempt itself from liability to one failing to comply therewith, except for damages resulting from gross negligence or wilful default,⁴ or, as stated in other cases,

b. WHAT CONSTITUTES GROSS NEGLIGENCE INVALIDATING STIPULATION.—What constitutes gross negligence within the meaning of the rule just stated must depend upon the facts of each particular case. An error of a single word in transmission may² or may not³ amount to gross negligence according to the nature of the error and the circumstances under which it was made. But several errors in a brief message, whether of omission or commission, amount to such negligence, particularly where there is no exculpatory evidence offered by the company.⁴

The Operator's Ignorance of the Locality of a well-known town or city to which a message is directed is evidence of gross negligence.⁵ The company's operators are bound to know the locality of any station to which a message is directed.⁶

A Total Failure to Send the Message, if not explained, is of itself proof of gross negligence.⁷

An Error in the Name of the Destination for which the message was directed constitutes such negligence unless satisfactorily explained.⁸

c. CONFLICT OF LAWS.—The law of the place where the contract of sending was made, and not that of the state to which the message is sent or where the error occurred, governs the validity of the stipulation.⁹

d. STATUTORY REGULATION OF STIPULATIONS.—In a few states stipulations by telegraph companies have been made the subject of regulation by the legislature. Such regulation, in so far as it seeks to make the company responsible for errors or delays due to its negligence, seems to be within the power of the state.¹⁰

"The cases which hold that a common carrier may stipulate for immunity from liability for mere negligence all agree that they are liable for 'gross negligence.' Rep. 356. See also infra, this section, Requiring Claim for Damages to Be Filed Within Certain Time.

2. Stipulation as to Repeating Messages — a. LANGUAGE OF STIPULATION.—The blanks in common use by telegraph companies contain a printed stipulation to the effect that the company will not be liable for mistakes or delays in transmission of a message beyond the amount received for sending same unless it is ordered repeated.¹ As to the validity of this stipulation, the authorities are widely at variance.

b. STIPULATION REGARDED AS INVALID.—In the majority of the states the stipulation, in so far as it is a regulation, is regarded as a mere device by the company to evade liability for the consequences of its own negligence, and therefore void.² If it be treated as a contract entered into by the sender, it

1. Language of Stipulation.—The stipulation has never materially varied in form or language from that now used on the blanks of the Western Union. It provides that: "To guard against mistakes, the sender of the message should order it repeated, that is, telegraphed back to the original office. For repeating, one-half the regular rate is charged in addition. It is agreed between the sender of the following message and this company that the said company shall not be liable for mistakes or delays in the transmission or delivery, or for non-delivery of any un-repeated message, beyond the amount received for sending the same, nor for mistakes or delays in the transmission or delivery, or for non-delivery, of any repeated message beyond fifty times the amount received for sending the same, unless specially insured."

Rep. 285, the court, by Dillon, J., said:—"We have examined all the leading cases known to have been decided with respect to this subject and have found not one holding, when this was the exact point in judgment, that the ordinary printed conditions as to repeating messages have the effect to release the company from mistakes caused by its own want of ordinary care."

Rule in Kansas and Nevada.—In Western Union Tel. Co. v. Crall, 38 Kan. 679, 5 Am. St. Rep. 795, and Western Union Tel. Co. v.

is void as having been induced by a species of moral fraud.¹ Other authorities hold that the company cannot, by such a stipulation, secure immunity from liability for losses caused by its negligence, and that the stipulation operates merely to exempt the company from liability for errors arising out of causes beyond its control.² But as the company is not an insurer³ and consequently is not liable for such errors even in the absence of any contractual exemption, such a ruling amounts to a holding that the stipulation is of no effect whatever unless it operates to place on the plaintiff the burden of affirmatively proving negligence on the part of the company.⁴

Where the action is to recover a statutory penalty, the stipulation limiting the company's liability for an unrepeatable message to a fixed amount is invalid as attempting to fix a rule of liability different from that prescribed by the statute.⁵

c. STIPULATION REGARDED AS VALID. — In the federal Supreme Court and the courts of several of the states, the stipulation as to repeating messages is declared to be a valid and binding one; that it comes within the rule that every company engaged in a public undertaking may provide, for the conduct of its business, reasonable rules and regulations, to which all contracts with Howell, 38 Kan. 685, 21 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 100, the stipulation was held not to protect the company, on the ground that the evidence showed that the loss complained of was due to the "gross negligence" of the company. What the effect of the stipulation is in cases of "ordinary negligence" was not determined.

In Barnes v. Western Union Tel. Co., 24 Nev. 125, 77 Am. St. Rep. 791, the stipulation was held to be no defense to the company because the loss in that case, due to delay or nondelivery, would not have been prevented by repeating the message. The court expressed no opinion as to the effect of the stipulation in cases of error in transmission.

Rule in Nebraska. — The stipulation was originally regarded as reasonable and valid. Becker v. Western Union Tel. Co., 11 Neb. 87, 38 Am. Rep. 358. But a statute now exists which renders the company liable for errors or delays without regard to any stipulation in the contract, and under this statute the repeating stipulation is nugatory although the court has indicated that it was a reasonable one. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Beals, 56 Neb. 415, 71 Am. St. Rep. 682; Kemp v. Western Union Tel. Co., 28 Neb. 661, 26 Am. St. Rep. 363; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Lowrey, 32 Neb. 732.

His necessities compelled him to resort to the telegraph as the only means through which he could speedily transact the business in hand. * * * 'Prudential rules and regulations,' such as the company is authorized by statute to establish, cannot be understood to embrace such regulations as shall deprive a party of the use of their instrumentality, save by coming under most onerous and unjust conditions." *Tyler v. 4. In Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Wilson, 69 Tex. 739, 21 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 83, the court declared "that such condition or stipulation, in so far as it undertakes to exempt the company from liability for negligence of its servants and employees is void, is too well settled to require discussion here." But in a later case it was said: — "We think it should now be considered settled in this state that this limitation of liability by special contract is valid and binding and that no recovery can be had for an error committed in transmitting an unrepeatable message, unless it be clearly shown that the error was caused by the misconduct, fraud or the want of due care on the part of the company, its servants or agents." Western Union Tel. Co. v. Hearne, 77 Tex. 83, 30 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 588, and the latter case states the rule as now in force in Texas. See Western Union Tel. Co. v. Neill, 57 Tex. 283, 44 Am. it are subject.¹ These cases proceed on the ground that the extra charge for repeating is reasonably small and if the sender fails to order his message repeated, he is presumed to have preferred to assume the slight risk.²

d. EFFECT OF STIPULATION WHERE VALID. — Even where the validity of the stipulation as to repeating messages is recognized, the sender's failure to have the message repeated is no bar to his action where it appears that compliance with the stipulation would not have prevented the wrong; the stipulation can apply only to such errors as are preventable by having the message repeated, although it may attempt to comprehend others.³ It does not apply, therefore, where there has been a total failure to transmit⁴ nor where there was a failure to deliver or an unreasonable delay in transmission or delivery.⁵ Nor does it apply in the case of an error in the name of the

What Amounts to a Request to Repeat. — In Western Union Tel. Co. v. Landis, (Pa. 1888) 12 Atl. Rep. 467, 21 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 206, it appeared that, upon receipt of the dispatch, plaintiff, the addressee, went at once to the operator and requested him to ask the sender whether certain words were "five six" or "five sixty." It was held that this amounted to a request by plaintiff to have the message repeated and that it was immaterial that the forms established by the company for the repetition of messages were not complied with.

In Mowry v. Western Union Tel. Co., 51 Hun (N. While waiting, his attention was diverted to something else and he inadvertently placed the message among those already sent. The mistake was not discovered for a week. Applying the rule of the text, the court held that the stipulation as to repeating messages was no defense.

place from which the message is sent, that not being properly a part of the message but rather the statement of a fact peculiarly within the knowledge of the company's operator.¹ It does not apply where the failure to have the message repeated is due to the assurance of the operator that it has been correctly transmitted and that repeating it is unnecessary.²

When the Error Is Due to "Gross Negligence" or Wilful Misconduct on the part of the company or its agents, the stipulation will not protect the company even in those jurisdictions where the validity of the stipulation is recognized.³ But proof merely of an error of one word in transmission does not establish "gross negligence" within the meaning of the rule.⁴

3. Requiring Claims to Be Presented Within Certain Time — a. VALIDITY OF LIMITATION. — The stipulation contained in the usual contract of sending to the effect that the company will not be liable for damages in any case where the claim is not presented in writing within a prescribed time, after the message is filed with the company for transmission, does not tend to limit the liability of the company for its own negligence or that of its agents, and is not unreasonable where the time fixed is not too short to prevent the party claiming damages to become aware of the fact of his injury and to present his claim properly.⁵ The reasons for the stipulation are obvious,⁶ and it has

But such a stipulation has been held invalid in some jurisdictions, as contrary to public policy and as attempting to establish limitations other than those fixed by the general statute of limitations,⁵ while in other jurisdictions they have been declared void because prohibited by positive statutory provisions.⁶

The Reasonableness of Any Particular Limitation May Change With Peculiar Circumstances so that what is ordinarily a reasonable length of time for filing the claim may be unreasonable.⁷

Thus a limitation of sixty days has been held unreasonable when the message was sent from Philadelphia to Shanghai calling for a reply by

In Texas, the statute provides that no such stipulation shall be valid when it allows a shorter time than ninety days for presenting the claim.¹ Under this, a stipulation requiring the claim to be presented within ninety days from the time the message is filed for transmission is valid,² but a stipulation fixing a shorter period is void³ even though the contract containing it was made in a foreign state where such a limitation was valid.⁴

b. WHEN LIMITATION BEGINS TO RUN. — The limitation begins to run from the time specified in the stipulation and is now usually from the filing of the message for transmission.⁵ A mere delay in receiving the message, although due to the company's negligence, will not modify the stipulation or extend the time if a reasonable time remains, after knowledge of the error, to present the claim,⁶ and it is error to instruct the jury that the limitation begins to run only from the time when plaintiff became aware of defendant's breach of duty.⁷

c. MESSAGE NOT SENT. — When the message is never sent by the company and the stipulation requires the claim to be filed within a fixed time "after the sending of the message," the failure of the party complaining to present his claim is, of course, no defense to the company.⁸ And this rule has been applied to a case where the claim was required to be filed within a fixed time after the message was "filed for transmission" on the ground that the company could not avail itself of any provision in a contract which it had failed to accept.⁹

d. WHAT CONSTITUTES A COMPLIANCE WITH STIPULATION. — The claim presented should set forth fairly the nature and extent of the claimant's demands.¹⁰ While he will not be limited to the amount of damages set up in his claim¹¹ he cannot recover for subjects of damage not mentioned therein.¹²

The claim must be presented to a proper agent of the company. The agent or manager at the office or station from which the message was sent is a proper agent.¹³ Likewise, the agent or operator at the point to which the message is sent is a proper person with whom to file the notice.¹

But Delivery of the Claim to a Mere Messenger Boy to be by him delivered to the local agent is not a sufficient compliance with the stipulation.²

The Notice Must Be in Writing as required by the express terms of the stipulation, but this requirement is waived where a claim is made orally within the time and acted on by the company without objection to its form.³ But a mere promise by an operator, to whom an oral claim is made, to look into the matter is no waiver of the company's right to insist on a written presentation of the claim.⁴

The Commencement of a Suit against the company to recover damages is equivalent to the presentment of the claim and is a sufficient compliance with the stipulation when done within the prescribed time.⁵

4. Limiting Liability to Specified Amount.—In sending night messages for which reduced rates are charged, the telegraph companies have sometimes inserted into the contract of sending a stipulation to the effect that in consideration of the reduced rate for which this message is sent, the company shall not be liable beyond the amount paid for transmission, or a small multiple thereof. Such a stipulation is unreasonable and, so far as it seeks to limit the liability of the company for the consequences of its own negligence, is contrary to public policy and void.⁶ The terms of such a contract are

Plaintiff, a sender, presented an imperfect statement of his claim to an operator or receiving clerk at the New York office of the company, who, after examination, returned it, saying that he had no authority to attend to it, referring him at the same time to the proper officers. Plaintiff, upon going to their offices and finding them absent, left and presented no other claim until after the expiration of the sixty days. It was held that this was no compliance with the stipulation. Young v. Western Union Tel. Co., 65 N. Y. 163.

repugnant in assuming to impose an obligation upon the company and, by the same act, to release it from all obligation.¹ In some jurisdictions, however, such a stipulation has been upheld as an agreement, by the parties, upon a certain sum as liquidated damages.²

A Stipulation Requiring the Sender to Insure the Message and providing that, in default of doing so, the company's liability shall not exceed fifty times the price paid for transmission, is regarded, like the stipulation just mentioned, as void.³

5. Night Messages — Time of Delivery. — A stipulation on a night message blank that, in consideration of the reduced rate charged, the company's duty to deliver shall be deemed fulfilled by a delivery by noon of the succeeding day is valid and binding.⁴

6. As to Unavoidable Interruptions of Service. — The company may, by special contract, limit its liability or stipulate against any liability whatever for failure or delays due to unavoidable interruptions in the working of its lines, as, for example, where peculiar climatic conditions prevent the proper operation of its instruments, or where a storm has blown down its wires,⁵ or, it would seem, where its business is interfered with by a strike of its operators.⁶

But Where Such Conditions Reconstituting Delay Are Known to the Operator, it is his duty to inform the sender thereof, and if he fails to do so the stipulation will not be available as a defense to the company.⁷

7. Other Stipulations. — The company may stipulate against any liability for errors or delays occurring on a connecting line.⁸

Where the Message Is in Cipher, or otherwise obscure, it seems that the company may limit its liability by a stipulation assented to by the sender.⁹

A Stipulation that the Company Is the Agent of the Sender Without Liability is void in so far as it undertakes to relieve the company from liability for the consequences of its negligence.¹

A Stipulation that No Responsibility Shall Attach to Company until the Message Is Presented and Accepted at one of its transmitting offices is reasonable and valid,² but will afford no protection to the company where the message, though delivered to the agent while he was away from the office, was duly filed by him and its delay occurred after such filing.³

A Stipulation that a Messenger Boy Shall Be Deemed the Sender's Agent and that the company shall not become responsible until the message is presented at the office has been held to be a reasonable one even though the messenger is one of the company's delivery messengers and was acting in that capacity when the message was handed him, where it does not appear that he was employed or authorized to receive messages.⁴ But such a stipulation is of no effect when it appears that the messenger, sent to deliver a telegram requesting a reply, was directed by the company to obtain a reply.⁵

8. Burden of Proof as to Noncompliance. — The burden is on the company to show a failure to comply with the stipulation.⁶

9. Proof of Assent to Stipulations — a. SENDER'S ASSENT. — The message blanks in common use being so arranged that a sender, in affixing his signature to the message, signs the printed contract, it is conclusively presumed, in the absence of fraud or imposition, that he thereby assented to and became bound by the terms of the contract, in so far as they are valid, though he may not have read or noticed them⁷ or even been able to read them.⁸

The Use of Very Small Type for Printing the Stipulations in the message blank, where there are letters in large type directing attention to the stipulations, does not constitute fraud or imposition such as will affect the validity of the implied assent.¹

b. ASSENT OF ADDRESSEE. — The right of the addressee to recover rests on the contract of sending and on the principle that where two parties contract for the benefit of a third, the last may maintain an action, in his own right, for a breach of the agreement.² It necessarily follows that the addressee can, as a rule, assert no rights except under the contract made by the sender; he is therefore bound by the stipulations to the same extent as the sender.³

c. WHAT AMOUNTS TO PROOF OF ASSENT. — The Opportunities of the Sender or Addressee to Know and to be familiar with the regulations of the company are mere probative facts and do not create any conclusive presumption of knowledge, no matter what the opportunities were.⁴

Where the Stipulations Are Conspicuously Posted in the Company's Office in which the sender prepared his message it has been held that they are binding on him although not incorporated with the printed contract on the blank.⁵ But this view is opposed to the almost universally accepted doctrine as to a carrier's limiting its liability by mere notice⁶ and is not believed to be sound.⁷

The Illinois Court denies the application of the rule of the text in a case where the addressee sues in tort for a breach of a public duty. However, it enforces the same rule where the addressee sues as where the suit is by the sender, and makes the binding effect of the stipulation to depend upon the fact whether a knowledge of the stipulation was brought home to him. In this last case the company showed that for a long time it had required messages to be written on a blank containing the stipulations. Plaintiff admitted that he was familiar with the appearance of the blanks, had frequently used them for writing messages, and that a parcel of them was always on his office desk; but averred that he had never read the stipulation and had no knowledge of its terms. It was held that, in the absence of evidence that the terms of the stipulation were brought home to plaintiff, it was proper to exclude the blank from the consideration of the jury. Compare, however, Kiley v. Western Union Tel. Co., 109 N. Y. 231, 21 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 107, where it appeared that plaintiff was familiar with the blanks, having used them for several years, and had seen the words, "Read the notice and agreement at the top." It was held that although he may not have known what the precise terms of the stipulation were, "yet he knew that some stipulations were therein contained, and he must be held, by the use of the blank and its delivery to the defendant, to have assented to them."

That Plaintiff Was a Shareholder in the Company does not charge him with notice of the printed stipulations or of a resolution of the directors limiting the company's liability for unrepeat messages, and a copy of such resolutions is not competent evidence. *Pearsall v. That the Message Was Written on the Blank of Another Company does not affect the validity of the stipulations nor lessen their binding effect upon the parties.¹

If the Message Is Written on a Mutilated Blank which contains language sufficient to put the sender upon inquiry as to what the full agreement is, his agreement will be presumed, particularly where he is shown to have been a frequent user of the blanks.²

When the Message Is Not Written on the Usual Blank, but is received for transmission by the company's agent, the sender is not bound by the stipulations printed on the company's blanks,³ unless it can be shown that he had knowledge of the rules of the company in regard to them.⁴ And this is true although a rule of the company, of which the sender was ignorant, forbade its agents to accept for transmission any message unless it was written on one of its regular blanks.⁵

Where the Operator Receives the Message by Telephone or other means of verbal communication from the sender, the question whether the latter knew of the company's regulations and was therefore bound by them is one of fact to be determined by the jury from the evidence submitted.⁶

Where the Company Habitually Receives and Delivers Messages Verbally, for reasons growing out of the peculiar character of the message, it is a question for the jury whether, by thus dispensing with the use of its blanks, the company has intended to relieve its customer of the stipulations printed thereon.⁷

The Knowledge of an Agent who sends a message to his principal is chargeable to his principal, and if the former knew of the stipulations, the latter is bound by them.⁸

Where the Operator Writes Out the Message on one of the company's usual blanks, at the request of the sender, the latter, upon signing his name thereto, is bound by the stipulations notwithstanding his failure to notice them.⁹ It is otherwise, however, in such a case, if the sender does not see and does not sign or otherwise agree to the stipulations.¹⁰

When the Message Written on Plain Paper Is Pasted to a Regular Blank by the operator, without authority from the sender, it seems that the latter is not bound by the stipulations printed on the blank if he had no knowledge of them.¹

XI. LIABILITY OF COMPANY IN PARTICULAR CLASSES OF CASES—1. Company Acting under Contract to Furnish Market Reports and Other News.—It is no part of the general duty of a telegraph company to collect and transmit news of any kind unless it contracts to do so.² But it may enter into agreements to furnish news reports and may make the collection and transmission of market reports, stock quotations and other news a special department of its business.³ In such cases it becomes liable for all damages occasioned to its patrons through its furnishing incorrect information, and this whether the error occurred in the process of transmission or existed in the information as originally received by it. The company, in such cases, assumes duties beyond those incumbent on it as a mere carrier of messages for the public and cannot escape liability by showing a mere correct transmission.⁴

2. Messages Relating to Gambling Transactions.—While a telegraph company may not refuse to send a message,⁵ or escape liability for a statutory penalty for failing to send it correctly or promptly,⁶ on the ground that it relates to "futures" or similar gambling transactions, the damages recoverable for error or delay in connection with the transmission or delivery of such message are nominal merely and cannot exceed the price paid for transmission.⁷ The "future" contract being illegal and void, neither the sender nor addressee is bound by it, and neither can invoke it as a basis for the recovery of substantial damages.⁸

3. Interstate Messages.—Except in so far as it may give rise to a question of conflict of laws, the fact that the initial and terminal points of a message sent by telegraph are not in the same state is not material in an action against the company to recover damages for a breach of its common-law duty to use error to charge that if the sender procured the operator to write out the message, the addressee thereby became charged with such knowledge of the company's rules as to office hours and as to free delivery limits as the operator had.

proper care to effect a prompt and correct transmission and delivery, since such a fact can have no effect upon the right of the sender or addressee to recover. This has been specifically declared,¹ and the cases are numerous in which the messages involved were sent from one state to another and the fact ignored as utterly immaterial. Nor is the rule different when the plaintiff relies on a state statute, where such statute is merely declaratory of the common law, as when it undertakes to deny the company the right, by stipulation or otherwise, to limit its liability for negligence.²

4. Forged or Fraudulent Messages.—Where a telegraph company, by its agent, receives and transmits a forged or fraudulent message, it is responsible to the addressee for damages sustained by him in consequence of the fraud or forgery if it is made to appear that the company's agent, by the exercise of ordinary care, might have detected and prevented the fraud.³ And if the circumstances attending the request to transmit the message are such as would give the agent reasonable cause to suspect the fraud, his negligence in failing to prevent it will render the company liable.⁴ On the other hand, if an impostor, using the name of another, sends over the company's line a request for money, the company is not liable to the party who responds to the request and sends the money by telegraph, for a bona fide payment to the impostor, when it appears that there was nothing in the circumstances of the case to excite suspicion in the mind of an ordinarily careful man.⁵

When Operator Perpetrates the Fraud.—The liability of the telegraph company for damages resulting from the sending of forged or fraudulent messages extends to cases where the operator himself is the author of the forged dispatch.⁶ It extends also to cases where the recognized agent of the company employs, without special authority, a sub-agent to receive and transmit messages, and such sub-agent forges and transmits a message whereby he obtains money.⁷

Fraud Occurring After Negligent Transmission.—In Lowery v. Western Union Tel. Co., 60 N. Y. 198, 19 Am. Rep. 154, it appeared that B sent a telegram to plaintiff asking for five hundred dollars. By mistake in transmission the message, as delivered to plaintiff, asked for five thousand dollars. The money was sent, and B, overcome by cupidity, absconded with it. It was held that the company was not liable since its negligence was not the proximate cause of the loss.

In Magouirk v. Western Union Tel. Co., 79 Miss. 632, 89 Am. St. Rep. 663, an agent of the defendant company sent this message: "Mr. G., Ellisville. Be sure to go to Heidelberg. Am on excursion," and forged plaintiff's name to it. Plaintiff was an unmarried woman and the addressee an unmarried man with whom she had but a slight acquaintance. After sending the message, the agent boasted of having sent it and paraded its contents before the public. It was held that his acts were within the scope of his employment and that the company was liable to plaintiff for the mortification and injury occasioned to her. It was also held that plaintiff might show the agent's habits as to the use of intoxicants as indicating his unfitness for the position he held.

The Measure of Damages in such a case is the amount of money of which the plaintiff was defrauded less what he recovers of the defrauder. He cannot recover of the telegraph company the amount expended by him for attorney's fees and expenses in recovering part of the money from the defrauder or his confederate. Pacific Postal Tel. Cable Co. v. Palo Alto Bank, (C. C. A.) 109 Fed. Rep. 369.

7. Forgery by Sub-agent.—State Bank v. Western Union Tel. Co., 52 Cal. 280. The

It Is No Bar to an Action Ex Delicto against the telegraph company for damages resulting from the transmission of a fraudulent message whereby payment of a draft was fraudulently obtained, that the addressee has a remedy ex contractu against a solvent indorsee on the draft; nor is it necessary in such a case to sue the indorsee first.¹

5. Immoral or Indecent Messages. — When a message is couched in decent language it is the company's duty to accept and transmit it, and it has no right to inquire its real meaning or purport.² If the meaning is ambiguous, the company, in determining whether to transmit it or not, must give the sender the benefit of the doubt.³ But when the message is expressed in indecent, obscene, or filthy language, or is clearly for an immoral purpose, the company may decline to accept it for transmission.⁴

Supplying Gambling Room with Racing News, Etc. — A telegraph company is not indictable as being guilty of maintaining a common nuisance for transmitting to a poolroom telegraphic information concerning horse races even though it appears that the place is resorted to for selling pools and betting on races, by idle and evil disposed persons, to the common annoyance of all good citizens of the neighborhood.⁵

6. Libelous Messages. — The transmission of a message which, on its face, is libelous, is a publication of the libel for which the company must answer in damages to the person libeled.⁶ But where the message is couched in such language that an ordinary person, ignorant of the circumstances and knowing nothing of the parties, would not suppose it to be defamatory, the company, unless specially informed of the facts and of the true nature of the message, is bound to accept and transmit it and incurs no liability by doing so, though the message may be, in fact, libelous.⁷

7. Messages Passing Over Connecting Lines — a. IN GENERAL. — By analogy to the principle governing the liability of common carriers of goods,⁸ the rule is that a telegraph company which has received for transmission a message directed to a point beyond its own lines, is not, in the absence of special agreement, liable for errors or delays occurring on other lines; its undertaking is only to transmit the message promptly and correctly over its own lines and to deliver it to the succeeding line.⁹

court reasoned that although a principal is not bound by a contract made in his name by a subagent appointed by his agent without authority, yet he is responsible for the negligence and torts of such subagent, if the agent who appointed him was, at the time, acting in the business of his principal and the subagent was transacting such business.

In those states which uphold the English doc-

The fact that the initial company receives the entire charge for transmission does not alter the general rule, that being the usual practice.¹

The initial line must exercise diligence to secure the prompt and correct transmission of the message and is liable for a delay on its part in delivering it to the connecting line;² and when, on tendering the message to the connecting line, it finds that the latter's line is out of order so that the message cannot be forwarded, it is its duty to notify the sender of that fact.³

The connecting line is bound to accept for transmission all messages tendered it by another line. This is declared by statute in a number of the states, but such provisions are merely affirmatory of the common law.⁴ But in the absence of an express statutory provision otherwise, such a duty does not extend to cases where the message is directed to a point beyond the company's line unless the company undertakes, as a part of its regular business, the transmission of such messages; in accepting such a message, therefore, the company is entitled to affix reasonable conditions and limitations to its liability.⁵

For a delay in delivery, after the message has been transmitted, the last line is, of course, alone liable.⁶

Where a partnership exists between the two connecting lines, the initial line is liable for errors or delays occurring on either line,⁷ but the mere fact that one company regularly receives messages to be sent over its own line and that of another company is, alone and of itself, no sufficient evidence of a partnership arrangement whereby each company becomes responsible for the negligence or defaults of the other.⁸

The initial line is responsible if, through its own delay, there is a greater delay on the connecting line. Weatherford, etc., R. Co. v. Seals, (Tex. Civ. App. 1897) 41 S. W. Rep. 841.

A telephone company which holds itself out as undertaking to furnish long distance service from H. to A., having its own line to an intermediate point and an arrangement with another line from thence to A., the two companies employing a common agent at the intermediate point, is liable for the negligence of such agent in failing to make such connection as to enable plaintiff at H. to communicate with a party at A., in consequence of which plaintiff was kept from his dying father. *Southwestern Tel., etc., Co. v. An action to recover a statutory penalty, based on the failure of the last line to deliver a message, cannot be maintained against such line and the initial line jointly, there being no joint default and no claim of a joint conduct of business. Chandler v. Western Union Tel. Co., 94 Ga. 442.

In Western Union Tel. Co. v. Stratemeier, 6 Ind. App. 125, it appeared that plaintiff asked the operator whether his company had a line to and a receiving station at O. and on being informed that it had, he handed the operator a message directed to that point, relying entirely on the operator's representations. In an action

Any Company May, by Special Contract, Extend Its Common-law Liability and undertake to become responsible for the correct transmission of the message over the entire route; when such an agreement is shown, the fact that the error occurred on another line will be no defense.¹

The Burden of Proof rests upon any one of the connecting lines which is sued, when it is shown to have received the message, to show that the error or delay did not occur on its line, since it lies peculiarly within its power to show its own conduct with respect to the handling of the message.²

Each Connecting Company Receiving the Message for further transmission becomes bound, while the message is in its charge, to exercise the same degree of care and diligence as is exacted of telegraph companies in ordinary cases.³

Where Two of Several Connecting Lines Are Both Negligent, that one will be held responsible whose negligence was the proximate cause of the loss complained of.⁴

6. STIPULATIONS AS TO RESPECTIVE LIABILITY. — Exemption from liability for errors or delays occurring beyond its line is usually provided for in the printed contract of the telegraph company by a stipulation that the company shall be merely the agent of the sender, to forward the message over other lines when necessary. Such a stipulation merely gives to the company that immunity which the law itself extends and is valid and binding.⁵

Stipulations Made by the Initial Company Inure to the Benefit of Connecting Lines,⁶ unless the language of the stipulation confines its operation to the first company, as in the case of the usual stipulation with respect to unrepeatd messages.⁷

A Stipulation That the Initial Line Is the Agent of the Sender for delivery to the connecting line, without liability, does not relieve it from liability for want of care in selecting the connecting line, and if it forwards the message by telephone instead of by telegraph, it will be responsible for errors in transmission occurring over the telephone line.⁸

7. SENDER'S RIGHT TO NAME ROUTE. — Under the usual stipulation, in telegraph contracts, that the company is the agent of the sender to forward the message where it is directed to a point beyond the initial company's line, the sender has the right to name the route by which the message shall go after it reaches the terminus of the first line.⁹ If the initial company selects for failure to deliver the message, it was held that the company was estopped to deny that it had a receiving station at O.

1. Common-law Liability Extended by Special Contract. — Western Union Tel. Co. v. Carter, 24 Tex. Civ. App. 80.

The Receiver of a Telegraph Company, in the absence of proof to the contrary, will be presumed to have authority to contract for transmission of a message to a point beyond his line. Jones v. Roach, 21 Tex. Civ. App. 301.

2. La Grange v. Southwestern Tel. Co., 25 La. Ann. 383.

3. Duty of Connecting Lines. — Western Union Tel. Co. v. Lyman, 3 Tex. Civ. App. 460; Martin v. Western Union Tel. Co., 1 Tex. Civ. App. 143.

4. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Munford, 87 Tenn. 190, 10 Am. St. Rep. 630. In this case, the defendant accepted a message directed to a point on a connecting line. In the course of transmission over defendant's line, the address became changed from "Sam T." to "Wm. T." The agent of the connecting line at the destination was satisfied the message was intended for Sam T. and, on being informed (erroneously) that he was in another town, mailed it to him there. The transmission by defendant having been prompt, and its error having been cured, it was held that its negligence was not the proximate cause of plaintiff's injury.

5. Stipulations Against Liability for Acts of Connecting Lines. — Western Union Tel. Co. v. Carew, 15 Mich. 525; McCarn v. International, etc., R. Co., 84 Tex. 352, 31 Am. St. Rep. 51; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Simms, 30 Tex. Civ. App. 32; Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Geer, 5 Tex. Civ. App. 349.

Although the stipulation may not show that the message would pass over a connecting line, the sender of the message is nevertheless put upon inquiry and cannot hold the initial company liable for errors occurring on another line on the ground that he was ignorant of the fact that defendant's lines did not extend to the destination. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Carew, 15 Mich. 525.

6. See the title CONNECTING CARRIERS, vol. 6, p. 643. See also Western Union Tel. Co. v. Smith, (Tex. Civ. App. 1894) 26 S. W. Rep. 216.

8. Company Cannot Stipulate Against Its Own Negligence. — Western Union Tel. Co. v. McLeod, (Tex. Civ. App. 1894) 24 S. W. Rep. 815.

9. Selection of Route. — Western Union Tel. Co. v. Turner, 94 Tex. 304. In this case the the route, it will be held to the exercise of ordinary care in making a selection.¹

If the Sender Designates the Route, there is no liability on the part of the initial company for any delay resulting from a bad selection; it is under no duty to adopt a different route except when it knows, at the time of sending, that the route selected by the sender is not open.²

The Initial Company May Require the Sender to Designate the Route and exact a small additional charge to cover the cost of transmitting the names of the designated connecting lines.³

XII. MEASURE OF DAMAGES FOR NEGLIGENCE — 1. General Rule — a. RULE OF HADLEY v. BAXENDALE. — The rule as to the measure of damages in actions against telegraph companies for negligence in the transmission or delivery of messages is that laid down in an early English case,⁴ that when two parties have made a contract which one of them has broken, the damages which the other party ought to receive in respect to such breach of contract should be such as may fairly and reasonably be considered, either as arising naturally, i. e., according to the usual course of things, from such breach of contract itself, or such as may reasonably be supposed to have been in the contemplation of both parties, at the time they made the contract, as the probable result of a breach of it.⁵ While actions against telegraph companies are not necessarily or usually ex contractu, but ex delicto for a breach of a public duty,⁶ the cause of action is so far dependent upon the original contract of sending as to make the rule just stated controlling, and it has been universally applied in this class of actions without regard to whether the particular action is ex contractu or ex delicto.⁷

destination could be reached from the company's terminus by two telephone lines; its rule was that messages should be sent over the nearest line that was open. It was held that, notwithstanding this rule, the sender had the right to indicate which telephone line should be used, and that it was negligence in the company to use the other, in consequence of which a delay occurred, although in so doing it acted under misinformation as to the line it attempted to use being open. Compare Post v. Southern R. Co., 103 Tenn. 184.

Baxendale, 9 Exch. 341; McBride v. Sunset Telephone Co., 96 Fed. Rep. 81; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Henley, 23 Ind. App. 14. Compare Squire v. Western Union Tel. Co., 98 Mass. 232, 93 Am. Dec. 157, in which the court said that "the practical rule, founded on a wise policy, and at the same time consistent with good sense and sound equity, is that a party can be held liable for a breach of a contract only for such damages as are the natural or necessary and the immediate and direct results of the breach — such as might properly be deemed to have been in contemplation of the parties when the contract was entered into — and that all remote, speculative, and uncertain results, as well as possible profits and advantages and other like consequences which might have arisen from the fulfilment of the contract, must be excluded as forming no just or legitimate basis on which to determine the extent of the injury actually caused by a breach."

It is Not Essential that the Parties Must Have Contemplated the Actual Damages which are to be allowed. The liability of the company is for all direct damages which both parties would have contemplated as flowing from its breach if, at the time they entered into it, they had bestowed proper attention upon the subject and had been fully informed of the facts.¹

b. REMOTE DAMAGES.—The general rule operates to exclude from consideration all damages which do not result as the proximate consequence of the default complained of.² Such damages are those which do not result directly or necessarily from the wrong complained of³ and which are the result of the operation of a prior independent cause or of an efficient intervening cause.⁴

c. SPECULATIVE DAMAGES.—In this class are to be embraced such damages as are uncertain and contingent, which depend upon the happening of merely possible events.⁵ Thus, the loss of a valuable note which the plaintiff avers her father would have given her had she been able to see him at his death is too speculative to be considered in a claim for damages for a failure by the company to deliver a message announcing the father's illness.⁶ The reported cases furnish other illustrations of the rule.⁷

Damages for bruises received in consequence of being obliged to take a rough vehicle instead of the family carriage, which plaintiff had telegraphed for, are too remote to sustain an action against the telegraph company for failure to transmit a message ordering the carriage. Where the loss is "occasioned by two causes—the shortcoming of the telegraph company in not delivering the message and the still shorter coming of L. (a third party) in appropriating to himself what belonged to some one else," the company's liability is for nominal damages only. Barnesville First Nat. Bank v. Western Union Tel. The loss to plaintiff of customers resulting from his failing to perform a particular contract, his failure being due to the negligent alteration of a message by the defendant company, is wholly speculative and conjectural, and cannot be considered in estimating the Loss of the Benefit of a Contract which was subject to be defeated by the will of the other party to it affords a basis for nothing more than nominal damages, the benefits being entirely contingent and speculative.¹

Telegrams of Inquiry. — The failure to deliver a message inquiring as to the condition of the sender's relative will not support an action to recover for mental anguish suffered by him in consequence of being absent from the funeral; the possibility that no answer might have been sent had the sender's message been seasonably delivered or that, if sent, it might, without fault of the company, never have reached the plaintiff, renders the damage complained of too speculative.²

d. EFFECT OF SPECIAL CIRCUMSTANCES. — Special circumstances involved in or connected with the sending of the message cannot be considered in estimating the damages to be recovered unless it affirmatively appears that the telegraph company was informed or knew of them at the time the contract of sending was made.³

How Communicated to the Company. — It is immaterial how the information of special circumstances is communicated to the company; it may appear from the face of the message or be communicated by the sender or his agent at the time of offering the message for transmission; it is only necessary that the company shall have had knowledge of such circumstances at the time it entered into the contract for sending.⁴ The operator in charge of the company's office is its agent for the purpose of receiving such information, and knowledge on his part, no matter how acquired, is chargeable to the company.⁵

Message Requesting Addressee to Meet Sender. — Where the basis of the action is the negligence of the company in failing to transmit or deliver promptly a message requesting the addressee to meet the sender or the plaintiff at a station, damages are not recoverable for fatigue and exposure incident to the damages. Fererro v. Western Union Tel. Co., 9 App. Cas. (D. C.) 455.

Message Announcing Date of Trial of Lawsuit. — In Western Union Tel. Co. v. Short, 53 Ark. 434, a message was sent to plaintiff informing him that his case was set for trial Aug. 17th. The company negligently changed it to read Aug. 7th thereby causing plaintiff to make an unnecessary journey to the place of trial. It was held that he might recover his reasonable expenses in going to and returning from such place and also the value of his time, but not for the loss resulting from the necessity of shutting down his mill, idleness of hand and teams, etc., during his absence, it not being shown that the company was informed of the special circumstances which occasioned such loss. See also Western Union Tel. Co. v. Bates, 93 Ga. 352.

In Sprague v. Western Union Tel. Co., 6 Daly (N. Y.) 200, affirmed 67 N. Y. 590, a similar message was lost in transmission and plaintiff and his counsel made an unnecessary trip to the place of trial. plaintiff's being compelled to walk from the station nor for impairment of health resulting therefrom, such damages being remote and conjectural and not such as the company ought to have anticipated as likely to follow a delay in delivering the message.¹

2. Message in Cipher or Otherwise Unintelligible—a. IN GENERAL.—The rule is well established that where the message, as delivered for transmission, is in cipher and unintelligible except to the sender and addressee, and the company has no information otherwise as to its character or purport, nor of its importance and urgency, the party injured can recover nothing more than nominal damages.² The rule is analogous to and derives support from the principle in the law relating to common carriers which exempts the carrier from liability in cases where the shipper conceals the nature and value of his goods.³ In some states, however, a different view prevails, and the rule is upheld that the measure of damages recoverable by the plaintiff is not to be affected by a concealment of the character of the message or by the company's ignorance of its urgency or importance, though the company might reasonably decline to transmit a cipher message without having its meaning explained.⁴

But it has been held that where the operator knows that the sender of such a message is a woman and that her destination is a flag station, the company is put on notice that a failure to deliver her message will necessitate her walking and is liable accordingly, but not for such sickness as was the result of the fatigue and exposure to which she was subjected. *Western Union Tel. b. WHEN MESSAGE AFFORDS THE ONLY EVIDENCE OF ITS IMPORTANCE.

— In such cases, if the message is unintelligible or fails to disclose to the company its nature or importance, there is no question as to the application of the rule just stated with respect to cipher messages.¹ But when the message, though couched in unusual or technical trade language, is sufficiently plain to indicate that it is of importance, or to apprise the company that a pecuniary loss may, and probably will, result from an incorrect or delayed transmission, there is no such obscurity as will confine its liability to nominal damages.²

It Is Not Essential that the Message Disclose All the Details of the transaction to which it relates, nor the particular business intended, in order to take it out of the rule governing cipher messages. It is sufficient if the results likely to follow negligence in transmitting it may be gathered in a general way from the wording of the telegram.³

The Frequency with Which Peculiar Words Are Used and their familiarity in trade circles, where the telegraph is often used as a means of communication, are facts to be considered in determining whether such words were or ought to have been sufficiently intelligible to the operator for him to know from them of the nature or importance of the message.⁴

4. Frequent Use of Peculiar Words.—In Pepper v. Western Union Tel. Co., 87 Tenn. 554, 10 Am. St. Rep. 699, the message, sent to

A Message Summoning a Physician indicates on its face, when the company has knowledge that the addressee is a physician, that it is of importance, and that the damages ordinarily resulting from the lack of medical attention are apt to be caused by its nondelivery.¹

A Message Announcing an Illness is sufficient to advise the company of the importance of its prompt transmission and delivery and that mental suffering is likely to result from a failure to deliver promptly.²

Messages Relating to Failing Debtors.—A message directing the sender's attorneys to attach property, or advising plaintiff of the fact that a debtor is about to fail, or the like, is sufficient on its face to indicate to the telegraph company that a loss of the debt may result from a failure to transmit and deliver promptly.³

c. COMPANY HAVING EXTRANEOUS EVIDENCE OF NATURE OF MESSAGE.—It is not essential to the recovery of substantial damages that the message itself shall disclose its importance or the necessity for prompt and correct transmission. If the company is informed of this fact through other sources, it becomes charged with notice of the loss that is likely to follow from a negligent transmission or delivery.⁴ In determining whether it had such information, the court and jury are not confined to what the sender or his agent may have communicated to the company upon tendering the message, but may consider the surrounding circumstances, particularly the fact that the operator knew or ought to have known of the general nature of the message from other messages, handled by him, relating to the same transaction.⁵

d. OPERATION OF RULE IN "MENTAL ANGUISH CASES"—(1) Such Cases No Exception to General Rule.—Messages involved in this class of cases are no exception to the general rule. They must indicate on their face, or the company must be otherwise notified of, their importance and the probability that mental suffering would result from a failure to transmit and deliver promptly; otherwise the company is liable for nominal damages only.⁶

produce dealers, read: "Car cribs six sixty, c. a. f., prompt." The word "cribs" meant "clear ribs" and "c. a. f." meant "cost and freight." These terms, it appeared, were well understood in the trade and were constantly being used in telegrams. It was held that the company was liable for all damages resulting from its having changed the message from "six sixty" to "six thirty" in transmitting it. See also *Mowry v. Western Union Tel. The mere fact that the sender requested the operator to "rush" the message, as it was important is not sufficient to charge the company with knowledge of the nature of a cipher message. Houston, etc., R. Tel. Co. v. Davidson, 15 Tex. Civ. App. 334.

The Nature of the Message May Be Sufficient, of itself, to inform the company of the necessity of a prompt and correct transmission. This is true of messages announcing the dangerous illness, the death, or the time of the funeral of a relative, or requesting the addressee to "come at once," and messages of like import. In such cases the rule seems to be that nothing more than the importance of the case as appears from the message itself is necessary to charge the company with notice of the mental suffering likely to result from a negligent transmission or delivery.¹

(2) Relationship of Persons Affected. — The relationship of the parties to be affected ought to appear from the face of the message or, be otherwise communicated to the company,² but this requirement is satisfied if the language of the message is such as to suggest a relationship and put the company upon inquiry;³ the rule does not mean that the family pedigree should be set out in the message or given to the agent.⁴ In Texas, the rule of the later cases seems to be that the company is charged with knowledge of the relationship of the parties by the mere fact of the nature of the message where it is one relating to an illness, death, time of a funeral, or the like.⁵

If the Relationship Is by Affinity Only, there can be no recovery for mental suffering resulting from a failure to transmit or a delay, unless it is affirmatively shown that the company was informed, from other sources than the message,

A message read: "Meet me to-morrow at 12 o'clock." Through a delay in its delivery, plaintiff, the sender, was prevented from seeing her aunt until a moment before the latter's death. It was held that the company had no notice of the consequences likely to follow a delay in delivery, and was therefore not liable for the mental suffering endured by plaintiff. Kenyon v. Western Union Tel. Co., 126 N. Car. 232.

A message reading, "My wife very ill, not expected to live," is sufficient to suggest to the company a relationship between her and the addressee, and the fact that such relationship was not disclosed is no bar to a recovery. Reese v. Western Union Tel. Co., 123 Ind. 294.

(3) Interest of Plaintiff in Transaction. — When the person was not a party to the message, his interest must be shown to have been brought to the knowledge of the company;² but it is not necessary that the fact appear from the message itself if the company is notified of it through other means.³

When the Action Is Brought by a Person Who Is Not Deprived of the privilege of attending at the deathbed or funeral of a relative, but by one who claims to have been deprived of the comfort and society of the person who was prevented from attending, it must be affirmatively shown that the company was informed of the circumstances, either from the face of the message or from extraneous sources.⁴

3. Loss of Expected Profits in Transactions of Sale — a. SALE PREVENTED — PLAINTIFF THE VENDOR. — When the negligence of the telegraph company in the transmission or delivery of a message operates to prevent a sale by the plaintiff which he would otherwise have consummated, the measure of damages for which the company is responsible is the difference between the price that would have been realized had the sale not been so prevented, and the price which the plaintiff in the exercise of reasonable diligence is thereafter able to obtain,⁵ together with expenses necessarily incurred in consequence of the delay or failure.⁶ In short, plaintiff is entitled to recover the profits he

Proof that the sender told the operator that the deceased was plaintiff's son-in-law, and that plaintiff would attend the funeral if she received the message in time, is not sufficient to charge the company with knowledge of the specially affectionate relations which had existed between the plaintiff and deceased, and will not warrant a recovery by plaintiff for being kept away from the funeral. *Western Union Tel. A message to plaintiff reading, "Ship your hogs at once, was delayed four days, in consequence of which plaintiff had to keep his hogs four days longer than he would have done, thus incurring expense for feeding, etc.,

The Loss Must Be Actual and Substantial, and plaintiff must, in all such cases, prove it; there is no presumption of loss or damage from the mere fact of negligence on the part of the company.² And there can be no recovery for a loss of profits which were purely speculative or conjectural, particularly where the transaction is of a gambling nature. The bargain prevented must have been free from such a taint, and the profits anticipated from it must have been reasonably certain and not dependent upon the hazards or chances of business.³

b. ORDER FOR GOODS NOT DELIVERED. — When the telegraph company wholly fails to transmit or deliver a message ordering goods, the measure of damages is the difference between the price which was due under that order and that which the plaintiff was or would be obliged to pay at the same place in order, by due diligence, after knowing of the company's failure, to purchase a like quality and quantity of goods;⁴ but he is not entitled to recover profits and had to sell at a decreased price. He was allowed to recover the difference between the market value of the hogs, at the place of delivery, on the day when they would have been delivered had the message been promptly delivered, and the market value on the day when he was able to deliver them, together with the extra expense to which he was subjected. *Manville v. Lost Opportunity to Buy Real Estate. — Through the negligence of the company in failing to deliver a message, the plaintiff, A., lost the opportunity to buy for three thousand dollars land worth five thousand and which the message instructed his agent to buy for him. It was held that he might recover the difference, such damages not being remote or conjectural. It appeared also that another person had sent a message instructing the same agent to buy

which he expected and might have realized from a re-sale not then effected or agreed on.¹ The same rule obtains when there was a mere delay in delivery.² But there can be no recovery for more than nominal damages for the failure to deliver a message ordering goods unless the plaintiff proves that, had the message been delivered, his addressee would have filled the order.³

c. ORDER FOR GOODS ERRONEOUSLY TRANSMITTED. — Where an error in transmission causes an excess of goods to be sent to a purchaser, the measure of damages is the difference between the market value of the excess at the place of shipment and that at the place to which they were shipped, together with the expense of transportation.⁴ If the vendee declines to receive the excess of goods and they are shipped back to the shipper, he may recover the transportation charges both ways and the depreciation in value of the goods, if any.⁵ If the subject of the sale is not a commodity, but stocks or bonds or similar securities, the measure of damages is the increase in the loss, if any, sustained by the purchaser in consequence of the error in transmission making the amount purchased larger,⁶ or, when there is a profit which the same property for him, and that if both messages had been promptly delivered, the latter would have reached the agent first and A would not have secured the property. It was held, however, that this fact afforded no defense to the company. Alexander v. Western Union Tel. Co., 67 Miss. 386. See also Western Union Tel. Co. v. Snow, (Tex. Civ. App. 1903) 72 S. W. Rep. 250, where delay in delivery of a message saying, "Offer on cattle accepted. Come on quick," caused plaintiff to lose the opportunity to close a trade for the cattle.

When the Same Message Contains Orders Both to Buy and to Sell and is not delivered, the losses plaintiff would have sustained on the purchase order must be deducted from the profits he would have made on the sale order in determining the measure of damages. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Way, 83 Ala. 542.

A different rule would obtain, it seems, if the plaintiff had an agreement with his seller for a definite quantity at a fixed price, and acting on the assumption that his message would be delivered, had re-sold for delivery upon arrival of the goods. See Western Union Tel. Co. v. Brown, 84 Tex. 54; Walden v. Western Union Tel. Co., 105 Ga. 275; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Landis, (Pa. 1888) 12 Atl. Rep. 467, 21 Am. & Eng. Corp. If the Goods Are Perishable and become of no value before they can be disposed of, the measure of damages is the market value at the place of shipment plus the cost of transportation. Elsley v. Postal Tel. Cable Co., 15 Daly (N. Y.) 58.

While It Is the Duty of the Party to Use Due Diligence to render the loss as slight as possible, it seems that he is not bound to transport the goods to a more favorable place of sale than that at which they happen to be. Leonard v. New York, etc., Tel. Co., 41 N. Y. 544. But this duty would depend upon the circumstances. See infra, this subd. c. Message Announcing Prices, Etc.

Thus, where an order to a broker directs him to buy "five Hudson" and is erroneously transmitted "buy five hundred," in consequence of which the broker buys five hundred shares of another stock instead of five hundred Hudson ("five Hudson" meaning five hundred shares of the latter stock), and by the time the error was discovered the price of Hudson had advanced, plaintiff may recover the amount of the advance up to the time he discovered the error, as well as the amount of the loss on the other stock. Rittenhouse v. Independent Line of Tel., 44 N. Y. 263, 4 Am. Rep. 673.

If the Error in Transmission Causes the Goods to Be Shipped to the Wrong Place, the measure of damages for which the company is liable is the difference between the price which could have been obtained had the goods gone to the proper place and the market value or best obtainable price at the point to which they were actually sent.²

d. MESSAGE DIRECTING PLAINTIFF'S AGENT TO SELL OR PURCHASE.—Where a message directing plaintiff's agent to sell certain property is delayed and the price of the property declines meanwhile, the company is responsible for the difference between the price actually obtained, due diligence being used, and that which would have been obtained had there been no delay in delivery.³

If a Message Directing Plaintiff's Agent to Close an Option to Purchase is delayed so that it does not reach the agent until the option has expired, the measure of damages is the difference between the price fixed by the option and the market price at the same point on that day, and if the latter is less than the former there can be no recovery. Subsequent speculative advances in the market cannot be considered.⁴

e. MESSAGE ANNOUNCING PRICES OR STATE OF MARKET.—When a message announcing prices, sent in contemplation of a trade, is erroneously transmitted, the party injured through acting upon the erroneous message may recover the amount of his actual loss caused by the decrease in the price he obtained⁵ or, in case he is a purchaser, the increase in price he is obliged to pay in consequence of the error.⁶ If the message is directed to one con-

1. In Marr v. Western Union Tel. Co., 85 Tenn. 529, 16 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 243, plaintiff sent a message ordering his broker to buy one thousand shares of a certain stock but the message was changed in transmission to "one hundred." He learned of the error the day after the one hundred shares were purchased for him, but did not repeat his order until several days later, and meanwhile the stock advanced in price. It was held that he could recover the amount of the advance in the price of nine hundred shares up to the time he became aware of the error but not for advances occurring thereafter.

Plaintiff wired his agent to postpone the purchase of hogs until a certain day. There was a negligent delay in delivery, rendering the message ineffective, and it was held that the measure of damages was the difference in the cost of the hogs on the day the agent bought and that on the day on which the message instructed him to buy. Western Union Tel. Co. v. North Packing, etc., Co., 188 Ill. 366, affirming 89 Ill. App. 301.

Where a telegram to plaintiff's broker, as delivered, authorized him to pay a higher price for certain cotton than the market price at the time, there can be no recovery for the error in transmission, in the absence of evidence that the cotton could have been bought at a lower price or that it was not worth what plaintiff paid for it. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Bell, 24 Tex. Civ. App. 572.

5. Seller Obtaining Decrease in Price. — Western Union Tel. Co. v. Crawford, 110 Ala. 460; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Flint River Lumber Co., 114 Ga. 576, 88 Am. St. Rep. 36; *Postal Tel. If plaintiff, acting on a telegram altered in transmission, sells shares at their full market value, he can recover no more than nominal damages, even though he may have to pay an advanced price a few days later. Hughes v. Western Union Tel. Co., 114 N. Car. 70, 14 Am. St. Rep. 782.

Where the party sending the message announcing prices was under no obligation to keep plaintiff informed as to prices and it appears that plaintiff did not rely on him for such information, plaintiff cannot recover on the ground that he sold his cotton for a less price than he might have obtained had the message been correctly transmitted. Frazer v. Western Union Tel. Co., 84 Ala. 497. Compare Garrett v. Western Union Tel. Co., 83 Iowa 257.

templating a shipment of live stock and advises him to ship, the measure of damages, in case of delay or nondelivery in consequence of which the addressee ships to a less advantageous point, is the difference between the market prices prevailing at the two places at the time, together with the increased cost of transportation, if any.¹ If the message is one advising the addressee not to ship, and through a delay in delivery he ships and thereby encounters an unfavorable market, the measure of damages is the difference between the value of the stock at the place from which they were shipped and the price actually obtained at such market, together with the cost of transportation and the increased expense incident to keeping the stock at the new point.² If he is unable to sell at all at such point, he not only may but it is his duty, if practicable, to ship to the nearest good market in order to reduce, as far as possible, the loss to him.³

If the Message Is Never Delivered and the addressee has a right, under the circumstances, to believe that a failure to receive a message means that no change in the market has occurred, and buys accordingly at the last rates communicated to him, the measure of damages is the excess of amount which he actually paid over the price he would have paid had the message been delivered.⁴

If the Plaintiff Received from Other Sources the Same Information which the undelivered telegram, for the nondelivery of which he claims damages, would have given him, and gets such information before he takes any action, he has no cause of action.⁵

4. Loss of Employment or of Professional Fees. — Where the negligence of the telegraph company in the transmission or delivery of a message causes the plaintiff to lose a situation or employment, he is entitled to recover the actual damage sustained by him in consequence of the loss. The amount of the recovery must, of course, depend upon the circumstances involved, the character of the employment, its probable duration, etc.⁶ The same right of recovery exists where a contractor loses, through the negligence of the company, the opportunity to secure a valuable contract, and the measure of damages is the difference between the compensation the contract would have called for and the sum it would cost to fulfil it.⁷

Period of Employment. — Only nominal damages are recoverable where plaintiff lost merely the opportunity to work by the day for an uncertain period. Merrill v. Western Union Tel. Co., 78 Me. 97. See also Western Union Tel. Co. v. Pallotta, 81 Miss. 216.

In Mondon v. Western Union Tel. Co., 96 Ga. 499, the plaintiff had a letter offering him employment at a stipulated sum per month but specifying nothing as to its duration. In consequence of the company's delay in delivering his reply in which he accepted the offer, he failed to get the position. It was held that he could recover the stipulated salary for one month only.

The General Rule in Such Cases is that the plaintiff may recover the difference between the amount of the salary he would have received and the amount actually earned by him. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Valentine, 18 Ill. App. 57; Western Union Tel. Co. v. McKibben, 114 Ind. 511, 21 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 133; McGregor v. Western Union Tel. Co., 85 Mo. App. 308.

Where a Professional Man Loses a Fee through the negligence of the company which he would otherwise have secured, by being deprived of the opportunity of attending a patient or client in a professional capacity, he may recover the amount of the fee he would have earned,¹ provided it is made to appear that the company, either from the message itself or from other sources, knew or ought to have known of the nature or importance of the message.² Within this rule would come the claim of a real-estate agent who loses the commissions for making a sale of real estate in consequence of the negligent transmission of a telegram whereby a sale already arranged by him was not consummated.³

If the Plaintiff Is Already under a Contract of Employment of such a character as would preclude him from entering into a contract with another, he cannot recover damages for failure to secure the latter contract even though the failure was due to the company's negligence.⁴

If the Employment Is Conjectural or contingent upon other circumstances, so that the delivery of the message in due time might or might not have secured the employment for plaintiff, the loss of the employment must be classed as speculative damages and is not recoverable.⁵

5. Losses Which Might Have Been Prevented — a. IN GENERAL. — When a party sustains a loss which could and would have been prevented if the company had discharged its duty with reference to a message, he is entitled to hold the company responsible for it.⁶ But in all such cases he must be able

In Western Union Tel. Co. v. Longwill, 5 N. Mex. 308, 25 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 565, plaintiff, a physician, was telegraphed for but the message was delivered too late to enable him to respond to the call. There was proof that a reasonable fee for the operation to be performed was five hundred dollars and that the parties sending the message were solvent. It was held that the case was within the rule of Griffin v. Colver, 16 N. Y. 489, 69 Am. Dec. 718, allowing damages for "gains prevented," and that plaintiff could recover five hundred dollars less the amount he earned at home during the time he would have been away.

An Undertaker to whom a message is sent directing him to meet the sender at the train cannot recover, for a delay in delivery of the message causing him to fail to meet the train, the amount of profit he might have made out of conducting the funeral of the sender's relative, had he received the message in time. Such damages are too speculative. Clay v. Western Union Tel. Co., 81 Ga. 285, 12 Am. St. Rep. 316.

Loss of Reward for Capturing Criminal. — In McPeck v. Western Union Tel. Co., 107 Iowa 356, 70 Am. St. Rep. 205, a message sent to plaintiff saying "come on first train" was delayed in delivery. Plaintiff claimed that if it had been promptly delivered he would have responded by taking the first train and would have captured a criminal for whose capture a reward was to be given. It was held that he was entitled to recover, although he did not know at the time that a reward had been offered but merely understood that one would be.

2. In Western Union Tel. Co. v. Clifton, 68 Miss. 307, a party at W. telegraphed to his attorney to meet him there to arrange an assignment. The attorney replied that he would come at once, but this latter message was not delivered, and the party secured a local attorney and plaintiff lost the expected fee. The only information the company had of the circumstances was from the message which read, "Send Eckford on first train. Am here. Answer," and a reply to the effect that E. would come at once. It was held that no more than nominal damages were recoverable. See Melson v. Western Union Tel. Co., 72 Mo. App. 111.

Where a message directing the shipment of cattle was delayed so that the agent in charge of them released the herd, the measure of damages is the cost of regathering them and the depreciation in value due to the regathering. Pruett v. Western Union Tel. Co., 6 Tex. Civ. App. 533; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Pruett, (Tex. Civ. App. 1896) 35 S. W. Rep. 78. Compare, as to first element of damage, to show that the loss was sustained and that it could and would have been prevented;¹ and therefore when the action is for a failure to deliver a message summoning a physician to see plaintiff's wife, the plaintiff cannot recover for the value of his wife's services in the absence of proof that the prompt delivery of the message and the arrival of the physician would have saved her life.²

b. MESSAGES TO CREDITORS REGARDING FAILING DEBTORS. — Where a creditor or his representative telegraphs to his attorney to attach the property of a certain debtor and through the company's negligence in delaying or failing to transmit the message the property is attached by other creditors and plaintiff's debt is thereby lost, the company is responsible in damages for the amount of the debt, together with interest thereon to the date of the trial of the action.³ So, also, where the company's agent, in order to secure himself and others, wilfully withholds a message to a branch bank announcing the failure of its principal until some time after the bank has opened, the company is liable for all money paid out by the bank between the time when the message should have been delivered and the time when it was actually delivered.⁴

The deterioration in market value, and not the cost of restoring cattle to their former condition, is the measure of damages where there is a shrinkage in weight for want of water, which would have been prevented if the message in question had been delivered. Mitchell v. Western Union Tel. Co., 12 Tex. Civ. App. 262.

Plaintiff Prevented from Stopping Foreclosure Sale. — Where the company's negligence prevents plaintiff from stopping a sale of his property under foreclosure he is not bound, in order to recover damages, to show that he has been evicted from the property; the loss of his title is enough. But he must be able to show that had the message been duly delivered he would have been able to command the money necessary to stop the sale. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Hearne, 7 Tex. Civ. App. 67.

Loss of Child's Services by Marriage. — The father may recover the value of the child's services up to its majority where, through the negligence of the company, a telegram was delayed, and, in consequence, he was unable to prevent her marriage. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Procter, 6 Tex. Civ. App. 300.

Funeral Expenses Unnecessarily Incurred. — In Western Union Tel. Co. v. Hines, 22 Tex. Civ. App. 315, a message from a sister to a brother reading "Mother started to-night" was changed in transmission to "Mother died to-night." It was held that expenses incurred by

In Hartstein v. Western Union Tel. Co., 89 Wis. 531, a debtor about to fail wired plaintiff, one of his creditors, suggesting that he "come at once." Delivery of the message was negligently delayed for four days, so that when plaintiff arrived all of his debtor's property had been attached by other creditors. If the message had been promptly delivered plaintiff would have been able to arrive on the scene two days before those attachments. There was no proof, however, that he would have left immediately if he had gotten the telegram promptly, or that his debtor would have voluntarily given him any security for his claim. It was held that damages for the loss of the claim were too remote to be recovered. See also Manier v. Western Union Tel. Co., 94 Tenn. 442.

Law Suit Lost Through Failure of Transmission. — An attorney representing the plaintiff in a certiorari proceeding sent a message over the defendant's line containing notice of the hearing. Owing to defendant's failure to deliver it promptly the proceeding was dismissed for want of notice, and the attorney thereupon paid his client the amount involved in the suit and instituted suit to recover damages of the company. It was held that he could not recover in the absence of proof that he would have succeeded in the proceeding had the notice been promptly delivered. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Bailey, 115 Ga. 725. 6. Failure to Transmit Money.—When the company undertakes to transmit money by telegraph and fails to do so or is guilty of unreasonable delay in transmitting and delivering it, the measure of damages is merely interest on the money from the time it should have been delivered until it is actually delivered, together with the cost of the message.¹ In order to stop interest in such a case there must be a tender of the money and not of a check merely.²

7. Mental Anguish—a. RECOGNIZED IN SOME JURISDICTIONS—(1) In General.—Until a comparatively recent date, it was a recognized rule of law that mental anguish and suffering alone, unaccompanied by actual pecuniary damage or physical injury, was not a ground for the maintenance of an action and could not be considered as an element of damage, even though the negligence or wrongful act of the defendant as a proximate cause of the wrong was established.³ Isolated exceptions to the rule were recognized in cases of breach of promise suits⁴ and where the injury was wilful and malicious. But the courts of Texas, following the suggestion of a text writer,⁵ have adopted and steadily adhered to the rule that the party who has been compelled to undergo mental suffering in consequence of the negligence of a telegraph company in the transmission or delivery of a message may recover compensatory damages⁶ although he sustained no other injury.⁷ And this view has Plaintiff, having purchased some cattle at M., in Colorado, and having a letter of credit from a Kansas bank, gave a draft on that bank for the purchase money. The Colorado bank telegraphed to the Kansas bank to know if the draft was good. This message was not delivered until two days later, and during that time the cattle had to be detained at M. in a stock yard, where they lost greatly in weight owing to bad conditions. It was held by the Court of Appeals that the defendant's delay in delivering the message was the proximate cause of the loss in weight, and that a recovery for the amount represented by such loss might be had. But this holding was reversed in the Supreme Court on the ground that the damages mentioned were too remote. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Simpson, 64 Kan. 309, reversing 10 Kan. App. 473.

In Alabama, where the "mental anguish doctrine" obtains, the original rule is recognized. Thus where the plaintiff brought an action ex

delicto against the telegraph company, seeking to recover solely for mental anguish, the court said: "There can be no recovery here of nominal damages as for a breach of contract—to which we have held that damages for mental suffering may be superadded—because the complaint is not upon contract, but purely in tort. No recovery apart from damages for mental suffering, in other words, can be had upon this complaint, and therefore no recovery for mental suffering can be had." Blount v. Western Union Tel. Co., 126 Ala. 105. See also Western Union Tel. Co. v. Krichbaum, 132 Ala. 535; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Brocker, (Ala. 1903) 35 So. Rep. 469.

But neither the federal courts nor those of Massachusetts recognize the Texas doctrine as sound. See infra, this subdivision, b. Doctrine Denied.

6. Damages Are Compensatory and Not Punitive.—In several cases allowing damages for mental anguish it was expressly held that punitive damages were not recoverable, there being no proof of malice or wilful wrong on the part of defendant. *Stuart v. (2) Theory of Rule Allowing Such Damages.—The courts proceed on the theory that by virtue of the company's negligent breach of the contract to which the plaintiff was a party, or which was made for his benefit, or by virtue of the statutes declaring the duties and liabilities of telegraph companies,² the plaintiff has a cause of action, and, having thus secured a standing in court, he is entitled to recover damages for all the injury suffered by him as a proximate consequence of the defendant's wrongful act.³ The company

There can be no recovery for mental anguish alone when the action is in tort. In Chapman v. Western Union Tel. Co., 88 Ga. 763, 30 Am. St. Rep. 183, 39 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 567, the court, referring to the theory stated in the text as that upon which recovery for mental anguish alone is allowed, said: "To speak of the right to nominal damages as a condition for giving substantial damages, is a palpable contradiction. To give nominal damages necessarily denies any further recovery. * * * It is manifest that to allow such a recovery is, in real substance, an effort to protect feeling by legal remedy."

having been informed, from the message itself or from extraneous sources, that a negligent transmission or delivery will probably cause mental distress, damages arising from such a cause must have been within the contemplation of the parties when the contract was made.¹

In Louisiana, such damages are allowed in view of the peculiar provisions of the civil law not in force where the common law prevails.²

(3) Limitations of Rule.—The recognition of the right to recover damages for mental suffering alone has led to such an abnormal increase in the number of such suits and to the assertion of so many unreasonable claims that the courts are not inclined to extend its operation.³

The Injury Suffered Must Be Real, not imaginary, and not the result of a too sensitive or excitable mental constitution or of a morbid spirit or distorted imagination.⁴

The Suffering Must Result from the Wrong Complained of, and it is the duty of the court always, when properly requested, to remind the jury of this principle and to caution them that the plaintiff's mental anguish occasioned by other and independent causes, e. g., the death or illness of a relative, cannot be considered.⁵

The Anguish and Suffering Must Be That of the Plaintiff Himself; the recovery cannot include the distress or mental suffering endured by the plaintiff's relative on account of the former's absence.⁶

A Distinction Is Made between anguish caused by the delay or non-delivery of a message and that resulting from independent causes which would have been relieved had the company been prompt in the discharge of its duty. There can be no recovery for the latter.⁷

If the Prompt Delivery of the Message Would Not Have Prevented the Suffering, the failure to deliver cannot be regarded as a proximate cause of the damages complained of and there can be no recovery.¹ It is therefore incumbent upon a plaintiff who claims damages because of being kept from his father's death-bed to show that he could and would have reached his father before death had the message been delivered promptly.²

If the Anguish Arises from Being Kept from the Funeral of a Relative, the plaintiff cannot evade the operation of the rule just stated by showing that if he had received the message promptly he would have replied and secured a postponement of the funeral so as to give him time to be present. From causes for which the company would not be responsible, his reply might not reach its destination, and if it reached there it might fail to accomplish the purpose intended.³

Failure or Delay in Transmitting Money Order.—The mental anguish of a party expecting a remittance of money by mail, caused by the company's negligent failure or delay, cannot be made a basis for the recovery of damages.⁴

(4) Objections to Doctrine.—The rule allowing mental anguish alone to constitute a basis for the recovery of damages has its practical as well as its legal objections. It is an innovation upon long-established principles,⁵ and its recognition has, in one jurisdiction at least, produced such a flood of litigation that refinements and distinctions of the most unsubstantial character have been necessary to prevent its application to unjust cases.⁶ The damages sought and allowed are essentially speculative and of a character not measurable by accepted legal standards.⁷

information of dangerous illness of the wife's mother. Subsequently, a dispatch was sent informing them of her improved condition, but the company failed to deliver it. "It is somewhat remarkable that, although telegraphy has now been in use for over fifty years, it has never seemed to occur to any court or, so far as we can discover, to any lawyer, that damages were recoverable for mental suffering resulting from neglect to transmit or deliver a telegram until it was so held in 1881 by the Supreme Court of Texas." Francis v. Western Union Tel. Co., 58 Minn. 252.

In Western Union Tel. Co. v. Rogers, 68 Miss. 748, 24 Am. St. Rep. 300, the court, by Cooper, J., reviewing the case of Rowell v. Western Union Tel. Co., 75 Tex. 26, where it was held that damages were not recoverable for mental anguish which a delivery of the telegram would have relieved, said: "The distinction drawn by the court is so unsubstantial that it was evidently resorted to for the purpose of obstructing the tide of intolerable litigation flowing from previous decisions." (5) Evidence of Mental Suffering. — The behavior of the party affected and his natural expressions at the time tending to indicate his mental state are competent to show his mental suffering.¹ When the action is to recover for the anguish suffered by the plaintiff in being kept from the bedside of his dying mother, it is competent to prove that he was her favorite son.² But it is not competent, for the purpose of showing how plaintiff's suffering was aggravated, to prove that his relative, when dying, made repeated requests for him, and that these requests were afterwards communicated to the plaintiff.³

Where Sickness Results. — If the plaintiff is entitled, in the jurisdiction in which he sues, to recover for mental anguish, he may show that, as a result of such anguish, he became ill and was forced to take to his bed, call in a physician, and buy medicines.⁴ But there can be no recovery for "physical suffering" resulting from plaintiff's being kept from his relative's funeral, in the absence of specific proof of such suffering as a result of the deprivation.⁵

As Tending to Disprove the Fact of Mental Suffering, the defendant may show that the plaintiff, who sues on account of the delay in delivering a telegram calling him to see his sick daughter, had abandoned his family and was living apart from them.⁶

(6) Relationship of Parties Material. — In cases where the message is one announcing the illness or death or the time of the burial of a near blood relation of the plaintiff, the latter's mental anguish will be presumed when, through the fault of the defendant company, he is prevented from being at the bedside or funeral of his relative, and it is not necessary to make proof of it,⁷ though the plaintiff may prove facts tending to aggravate the damages.⁸

But Where the Parties Are Related by Affinity Merely, the law does not presume any mental suffering, and in such cases plaintiff must prove it affirmatively.⁹ Indeed, the better rule seems to be that the right to recover damages for mental anguish should be confined to cases in which the affected parties are

Such damages "open into a field without boundaries, and there is no principle by which the court can limit the amount of damages. Mere logic will not dispose of a question of this character." Connelly v. Western Union Tel. Co., 100 Va. 51, 93 Am. St. Rep. 919, quoting concurring opinion of Cauty, J., in *Francis v. of close degrees of blood relationship, and that no recovery at all may be had where there is merely a relationship by affinity.¹

(7) Character of Messages Giving Rise to Mental Anguish.—These messages in the great majority of cases are those which announce the illness or death of a relative and are intended to enable the addressee to attend the bedside, death, or funeral or are inquiries which would develop such information.² The rule allowing a recovery of damages for mental suffering has been extended, however, to cases where the message was one of information merely and not calculated or intended to affect the movements of the addressee.³

(8) Action to Recover for Mental Anguish Does Not Survive.—Such an action is one for "an injury to the person" within the rule that actions for such injuries do not survive, and the right of action dies with the person injured.⁴

(9) Limitation of Actions.—Actions against telegraph companies to recover damages for mental suffering caused by error or delay in the transmission or delivery of messages are "actions for injuries to the person" within the meaning of the statutes of limitation.⁵

b. DOCTRINE DENIED.—The rule more consistent with recognized principles and supported by the weight of authority is that mental suffering alone, unaccompanied with other loss or injury, will not sustain an action and cannot be considered as an element of damage. Anxiety of mind and mental torture are too refined and too vague in their nature to be a proper subject for pecuniary compensation in damages except where, as in cases of physical injury, they are so inseparably connected with the physical pain that they can not be distinguished from it.⁶

c. RULE DECLARED BY STATUTE.—In South Carolina, the rule formerly prevailing that damages for mental anguish were not recoverable¹ has been changed by a statute which expressly provides that all telegraph companies doing business within the state shall be liable in damages for mental anguish, even in the absence of bodily injury, for negligence in receiving, transmitting, or delivering messages.² The statute has been held to be constitutional.³

d. CONFLICT OF LAWS.—The fact that damages for mental anguish alone are not recoverable under the laws of the state from which the message was sent will not preclude a recovery of such damages in the state to which the message was directed where the laws of the latter state permit such recovery.⁴ Likewise, a recovery for such damages may be had in the state whence the message was sent, although they may not be recoverable under the laws of the state where the message was to be delivered.⁵ But when the law of the place whence the message was sent and that of the place of delivery both refuse to recognize such damages, they cannot be recovered, although the action may have been brought in a jurisdiction which recognizes the right to recover them.⁶

The Rule in the Federal Courts is that damages cannot be recovered for mental suffering alone. The question is one with respect to which such courts exercise an independent judgment, and are not bound by the holding of the courts of the state in which the case arises.⁷ This is true, although the rule

In Mississippi, a Modification of the Original Doctrine has been adopted to the effect that where the evidence shows a wilful wrong on the part of the telegraph company or its agent, or

e. MENTAL ANGUISH INDUCING SICKNESS AND PHYSICAL PAIN.—Except in those jurisdictions which recognize the "mental anguish doctrine," the negligence of a telegraph company with respect to a message will not authorize a recovery of damages, even though the mental suffering thereby caused may have induced sickness and physical pain.²

f. MESSAGES SUMMONING A PHYSICIAN.—These differ from the messages ordinarily involved in mental anguish cases, in that the failure of the telegraph company to transmit or deliver such messages may entail physical as well as mental suffering; they are governed by the long-recognized rule that when the physical and mental suffering are so inseparably connected as that the one is not distinguishable from the other, both are to be considered in estimating the damages.³ But there can be no recovery for such results as would not naturally be expected to follow the absence of a physician or which are mere remote consequences of his absence.⁴

8. Exemplary or Punitive Damages.—A telegraph company is responsible for the wilful and malicious acts of its agents done within the scope of their employment,⁵ and is liable for exemplary damages where the injury to the complaining party is due to the wilful or malicious conduct of its agent,⁶ or where his negligence has been of so culpable a character as that the law conclusively presumes a wilful wrong.⁷ But there can be no recovery of such damages where the proof shows nothing more than a mere want of ordinary care on the part of the company's agent.⁸ Nor are such damages recoverable

Georgia, Code, § 2943, provides that "exemplary damages can never be allowed in cases arising on contract." Under this, no damages of any kind can be recovered where no wilful wrong on the part of the company or its agent except when there is proof of actual damage to the plaintiff.¹

What Constitutes Gross Negligence, such as will justify an award of exemplary damages, must depend upon the circumstances of each particular case and is usually a question for the jury where there is evidence tending to show such negligence.²

9. Excessive Damages.—The general rule that when the plaintiff is entitled to recover, the verdict of the jury assessing the damages will not be disturbed as being excessive unless the amount is so large as to indicate that it was the result of passion or prejudice,³ applies to actions against telegraph companies.⁴ Occasion has rarely arisen for the invocation of the rule in such actions⁵ except in the class of cases where damages are sought for mental suffering. What constitutes an excessive allowance must, of course, depend upon the peculiar circumstances of each particular case, and the determination of the question must rest within the sound discretion of the court.⁶

10. Nominal Damages.—The cost of sending the message, if it has been paid, is always recoverable, though no substantial damages are proven, provided a breach of the company's duty is shown, but not otherwise.¹

XIII. STATUTORY PENALTIES—1. Object and Purposes of Statutes.—To secure the easier and more complete enforcement of the recognized obligations of telegraph companies as to the transmission and delivery of messages, particularly in cases in which, from their nature, substantial damages are not recoverable, statutes have been enacted in a number of the states providing for the recovery of a fixed money penalty from the company for every negligent failure to discharge its duties.² The duty designed to be enforced by these statutes is threefold: first, to transmit messages tendered for that purpose with the charges established by the rules of the company; second, to receive and transmit such messages with impartiality as to the order of transmission; and third, to transmit and deliver such messages in good faith and with due diligence.³

2. Construction of Statutes—a. IN GENERAL.—Such statutes are penal and therefore are to be construed strictly, but not with such strictness as to defeat the manifest purpose of the legislature in enacting them.⁴ Thus if the statute evidently contemplates, though it does not expressly indicate, only written messages, the penalty cannot be recovered where the proof shows that the message was an oral one.⁵

Missouri.—Rev. Stat. Mo., § 885, imposes a penalty for the giving of false information as to the time within which a dispatch may be sent. On an application to send a message, made on Sunday, on which day telegraph companies are prohibited from transmitting messages, the company does not incur the penalty by giving false information that the message can be sent on that day. Thompson v. Western Union Tel. Co., 32 Mo. App. 191.

Virginia.—By the Virginia code, § 1292, a telegraph company, on the arrival of a message at its destination, must deliver it promptly, where its regulations require such delivery, under a penalty for failure to do so. Under this, there can be no recovery of the penalty unless it appears that the message reached its destination. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Powell, 94 Va. 268.

b. NO EXTRATERRITORIAL EFFECT.—Independently of the constitutional question arising in this connection,¹ such statutes, being penal, are within the general rule that penal statutes have no extraterritorial effect and will not be enforced beyond the territorial jurisdiction of the state enacting them.² But where the specific breach of the statutory duty occurs in such state, the penalty is recoverable even though the message was an interstate message.³

3. Constitutionality of Statutes.—The principal ground of attack upon the constitutionality of such statutes has been their interference with the exclusive power of Congress over interstate commerce.⁴ They are not open to the objection that because they apply only to telegraph companies they deny to such companies the equal protection of the law, since they apply equally to all companies of that class;⁵ nor, in so far as they apply to actions by persons other than the sender, open to the objection that they impair the obligation of the contract of sending by fixing a different liability from that assumed in the contract.⁶

4. Character and Form of Message.—The character of the message is not material, provided it is not immoral, libelous, or fraudulent, and the penalty is recoverable though the message relates to a transaction in "futures," which is illegal and such as would not support an action for damages against the company.⁷ Nor is the form of the message material, as where it is in cipher, if the ground of complaint is that the company, after accepting it for transmission, failed to send it at all.⁸ But the fact that the message was not on one of the company's regular blanks will justify the operator in declining to accept it for transmission and such declination will not justify a recovery of the penalty.¹ And the fact that the message was written on a piece of memorandum paper and handed to the operator by the sender's servant in such a casual way as not to indicate that it was a message for transmission, will be a good defense to an action under the statute.²

5. Proof of Breach of Duty.—A breach of the company's duty must be established in order to recover the penalty,³ but this may be done by the same proof which is sufficient in actions for damages.⁴ It has been held in some cases that the plaintiff must prove something more than mere negligence on the part of the company, and show that it acted wilfully or in bad faith;⁵ but this requirement is confined to particular instances, as when the wrong consisted in unduly postponing the plaintiff's message in favor of some other, or in declining to receive it, and does not apply where there is a breach of the ordinary duty to transmit and deliver; in this latter class of cases proof of the mere negligence of the company is sufficient.⁶

Failure or Refusal to Transmit.—A "refusal to transmit," for which the statute provides a penalty, is not shown by proof merely of a refusal to deliver after the message has been transmitted.⁷ Nor is such a refusal shown so as to justify a recovery of the penalty where it appears that the company made a bona fide effort to transmit the message and acted with impartiality, although the message was lost, and this, no matter how culpable may have been the conduct of the company by reason of which the loss occurred.⁸ Where the statute provides a penalty for failure or refusal to "transmit," proof merely of an erroneous transmission will not sustain a recovery of the penalty,⁹ nor

Under the former Arkansas statute (Gantt's Ark. Co. v. Davis*, 41 Ark. 79.

9. Erroneous Transmission.—Wilkins v. Western Union Tel. Co., 68 Miss. 6. This case was decided under the Miss. Act of 1886. The Code of 1892 expressly embraces errors in transmission.

A verdict for the plaintiff will not be disturbed where there is evidence to support it, although the testimony is conflicting as to will proof of a mere delay in transmission justify a recovery under a provision imposing a penalty for incorrect transmission.¹

6. Proof of Actual Damage Unnecessary.—The statutes are not to be construed as awarding liquidated damages² for a failure to discharge the duty enjoined, but as imposing a penalty by way of punishment. The plaintiff is not bound, therefore, to prove any general or special damage in order to recover the penalty,³ nor does his suit for or recovery of the penalty affect his right to recover substantial damages sustained by him in consequence of the company's breach of duty.⁴ In some jurisdictions the claim for damages and that for the penalty may be asserted in one suit.⁵

Where the Error in Transmission Is Harmless and is due to a mere inadvertence, the penalty is not recoverable.⁶

7. Where There Are Connecting Lines.—These statutes extend to cases where the refusal to transmit is on the part of a connecting line to which the initial line has tendered a message for further transmission,⁷ but in such a case the initial line which tenders the message,⁸ and not the original sender, must be the plaintiff; the latter can not maintain the suit for the penalty.⁹

8. Defenses to Actions for Penalty—a. IN GENERAL.—Upon the issue of the negligence or default of the company, the same defenses are available to the company in such actions as in ordinary actions for damages. The company may show, where the charge is a failure to deliver, that the addressee did not live within the free delivery limits of the locality to which the message is sent.¹⁰ Where the charge is a failure to transmit promptly, the company may show that the delay was due to the arrangement of its office hours reasonably established by it,¹¹ or that the delay was caused by a derangement whether the delay was in the transmission or in the delivery after transmission. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Pallotta, 81 Miss. 216.

of its lines due to an unavoidable casualty and that the message was sent within a reasonable time after the difficulty was removed.¹ It may also be shown, by way of defense generally, that the plaintiff has not brought his case within the operation of the statute under which he claims,² or that the failure to deliver was due to the contributory negligence of the sender.³

b. EFFECT OF STIPULATIONS.—Where the language of the stipulation makes it applicable to actions for penalties, it is as effective in such actions as in actions to recover damages.⁴ A stipulation requiring "all claims for damages" to be presented within sixty days embraces a claim for the penalty, though there is some controversy on the point.⁵

c. ACCORD AND SATISFACTION.—Since the penalty is not an award of liquidated damages, the fact that the telegraph company voluntarily tendered or paid to the plaintiff the price paid for transmission and such damages as he sustained by reason of its error or delay does not affect his right to recover the penalty unless it appears also that he accepted such payment in full settlement of all his claims and by way of accord and satisfaction.⁶

d. PREPAYMENT OF CHARGES.—Where the statute, in terms, is applicable only when the charges for transmission were paid, no recovery of the penalty can be had in the absence of proof of the payment of such charges.⁷

9. Effect of Repeal of Statute.—There is no vested right in a penalty although liability therefor has accrued; an action to recover it cannot be maintained after the act providing for it has been repealed, although the penalty

In Georgia, the stipulation requiring the claim, whether for damages or for the penalty, to be presented, in writing, within sixty days is held void as to the claim for the penalty as being contrary to the policy of the statute, though it is valid as to the claim for damages. *Mattis v. 5. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Jones, 95 Ind. 228, 48 Am. Rep. 713. In this case it was observed that the word "claims" is one of very extensive significance, embracing every species of legal demand; that the word "damages" means that which is to be assessed in plaintiff's favor as the amount of his recovery; and that the penalty is, in this sense, "damages," it being a recovery in which the individual alone, and not the public, is interested. The correctness of this holding was denied in Western Union Tel. Co. v. Cobbs, 47 Ark. 344, 58 Am. Rep. 756. See also Western Union Tel. Co. v. James, 90 Ga. 254.

Under the Georgia statute there can be no recovery unless the charges were actually prepaid. If the message was sent without charge because of the sender's connection with the company or for other reason, the penalty is not recoverable although the message was marked "prepaid." Western Union Tel. Co. v. Ryels, 94 Ga. 336.

Where the sender tenders the amount of the charges and then withdraws it, observing that the addressee ought to pay it, the tender amounts to nothing and the penalty is not recoverable. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Power, 93 Ga. 543.

If the message is paid for, the fact that the operator returns the money to the person paying and substitutes a free or a "collect" message for the prepaid one, without the sender's knowledge, will not relieve the company of liability. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Moss, 93 Ga. 494.

was incurred before the repeal, unless the repealing act contains a clause saving the right to recover penalties already incurred.¹

XIV. TELEGRAMS IN EVIDENCE — 1. Admissibility in General. — Ordinarily the general rules of law relative to the admission of letters in evidence apply to telegrams,² with the exception that while the rule which permits a letter to be admitted in evidence against a party without proof of the handwriting further than that it had been received in due course in reply to a letter which had been addressed to the same party will apply to a dispatch sent in answer to a communication by letter, it is not applicable to a dispatch sent in reply to a communication by telegraph.³

Authenticity Must Be Shown. — A telegram is not admissible as evidence in the absence of proof of its authenticity, either by proof of the handwriting of the sender when the original message is offered, or by other evidence of its genuineness.⁴

Effect to Be Given Them. — Telegrams which are shown to have been delivered for transmission are admissible as declarations of the sender when proven to have been signed by him, or by some one for him,⁵ and dispatches in the form in which they are received by the party to whom they are sent are evidence of the communication between the parties,⁶ and also of the information upon which the addressee may have acted, where his good faith or his intentions are in question,⁷ provided it is shown that he read and acted upon them.⁸

Evidence that a telegram was sent by the defendant to the drawee of an order which he had given to plaintiff, directing the drawee to withhold a part of the amount specified and to pay the remainder, is competent as tending to show an admission by the defendant of indebtedness, at least to the extent of the amount of such remainder. *Griggs v. 7. As showing Information on which a plaintiff acted in suing out an attachment, telegrams sent to him and delivered by telephone, and reduced to writing by the person receiving them and acted upon in that form by such plaintiff, are admissible. It is not necessary in such a case that they should be verified by comparing them with the originals on file in the company's office, the question in such a case being not what the original messages contained, but what was contained in them as they reached the plaintiff. Deere v. Bagley, 80 Iowa 197.

8. Proof that Telegram Was Acted On. — J. K. Armsby Co. v. Eckerly, 42 Mo. App. 299.

The General Rules Governing the Admission of Documentary Evidence apply in the case of telegrams as in other cases.¹ As a rule, it must appear that the party who is to be adversely affected by the evidence must have been a party to the message, either as sender or addressee,² but exceptional cases may arise. Thus, in an action for the price of goods sold, a telegram countermanding the order for such goods, though sent to one not a party to the suit, is admissible when it appears that it was intended to be delivered to the sellers and that it actually came into their possession and was replied to by them.³ The reported cases afford other instances of the application of the general rules to this class of cases.⁴

2. Primary and Secondary Evidence.—The principal question arising in this connection is as to what is the primary or best evidence of the communication sent by telegraph. In such communications there are two distinct documents, the one delivered to the telegraph company for transmission and the one delivered by the company, from its receiving office, to the addressee. While the contents of these are so usually identical as to create a presumption that they are the same,⁵ they are not always so, and the presumption is not a conclusive one.

Nature of Inquiry.—When the message is offered as a declaration by the sender, to be used in a criminal proceeding, or as an admission in a civil suit, the message as tendered for transmission is the original and best evidence and its absence must be accounted for before proof is admissible to show its contents.⁶ But the inquiry, where the message relates to a contract between the parties, is as to what message was transmitted and not what was intended or directed to be sent; the general rule therefore is that the message delivered at the destination to the person addressed is the original and is the best evidence of the communication between the parties,⁷ and may be introduced as evi-

4. Particular Instances.—In an action for a conspiracy, telegrams from the wife of one of the defendants, being neither written nor sent by either of them, are not admissible as evidence against them, nor can they, as declarations of the wife, affect her husband. Benford v. Sanner, 40 Pa. St. 9, 80 Am. Dec. 545.

In the trial of a person charged with stealing horses, a telegram sent by him in which he offered to sell horses, taken in connection with other circumstances, is competent as evidence tending to show his preparations for flight. *State v. dence without any accounting for the message tendered to the company.¹ An exception to this rule will prevail where the company acts as the agent of the addressee by reason of his having been the party suggesting the telegraph as the means of communication.²

Where the Action Is Against the Telegraph Company for Error in Transmission the inquiry is, necessarily, as to the contents of both messages, and in such case each message is the original evidence of its own contents.³ If the action is based merely on a delay in delivery, the message delivered to the addressee is admissible without proof of the original tendered to the company,⁴ particularly where there is no claim that the former was different from the latter.⁵

Secondary Evidence of the Contents of a Telegram, by the testimony of witnesses or a letterpress or other copy, is admissible only after proof that the original telegram has been lost or destroyed,⁶ or that it is beyond the jurisdiction of the court.⁷ But where it is not shown that the message was ever reduced to writing, either at the sending or receiving office, there is no ground for excluding parol evidence as to its contents.⁸

Sufficiency of Proof of Loss or of Contents of Message. — What constitutes sufficient proof of the loss or destruction of the original telegram and of proper effort, on the part of the party offering the secondary evidence, to secure the original must depend upon circumstances and, like other matters of proof, varies with particular cases.⁹ The testimony of the company's employees at the office where the original was received that it could not be found and that under the rules of the company all messages, after being kept for six months, are sent to the home office to be destroyed is competent to show the impossibility of producing the original,¹⁰ though it is not competent for the manager of the sending office to testify, from information, that the messages filed with him for transmission had been destroyed by the officials at the head office.¹¹ The testimony of an addressee as to the contents of a message is not admissible in the absence of proof of the loss of the message itself but the admission of such testimony is harmless where the sender, who is a party to the action, admits the sending of the message and the contents as alleged in the pleadings.¹

Necessity of Notice to Produce. — It has been held that, in an action against a telegraph company for negligence with respect to a message, the plaintiff may not introduce secondary evidence of the contents of the message unless notice to produce the original has been first given to the company.² The better rule, however, is that in such case the company, from the nature of the suit, is charged with notice that, having possession of the original, it will be expected to produce it, and plaintiff may therefore introduce secondary evidence without having given a formal notice to produce.³

3. Presumption Arising from Sending of Message. — The presumption that letters duly posted reach their addressees in due course applies equally to telegrams which are shown to have been accepted by the telegraph company for transmission;⁴ and the receipt of a message over the wires at the point of destination creates a presumption that the message is from the office from which it purports to come.⁵ But the fact that a dispatch was forwarded to a person at a particular place and that an answer purporting to be from him was received in due course is not evidence that the person in question was at that place at that particular time.⁶

4. Telegrams as Privileged Communications. — They are not privileged and their production in evidence, by the telegraph company, may be compelled.⁷

The Disclosure of the Contents of Telegrams by the Company is prohibited by statute in a number of the states, and the company is made liable in damages for any failure to observe the prohibition.⁸

5. Notice by Telegram. — A notice by telegram is a sufficient compliance with a rule or statute requiring written notice.⁹

XV. TELEPHONIC COMMUNICATIONS AS EVIDENCE. — Conversations conducted through the medium of a telephone do not differ in their essential characteristics from other verbal communications; their admissibility and effect as evidence are therefore governed by the same general legal principles which apply in case of ordinary oral declarations. The instrument merely enables the parties to carry on their conversation at greater distances than under ordinary circumstances.¹ There may be cases, however, in which the fact that the voice was not recognized and that neither party is absolutely sure of the identity of the person conversing with him, may necessitate a modification of the general rules.²

A Notice by Telephone Is a Verbal One and therefore insufficient under a statute requiring a notice to be in writing.³

Where the Parties Converse Through the Medium of an Operator in the employ of the telephone company, he is to be deemed the agent of the party who invokes his aid and is competent to prove the message or conversation by his principal.⁴

XVI. CONTRACTS BY TELEGRAPH — 1. In General. — Communication by telegraph does not differ essentially from correspondence through the mails, and contracts may be made by it as well as by letter.⁵ Such contracts are governed

2. Failure to Recognize Voice of Speaker. — The fact that the witness, who testifies to a conversation between himself and another, did not recognize the other's voice does not affect the admissibility of his evidence but only its weight. Wolfe v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 97 Mo. 473, 10 Am. St. Rep. 331; Globe Printing Co. v. Stahl, 23 Mo. App. 451.

by the same general rules applicable to contracts made by letter.¹ The fact that the message, unlike a letter, is liable to become materially changed in the process of transmission through negligence on the part of the telegraph company or through other causes, introduces no element of difference; the message as delivered to the addressee is the real message and the sender must look to the company for any damages he may sustain in consequence of an alteration in transmission.² Nor does the fact that the telegraph, unlike the postal service, is a private institution, owned and operated by private individuals or corporations, create any distinction in the effect of correspondence conducted through them.³

Within the Meaning of the Statute of Frauds, the written message offered for transmission is a sufficient writing to constitute a memorandum so as to bind the parties,⁴ and it seems that the same would be true of a message dictated by the sender and written out by the operator at the receiving station.⁵

Such Contracts Take Effect as in the case of contracts by correspondence; the agreement becomes complete when the party to whom the offer was made delivers his acceptance to the telegraph company for transmission,⁶ and a revocation of an offer can have no effect unless communicated to the addressee before his acceptance.⁷

The decided cases are numerous in which telegrams alone and telegrams supplemented by letters were insufficient to constitute a contract binding between the parties. agent of the party sending the message.¹ The effect of this rule is to make the telegram as delivered to the addressee original evidence of the communication, as between the sender and the addressee,² and to make the sender bound by the terms of the message as delivered to the addressee, however much it may have become changed in the process of transmission.³

An Exception to the Rule Exists, however, in the case of a continued telegraphic correspondence; in such case, the company is regarded as the agent of the party who first makes it the medium of communication.⁴ An exception is also made in cases where the sender, in using the telegraph, does so at the request or suggestion of the addressee.⁵

In England and a Few of the States, a different rule prevails and the sender is not bound by the terms of a message incorrectly transmitted, even though the addressee may have incurred trouble and expense in acting on the faith of the message as delivered to him.⁶ The telegraph company is regarded as an independent contractor, liable to either party who is injured through its negligent transmission of a message.⁷

XVII. DISTRICT TELEGRAPH COMPANIES.—Companies of this kind exist in all cities; their business is principally, if not exclusively, the furnishing of messenger boys to perform such services as delivering or calling for messages or parcels or attending to other similar matters. Such companies are subject

In view of the English rule that an addressee is not entitled to maintain an action against a telegraph company for error in transmission, it would seem that the rule making him assume the risk of the message having been correctly transmitted might work a serious hardship in many cases. See 21 ENCYC. OF PL. AND PR. 509. In Western Union Tel. Co. v. Shotter, 71 Ga. 760, the rule prevailing in England is accounted for by the fact that the telegraph is a part of the government service. Compare Bundy v. Johnson, 6 U. C. C. P. 221.

In Germain Fruit Co. v. Western Union Tel. Co., 137 Cal. 598, the plaintiff wired C. offering Riverside oranges at $2.60 per box, but the message as delivered read "$1.60." The former was the market price then prevailing and C. knew, from this and from the character of the fruit, that the message was intended to read $2.60. He ordered the goods: plaintiff furnished them at $1.60 and sued the telegraph company for the difference. It was held that the contract of sale was invalid because of C.'s fraud and that the company could set that up as a complete defense. See also Postal Tel. Cable Co. v. Akron Cereal Co., 22 Ohio Cir. Ct. 516.

to the same general duties as telegraph companies and to the same rules of liability, except in so far as both may be affected by the difference in the nature of their business in particular cases.¹

XVIII. COMPANIES FURNISHING "TICKERS." — In some instances telegraph companies are organized for the express purpose of collecting and distributing market reports and other news. Such companies have the same general powers and are subject to the same measure of liability as ordinary telegraph companies, the difference between the two being merely in the method of doing business.² Such companies may make and enforce regulations as to the use of their instruments, commonly called "tickers" or "stock indicators," by subscribers, and require that they shall not allow nonsubscribers to use them or to have copies of the reports furnished subscribers.³

They Cannot Make Unjust Discriminations; they are of a public character and must serve all alike, and may be enjoined from refusing to continue the service to a subscriber who has observed their reasonable rules and regulations.⁴ But they may lawfully refuse to furnish their instruments or reports to a gambling place, even though they may have contracted to do so, since they cannot be under an obligation to forward an illegal undertaking.⁵

They Cannot Enforce an Unreasonable Stipulation in their contracts with subscribers. A stipulation in such a contract that the company shall have the right to discontinue the service to any subscriber, without notice, whenever, in its judgment, he has violated the contract is unreasonable as making the company the sole judge in its own cause, and will not be enforced.⁶

1. District Telegraph Companies. — Such a company is liable for the loss of a package caused by one of its messengers delivering it contrary to the instructions of the sender. Felber v. Manhattan Dist. Tel. Co., (C. Pl. Gen. T.) 22 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 121.

Authority to a telegraph company to occupy city streets with its poles and wires does not authorize it to construct and operate a district telegraph system. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Toledo, 103 Fed. Rep. 746. See also Western Union Tel. Co. v. Toledo, (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. Rep. 734.

In American Dist. Tel. Co. v. Walker, 72 Md. 454, 20 Am. St. Rep. 479, 35 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 91, the plaintiffs had hired a buggy and horses and, on returning, stopped at the office of the defendant company and asked for a boy who could drive the horses back to the livery stable. A boy was sent out who took charge of the horses, but owing to his negligence and incompetency, the horses ran away and injured themselves and the vehicle. It was held that the company was liable for the damages thus caused and that plaintiffs might maintain the action therefor, although they were merely bailees for hire.

2. See supra, this title, Company Acting under Contract to Furnish Market Reports and Other News.

3. In Shepard v. Gold Stock, etc., Tel. Co., 38 Hun (N. Y.) 338, the subscriber's contract with the company provided that "these reports are furnished to subscribers for their own private use in their own business exclusively. It is stipulated that subscribers will not sell or give up copies of the reports in whole or in part, nor permit any outside party to copy them for use or publication. Under this rule subscriptions by one party for the benefit of himself and others at their joint expense will not be received." It was held that this stipulation was reasonable, and that the subscriber violated it by furnishing copies to another firm, although he was a member of such firm, and that the company was justified in removing the instrument for such violation.

4. Public Character of Ticker Companies. — Friedman v. Gold, etc., Tel. Co., 34 Hun (N. Y.) 4; Smith v. Gold, etc., Tel. Co., 42 Hun (N. Y.) 454; Metropolitan Grain, etc., Exch. v. Mutual Union Tel. Co., 11 Biss. (U. S.) 531; Bradley v. Western Union Tel. Co., 27 Alb. L. J. 363.

5. Smith v. Western Union Tel. Co., 84 Ky. 664, 16 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 231 ("bucket shop" case). Compare Gray v. Western Union Tel. Co., 87 Ga. 350, 27 Am. St. Rep. 259.

Complainants being in the business of gambling, equity will not compel the company to furnish them with a "ticker" giving quotations of prices ruling in the Chicago board of trade, even though they are members of that board. Bryant v. Western Union Tel. Co., 17 Fed. Rep. 825.

Where the Telegraph Company Is Merely an Agent for Transmission under a contract with an exchange under which it is to transmit market quotations to such persons as the exchange may direct, and to no other, the rule of the text has no application, the exchange being regarded as a sender, with the right to name its addressees, and under no duty to furnish its quotations to the public. Statutes declaratory of the rule will not affect the case, being no more applicable than the rule itself. Matter of Reuville, 46 N. Y. App. Div. 37. See also Christie Grain, etc., Co. v. Board of Trade, 125 Fed. Rep. 161, reversing 121 Fed. Rep. 608.

6. Stipulation Must Be Reasonable. — Smith v. Gold Stock, etc., Tel. Co., 42 Hun (N. Y.) 454.

TELEGRAPHS AND TELPHONES—TEMPORAL ESTATE.

Protection Against Unfair Competition.—While the market quotations and similar news gathered by such companies and disseminated among their patrons are not within the protection of the copyright laws, they constitute property, and the company will be protected in equity against rival companies which seek to appropriate such property and sell it to their customers to the injury or detriment of the service.¹

TELEGRAPHY. See note 2.

TELEPHONE EXCHANGE. (See also the title TELEGRAPHS AND TELPHONES, ante, p. 998.)—"A telephone exchange is an arrangement for putting up and maintaining wires, poles, and switchboards within a given area, with a central office, and the necessary operators to enable the individual hirers of telephones within that area to converse with each other."²

TELLER. (See also the titles BANKS AND BANKING, vol. 3, p. 787; NATIONAL BANKS, vol. 21, p. 319; OFFICERS AND AGENTS OF PRIVATE CORPORATIONS, vol. 21, p. 833; SAVINGS BANKS, vol. 24, p. 1240.)—The office of a teller is implied in the word used to designate it—to tell or count the moneys of the bank which are received or paid out. The office is often divided into two branches, receiving teller and paying teller, where the business of the bank is large and the duties cannot conveniently be united in one person.³

TEMPER.—See note 5.

TEMPERATE—TEMPERANCE. (See also MODERATE, vol. 20, p. 836.)—The word "temperance" has no fixed legal meaning as contradistinguished from its usual import. Webster defines it as "habitual moderation in regard to the indulgence of the natural appetites and passions; restrained or moderate indulgence; moderation; as, temperance in eating and drinking, temperance in the indulgence of joy and mirth."⁴

TEMPEST.—An extensive current of wind rushing with great velocity and violence; a storm of extreme violence.⁵

4. Teller.—Mussey v. Eagle Bank, 9 Met. (Mass.) 311, in which case also a summary of the duties, liabilities, etc., of a teller is given.

5. Temper and Courage Distinguished.—See Gardner v. State, 40 Tex. Crim. 19, decided under the Texas statute defining "adequate cause" in manslaughter. See also ADEQUATE, vol. 1, p. 632, and the title MURDER AND MANSLAUGHTER, vol. 21, p. 177 et seq.

6. Temperance—Charity. (See generally the title CHARITIES AND TRUSTS FOR CHARITABLE USES, vol. 5, p. 893.)—People v. Dashaway Assoc., 84 Cal. 123, in which case it was held that the term was too vague and uncertain to establish a public charity.

But in Harrington v. Pier, 105 Wis. 485, it was held that the promotion of temperance work in a certain city was a proper subject for a charitable trust, and that a bequest for such a purpose was not fatally indefinite where the term "temperance work" was obviously intended to mean work to prevent, as far as practicable, the use of intoxicating liquors.

Life Insurance.—See the titles ALCOHOLISM, INTemperance, and NARCOTICS (IN INSURANCE), vol. 2, p. 40 et seq.; LIFE INSURANCE, vol. 19, p. 67; and see MODERATE, vol. 20, p. 836.

"Temperance Saloon" is "a common designation for places where nonintoxicating drinks and other refreshments are kept for sale." Clinton v. Grusendorf, 80 Iowa 120.

7. Tempest.—Thistle v. Union Forwarding, etc., Co., 29 U. C. C. F. 76, holding that damage done by the action of ice at the time of unusually high water, but in ordinary wind and weather, was not the result of a tempest within the meaning of a covenant to repair.

8. Temporal Estate. (See also the title WILLS.)—In Tanner v. Wise, 3 F. Wma. 294, it was held that the words temporal estate in a will signified the same as "worldly estate," or all that a man has in the world, and consequently passed both real and personal property. See also Grayson v. Atkinson, 1 Wils. C. Pl. 333; Beall v. Holmes, 6 Har. & J. (Md.) 211; Goodrich v. Harding, 3 Rand. (Va.) 280.

TENANCY. (See also the titles ESTATES, vol. 11, p. 364; LANDLORD AND TENANT, vol. 18, p. 149; LEASES, vol. 18, p. 593.) — A tenancy exists where one has let property to another.⁴

1. Temporalities—Church. — In St. Patrick's Roman Catholic Church v. Abst, 76 Ill. 253, it was said: "Hiring a sexton to perform the duties incident to such an office has nothing to do with the management of 'the temporalities' of the church. They are understood to be the revenues, lands, and tenements, to be managed according to the charter and the by-laws; in other words, secular possessions with which a church may be endowed."

2. Temporary. — Moore v. Smead, 89 Wis. 567.

Indefinite Time. — In Slack v. Jacob, 8 W. Va. 650, it was said: "It will be observed that nearly all [of the definitions] * * * clearly indicate an undefined period of time. If a physician says 'the patient has obtained temporary relief,' he means that the patient has obtained such relief for an undefined time, which may be determined by a future uncertain contingency. So when a general speaks of a 'temporary cessation of hostilities,' though in some cases the time may be prescribed, in others it is often indefinite. These definitions and examples of the word temporary, and its use, correspond with our common understanding of the subject."

Permanent and Temporary Distinguished. — In Pickens v. Coal River Boom, etc., Co., 51 W. Va. 450, it was said: "A permanent structure is one that is to continue for all time, except for some unforeseen event, while a temporary structure is one erected for a known temporary and limited business."

Temporary Building. — In Bates v. Holbrook, 171 N. Y. 468, it was held that a building erected in the street by contractors for a subway, for the purpose of storing tools and materials while work on the subway was carried forward, which work was not expected to be completed for three or more years, was not a temporary building.

Temporary Insanity. — See Evers v. State, 31 Tex. Crim. 318. And see the title INSANITY, vol. 16, p. 558; MEDICAL JURISPRUDENCE, vol. 20, p. 548.

Temporary Removal. — "The words 'temporary removal' manifestly mean a removal for a fixed and temporary purpose, or for a temporary reason." Moore v. Smead, 89 Wis. 567. See also Phillips v. Root, 68 Wis. 128; Jarvais v. Moe, 38 Wis. 440; Herrick v. Graves, 16 Wis. 157.

Temporarily. — Power in the authorities of a city to close liquor shops temporarily will not authorize the closing of such shops "until further notice." State v. Strauss, 49 Md. 288.

3. Temptation. — "Temptation is that which tempts to evil—an evil inducement or allurement." Hall v. State, 134 Ala. 119, quoting Suther v. State, 118 Ala. 93. See generally the title SEDUCTION, vol. 25, pp. 191, 227.

4. Tenancy. — Morrill v. Mackman, 24 Mich. 284.

General Tenancy. — See GENERAL, vol. 14, p. 950, note.

Tenancy of Present Occupants—Title-Insurance Policy. (See also the title TITLE INSURANCE.) — It has been held that the phrase "tenancy of the present occupants," stated in a title-insurance policy as a defect in or objection to the title against which the insurer does not insure, must be construed as meaning the tenancy which arises through the occupation or temporary possession of the premises by those who are tenants in the popular sense in which the word "tenant" is used. The phrase does not include the claim of a person who, asserting ownership in fee as against the title insured, is in actual adverse possession at the time when the policy is issued. Place v. St. Paul Title Ins., etc., Co., 67 Minn. 126.

TENANCY, JOINT.—See the titles JOINT TENANTS AND TENANTS IN COMMON, vol. 17, p. 646.

TENANT. (See also the title LANDLORD AND TENANT, vol. 18, p. 149.)—A tenant is one who holds or possesses lands or tenements by any kind of title, either in fee, for life, for years, or at will.¹ In the popular sense, he is one who has the temporary use and occupation of lands or tenements which belong to another, the duration and other terms of whose occupation are usually defined by an agreement called a lease, while the parties thereto are placed in the relation of landlord and tenant.²

1. Tenant.—Harris v. Reynolds, 13 Cal. 514, 73 Am. Dec. 600; Walker v. McCasker, 71 Cal. 597; Powers v. Ingraham, 3 Barb. (N. Y.) 576; Clift v. White, 12 N. Y. 527; Hosford v. Ballard, 39 N. Y. 151; Fuchs v. Cohen, (C. Pl. Gen. T.) 29 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 56, 22 Civ. Pro. (N. Y.) 269; Woolsey v. State, 30 Tex. App. 347.

The word tenants means holders, from the word teneo, to hold. Stevens v. Enders, 13 N. J. L. 280, per Ford, J.

Occupancy Not Necessary to Relation.—Rex v. Ditchcat, 9 B. & C. 183, 17 E. C. L. 355, per Littledale, J.

So it has been held that the word tenant as used in the California "Van Ness ordinance" applies to any party who holds the actual possession in subordination to another party under or by virtue of an agreement, either express or implied. Irvine v. Adler, 44 Cal. 559, disapproving contrary dictum in Brooks v. Hyde, 37 Cal. 366.

Debtor for Rent.—Where, by statute, distress for rent might be levied "on any property belonging to the said tenant," it was held that the term tenant must be understood in its technical sense, not as including all debtors for rent; and that on the termination of the relation of landlord and tenant the right to distress was lost. Hale v. Burton, Dudley (Ga.) 106. And see the title DISTRESS, vol. 9, p. 625.

2. Popular Sense.—Woolsey v. State, 30 Tex. App. 347. And see the title LANDLORD AND TENANT, vol. 18, pp. 163, 164.

Lodger Not Tenant.—White v. Maynard, 111 Mass. 253, 15 Am. Rep. 28. See also LODGE—LODGER—LODGING, vol. 19, p. 520, note.

Tenant in Possession.—As used in a statute providing that notice in ejectment must be served upon the "tenant in possession," it was held that the term "tenant in possession" did not include a soldier of the United States claiming to be in charge, under superior officers, of real property of the United States. People v. Ambrecht, (Supm. Ct.) 11 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 101.

Same—Judgment Debtor.—Under the California statute providing that the purchaser of real property at a sheriff's sale is entitled until redemption to receive "from the tenant in possession" the rents of the property, it was held that a judgment debtor occupying the land was a tenant in possession. Harris v. Reynolds, 13 Cal. 517, 73 Am. Dec. 600. To the

Executors and Administrators of Tenant.—See Gough v. Gough, (1891) 2 Q. B. 674.

Forcible Entry and Detainer.—Where a statute required that in forcible entry and detainer the petition should describe the premises and the interest therein of the petitioner, it was held that a recital merely that the petitioner was "the tenant of the premises pursuant to an agreement with the landlord" was not a description of the interest of the petitioner, and was insufficient. Fuchs v. Cohen, (C. Pl. Gen. T.) 29 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 56, 22 Civ. Pro. (N. Y.) 269.

New Tenant—Boothouse Keeper.—See Reg. v. Powell, (1891) 1 Q. B. 718.

Proprietor.—Under a Virginia statute providing that on an inquest of damages summonses are to be issued to the several proprietors or tenants of the lands found liable to damage, it was held that "the terms 'proprietors' and tenants were intended to designate the same interest, a possession as visible owner or tenant." Pitzer v. Williams, 2 Rob. (Va.) 253.

Subtenants.—The assignee of a lessee, or a sublessee, is a tenant. Whitfield v. Roe, 3 Taunt. 402; Williams v. Bosanquet, 1 Brod. & B. 238, 5 E. C. L. 72; Doe v. Byron, 1 C. B. 623, 50 E. C. L. 623. See also Stokes v. Burney, 3 Tex. Civ. App. 219, and see the title LANDLORD AND TENANT, vol. 18, p. 163, note.

Same—Arson.—Woolsey v. State, 30 Tex. App. 347, holding that there was no variance where an indictment alleged that a building was occupied by the defendant and another as tenants, but the proof showed that the defendant rented of the owner and sublet to the other.

Same—Distress.—In Coles v. Marquand, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 449, it was held that the word tenant in a statute providing that "any goods or chattels of the tenant which shall be carried off from any demised premises" might within a certain time be distrained, did not include an under tenant of the original lessee, or one who was still further removed from the chief landlord.

Same—English Parliamentary Franchise Act.—To occupy "as tenant," within the English statute conferring the parliamentary franchise, involves the idea of some permanent occupation and independent interest, and "excludes some occupations of less independence, such as occupations of servants for their service;

TENANTABLE REPAIR. — See the title LANDLORD AND TENANT, vol. 18, p. 251, and see REPAIR, vol. 23, p. 470.

TENANT IN DOWER. — See the title DOWER, vol. 10, p. 122.

TENANT IN TAIL. — See the title ESTATES, vol. 11, p. 371.

TENANT'S FIXTURES. (See also the title FIXTURES, vol. 13, p. 639 et seq.) — The term "tenant's fixtures," in its strict legal definition, is to be understood to signify things which are fixed to the freehold of the demised premises, but which nevertheless the tenant is allowed to disannex and take away, provided he seasonably exerts his right to do so.¹

TEND. — To tend means to be directed, as to any end or purpose; to aim; to have or give a leaning; to exert activity or influence; to act as a means; to contribute to.²

for example, porters of the lodge, gardeners of the dwelling in the garden, and also such as that of the surgeon for the hospital of the rooms therein. Dobson v. Jones, 5 M. & G. 112, 44 E. C. L. 68. Also the occupation of premises by objects of charity occupying under the permission of the trustees of the charity. Heartley v. Banks, 5 C. B. N. S. 40, 94 E. C. L. 40, 28 L. J. C. P. 144; Davis v. Waddington, 7 M. & G. 37, 49 E. C. L. 37. Cook v. Humber, 11 C. B. N. S. 33, 103 E. C. L. 33. See also Smith v. Seghill, L. R. 10 Q. B. 422; Hughes v. Chatham, 5 M. & G. 54, 44 E. C. L. 39; Bridgewater v. Durant, 11 C. B. N. S. 7, 103 E. C. L. 7; Fryer v. Bodenham, L. R. 4 C. P. 529, 19 L. T. 645; Durant v. Carter, L. R. 9 C. P. 261; Ford v. Pye, L. R. 9 C. P. 269.

1. Tenant's Fixtures. — Wall v. Hinda, 4 Gray (Mass.) 270, 64 Am. Dec. 64.

2. Tend. — Santee v. State, (Tex. Crim. 1896) 37 S. W. Rep. 437, quoting Wehat Diet. and holding that a charge in a prosecution for receiving stolen goods that the evidence admitted tended to show that the defendant about the time charged in the indictment received the goods in question and that they were stolen was error as suggesting to the jury that the evidence aimed and contributed to establish the fact that the goods in question were stolen.

Tending. — The word tending "in its pri-

Evidence Tending to Prove Issue. — In Davis v. Barney, 2 Gill & J. (Md.) 403, the Court of Appeals of Maryland laid down as a general rule that "where there is any legal admissible evidence tending to prove the issue, the effect of that evidence is solely for the consideration of the jury." In Cole v. Hebb, 7 Gill & J. (Md.) 27, it was held that "the word tending as there used was not designed by the court to be understood in its literal or vulgar sense, as contributing, or having a leaning to, the proof of the issue; but to be understood according to its legal intendment, viz., as so tending to prove the issue that a rational common-sense intellect might draw from it the conclusion to which by its production it was desired to lead the jury."

Tending to Show. — In White v. State, 153 Ind. 691, it was said: "The statement that there has been evidence 'tending to show' a particular fact is equivalent to a statement that evidence has been offered relating to such fact. The force and effect of the evidence is in no sense suggested by the term. How slightly or how strongly the evidence tended, etc., or whether it tended at all to effect a conclusion, is expressly left to the jury."
